THE THIRD COUNCIL.

OCTOBER 1779 TO OCTOBER 1780.

THOMAS CHITTENDEN, Williston, Governor.

BENJAMIN CARPENTER, Guilford, Lieutenant Governor.

Councillors:

JOSEPH BOWKER, Rutland,

MOSES ROBINSON, Bennington,

JONAS FAY, Bennington,

TIMOTHY BROWNSON, Sunderland,

PAUL SPOONER, Hartland,

JEREMIAH CLARK, Shaftsbury,

BENJAMIN EMMONS, Woodstock,

IRA ALLEN, Colchester,

JOHN FASSETT, jr., Arlington,

JOHN THROOP, Pomfret,

SAMUEL FLETCHER, Townshend,

THOMAS CHANDLER, jr., Chester.

JOSEPH FAY, Secretary.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES.¹

JOHN FASSETT, JR., was born in Hardwick, Mass., June 3, 1743, and came to Bennington with his father, deacon and captain John Fassett, in 1761; removed to Arlington in 1777, and to Cambridge in 1784. Few men were more constantly in public service than John Fassett, Jr. He was lieutenant in Warner's first regiment in 1775, and captain in Warner's second in 1776. In 1777 he was one of the commissioners of sequestration, and, with Gov. Chittenden and Matthew Lyon, successful in subduing the tories of Arlington. He was elected representative of Arlington in the General Assembly for 1778 and 1779, and for Cambridge in 1787 and '8, 1790 and '91; though in 1779, 1787 and '8, and 1790 and '91 he was also elected Councillor. He served in each office portions of the time. He was a member of the Council in 1779 and until 1795 with the exception of 1786—fifteen years. He was judge of the superior court from its organization in 1778 until 1786—eight years; and chief judge of Chittenden county court from 1787 until 1794—seven years. The historian of Cambridge, in the Vt. Historical Magazine, records Dr. John Fassett as the first physician who settled in the town, coming from Bennington in 1784 and removing to the west after a residence of about forty years in Cambridge. If this was judge John Fassett, he must have been an octogenarian at the time of his migration.—See Hiland Hall's Early History; Deming's Catalogue; and Vt. Hist. Magazine, Vol. II.

JOHN THROOP of Pomfret first appeared in the records of that town as justice of the peace in 1773, when the town was organized. His first appearance in the Vermont State records was as a delegate in the Convention at Windsor, June, 4 1777. He was a delegate in the Conventions of July and December of that year also. His name appears in the roll of the first Council in Ira Allen's History, Slade's State Papers, and Deming's Catalogue; but it does not appear in the records of the Council, whereas that of Moses Robinson does appear in that, and not in the three lists first named. The historian of Pomfret in Z. Thompson's Gazetteer (1824) states that "the town was first represented, in 1778, by John Throop." His name does appear in the roll of the second General Assembly, October 1778, but that of John Winchester Dana appears in the journal of the first Assembly, March and June sessions, 1778. Judge Throop was councillor from October 1779 to October 1786; a member of the House in 1787-8; judge of probate 1783-'92; judge of the court of confiscation in Oct. 1779; and of the superior court 1778-'80.—See B. H. Hall's Eastern Vermont; Thompson's Gazetteer; Deming's Catalogue; and Legislative Directory.

SAMUEL FLETCHER was born in Grafton, Mass., in 1745; and at seventeen he enlisted and served one year as a soldier in the old French war. On his return he learned the trade of a blacksmith, but removed to Townshend about 1772, and abandoned that trade on marrying a lady who had a fortune ample for that day, a daughter of Col. John Hazeltine, formerly of Upton, Mass., but then of Townshend,—a patriot, and a leading man in the county. At the commencement of the revolutionary war, Mr. Fletcher joined the army and was at the battle of Bunker Hill. In July 1775 the New York Provincial Congress appointed him a lieutenant, but it was found that he was in the continental army at Cambridge as an orderly. In 1776 he returned to Townshend, was elected captain of militia, and in 1777 his entire company volunteered to reinforce the army at Ticonderoga. On that expedition, he with thirteen volunteers attacked a British party of forty men, killed one and took seven prisoners without sustaining any loss to his party. In 1778, having joined his fortunes with the new state of Vermont, he became colonel of a Cumberland county regiment and continued in the military line until he reached and for six years held the highest rank, that of Major General. He was in the battle of Bennington, and served as major in the campaign against Burgoyne until after his surrender.

Townshend was the first town in Cumberland county to send delegates to a Vermont Convention, July 1776—Samuel Fletcher and Josiah Fish being the delegates. They were appointed on the committee “to treat with the inhabitants on the east side of the range of Green Mountains, relative to their associating with this Body;” and the establishment of the state resulted. He was an active member also in the conventions of September and October 1776, and of January 1777 that declared the independence of Vermont; and probably a member of the convention of 1777 which adopted the constitution. He was a member of the first three General Assemblies, and again in 1807; elected Councillor in 1779, and re-elected every year until 1790, and also in 1808 and 1813. He was elected a judge of the superior court in 1782, but refused to serve. From 1788 until 1806 he was sheriff of Windham county, and judge of the county court in 1778, 1783–4, and 1786. He was a member of the Board of War in 1781. He died Sept. 15, 1814. The first person born in Townshend was a daughter to Gen. Fletcher. She married Mr. [probably Ezekiel] Ransom, and was mother of Epaphroditus Ransom, who represented Townshend in the Legislature in 1826–7, married a belle of Montpelier, Miss Almira Cadwell, and removed to Michigan, of which state he became governor. Gen. Fletcher was a man of enterprise, industry, and skill, and a valuable public officer. He was a fine writer, and for a part of his life kept a full and accurate daily record of public events. His papers were entrusted by his will to his son-in-law, Mr. Ransom, but were unfortunately destroyed in the burning of his house. In person Gen. Fletcher was straight, finely proportioned, but inclined to corpulency—in stature measuring about five feet ten inches; eyes blue, complexion light. He was elegant in manners, bland and refined in deportment, and very particular in his dress. Kind to all, he was generous and hospitable. With all other manly qualities, he was a perfect gentleman.—See Thompson’s Gazetteer; Eastern Vermont; and Deming’s Catalogue.

RECORD OF THE GOVERNOR AND COUNCIL

AT THE

SESSION OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY AT MANCHESTER,

OCTOBER 1779.¹

STATE OF VERMONT, Manchester, 14 October 1779.

At a meeting of Governor, Council, and General Assembly convened at Manchester, date above—Present His Excellency, Thomas Chittenden, Esq^r. and the following members of the hon^{ble} Council viz^t :

Joseph Bowker, Esq^r.
Tim^o. Brownson,

Brownson, Moses Robinson, Joseph Bowker, & Ira Allen, Esquires, are appointed to join a Committee of the Lower House, who are to receive, sort, & count the votes of the Freemen of this State and Declare those who are appointed to the several offices of Governor, Deputy Governor, Treasurer, and Councillors or assistants² for the year ensuing.

Pr. order,

JOS. FAY, Sec^y.

² Sec. seventeen of the Frame of Government made the Councillors justices of the peace for the whole state, and when acting in this capacity they were often, perhaps always, styled "assistants." A heading in the act of 1779, regulating fees, recognized this title, thus: "Assistants, or Justices Fees."

³ From the Assembly Journal:

Resolved that the Council be notified that this Assembly are ready to attend Divine Service, which was accordingly done, and a Sermon Preached by the Reverend Mr. [Benajah] Root.

Hon^{ble} Joseph Bowker, Moses Robinson, Jonas Fay, Timothy Brownson, Benjamin Emmons, Paul Spooner, Jeremiah Clark, Sam^l Fletcher, Ira Allen, John Throop, John Fassett Ju^r & Thomas Chandler Ju^r Esquires, Councillors—And Ira Allen Esquire, Treasurer.

On this occasion, of course on taking the oath of office, Governor Chittenden delivered a speech, the original of which was found in the office of the Secretary of State, as follows:

A SPEECH OF HIS EXCELLENCY THOMAS CHITTENDEN, ESQ., 14TH OCTOBER 1779.

Gentlemen of the Council and Assembly:

The honor conferred on me by the freemen of this State, in appointing me their chief magistrate, demands a return of my warmest thanks: at the same time, I regret my inabilities to support the character of so important a station. Notwithstanding, as my appointment appears so unanimous, it affords me the highest satisfaction, and is to me a confirmation of their general approbation of my former conduct; therefore, I shall consider it my duty to serve the ensuing year, and by Divine assistance, shall labor to continue an equal, steady firmness, and impartial administration of justice, which has hitherto governed my conduct; relying on the candor and assistance of my council and the Legislature for my support.

Gentlemen:

The Legislature having constitutionally met, I cannot forbear expressing to you my highest satisfaction in the many great and important advantages arising from the due execution and careful administration of the laws, since they took place, and cannot but rejoice when I reflect on the infinite difference between a state of anarchy and that of a well regulated government; the latter of which we daily experience. And I most earnestly recommend to all magistrates, and others in authority under me, together with the freemen over whom I have the honor to preside, to persevere and let their conduct be uniformly just, and upright, and encourage one another to unite in the supporting and maintaining their common rights; which cannot fail to recommend this State to the impartial world. At the same time am unhappy to inform you that, notwithstanding the generous and lenient measures with which the disaffected inhabitants in the lower part of Cumberland County have been indulged,¹ yet they continue in their unjustifiable obstinacy against the authority of this State; I shall, however, recommend the suspension of the laws² intended to have been executed on those offenders, at present, in consequence of a letter received from his Excellency John Jay, Esquire, President of Congress, inclosing certain acts passed by that honorable board, relating to a final settlement of all difference subsisting between this and the adjacent States; which I now submit to you for your consideration; a subject of the greatest importance, and demands your most serious attention.¹

Your agents to Congress have attended, agreeable to their instructions, from time to time. Their proceedings I shall now lay before you for your perusal and approbation; which, I hope, will prove satisfactory. From every circumstance, I think we have the highest reason to believe that from the efforts of our agents and the interposition of Congress, our unhappy disputes with the neighboring States, will soon terminate in a final and happy issue.

With respect to the present situation of the domestic affairs of the State, it is with pleasure that I inform you that the measures pursued by the Board of War, by the assistance of Divine Providence, have proved effectually sufficient to defend our frontiers, against the ravages of the common enemy, while they have been permitted to execute their horrid vengeance on many of the innocent inhabitants of the different parts of the continent; which, in some measure, proves the approbation of Heaven to our Independence, and justifies the measures pursued to support and defend it. As the time for which the troops now in service, are engaged, expires the middle of November next, you will be careful to make such provisions for future defence, as your wisdom shall direct.

Gentlemen of the Assembly:

I shall, from time to time, during the session, digest and communicate to you, such other matters as shall appear to me to require your attention, in a full confidence that the same zeal to promote the common cause, for which the inhabitants of this State have hitherto been distinguished, will be equally conspicuous in your deliberations.

THOMAS CHITTENDEN.

occasions he was appointed on committees when he was not a member. Councillor Fassett served in the House through the October session.

From the Assembly Journal:

Resolved that there be a Board of War chosen, to consist of nine persons, five of whom to be a quorum, to conduct the political affairs of the present War in the northern department in this State the ensuing year.

From the peculiar phraseology—"to conduct the political affairs of the present War,"—it may be surmised that even then the originator of the resolution contemplated the policy which was adopted a year later, and successfully carried out in the Haldimand correspondence. This phraseology is found in the writings of both Ethan and Ira Allen, who were conspicuous in the subsequent correspondence. The resolution resulted in the appointment of a Board of War.

¹The committee reported on the 22d and the duties of the Secretary of State were specified by a resolution. He was "to keep a regular office and register all the proceedings of the General Assembly of this State, Charters of Incorporation, Grants of land made within this State, and to receive on file all petitions and remonstrances and grant copies thereof when thereto requested, taking therefor his lawful fees." By the act of Feb. 1779, his fee for affixing the state seal was three shillings; and for recording laws and orders, for military commissions and for justices of the peaces and judges of probate, and for petitions to the Assembly, six shillings each.—See Slade's State Papers, p. 318.

IN BOARD OF WAR, Manchester, 27th October 1779.

Sir.—I am directed to transmit to you the foregoing resolves and to recommend to your Excellency to carry the same into Execution.

p^r. order,

IRA ALLEN, Secy.

To His Excellency Thomas Chittenden Esq^r.

NOTE.—By far the most important and interesting business of the Governor and Council at this session does not appear in its record. In fact, much of the time was spent in joint assembly, in deliberation and debate as to the course to be pursued on the attempt of Congress to decide, indirectly, the question of the state's right to independence; haply to deny it, by a settlement of the respective claims of New York, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts to jurisdiction within its limits. In these deliberations and debates both branches of the government acted in concurrence and for the result both were equally responsible, though in form, apparently, the resulting action was by the house of representatives alone. It is fit, therefore, that this important chapter in the history of the State should be inserted in this record of the Governor and Council, and it is therefore embraced in Appendix B.

RECORD OF THE GOVERNOR AND COUNCIL

AT AN ADJOURNED SESSION AT BENNINGTON, NOVEMBER 1779.

BENNINGTON 8 November 1779.

The Governor and Council met according to Adjournment, and proceeded to business.

Resolved to choose a committee of three to prepare a draught to lay an Embargo on the Exportation of provision. Members chosen, Jonas Fay, Moses Robinson, and Joseph Bowker Esquires.

Whereas Capt. [William] Fitch, Commissioner of Sequestration for the Township of Paulet, claims a Lot of Land in said Township of Paulet now in the possession of Mabel Benedict, which land is confiscated to the use of this State, & whereas s^d Fitch refuses to Give a Lease of said Land, Therefore Resolved that Moses Robinson Commissioner of Sequestration for the Township of Reuport be & he is hereby impowered & required to give a Lease of said Lot of Land unto the said Mabel Benedict for the term of one year, taking proper Measures to secure the pine Timber if any there be in said Lot.

IN COUNCIL, Arlington 29th Feb^r. 1780.

Whereas it is found that Large quantities of Provisions are continually exported out of this State, which if not immediately prevented will render it Impracticable to furnish the troops raised for the defence of the Northern Frontiers, as also prevent the purchasing Commissaries procuring the Necessary provisions in this department for the use of the Army—Therefore

Resolved that any further Exportation of wheat, Rye, Indian Corn, flour or meal of any kind, as also Beef, Pork, or any other Provisions whatever that may be useful for such Supplies, be and are hereby Strictly Prohibited & forbid to be Transported out of this State; also that no provisions of any kind, that may or shall be transported out of the State of New York, contrary to the prohibition of that [State,] be permitted to pass through any part of this State, unless for the use of the Army.—And all Sheriffs, Constables, Grand Jurors & Select men of the respective towns within this State, are hereby authorised and required to Seize any & every of the above Mentioned articles in case they have reason to suspect any person or persons to be carrying them out of this State contrary to the true Intent & meaning of this Resolution, And if need be Command assistants, & make returns to the Next assistant or Justice of the Peace of s^d. Town the writs of s^d. Seizure, & unless such person or persons shall satisfy the court before whom the Examination be had, that he or they were not Transporting any of the above mentioned articles out of this State, or that they were for the use of the Army, said articles shall be forfeit, or such person or persons fined not Exceeding forty pounds at the discretion of the court before whom the Tryal shall be had, the one half of the forfeiture to the use of this State, the other half to the person who shall prosecute to effect. This Prohibition to Take place the second day of March next & continue in force thirty days.

Attest,

JOS. FAY, Sec^y.¹

¹ By an act of the Assembly in March following, the exportation of provisions was forbidden until the 15th of August. This was re-enacted in 1780, and the prohibition continued in force until Feb. 1781.—See Slade's State Papers, pp. 396-7.

RECORD OF THE GOVERNOR AND COUNCIL

AT THE

SESSION WITH THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY AT WESTMINSTER MARCH 1780.

The General Assembly met on the 8th, but there is no record of any proceedings of the Governor and Council until the 14th. At the close of the record Secretary FAX left five blank pages "for the purpose of recording the remainder of the journals of Council at the Westminster Session, which by some Mistake in the Transfer of the books from Mr Tolman to me were not rec^d." This is dated April 7th 1789, and shows that the journal was not recorded until that time. THOMAS TOLMAN had been deputy secretary, and as such for a time he had possession of the original minutes. The following entries in the Assembly journal show that the Governor and Council met previous to the 14th, and also indicate a portion of its business.

[From the Assembly Journal.]

March 9.—His Excellency the Governor made a Speech verbally to this House.

March 10.—The Committee who was appointed to prepare a plan for the defence of the northern frontiers¹ brought in the following Report, viz:

"That it is our opinion that the General Assembly grant or order to be granted [by the Governor and Council] four, five, or six townships of land if it can be found without danger of lapping on the former grants.

"Secondly that his Excellency the Governor be requested to draw on the trustee of the war office (if he find that the avails of the grants before mentioned be not sufficient to procure provisions and the other money that may be necessary to defray the public charges of this State that may accrue,) for Loan office certificates to such amount as he shall find necessary for the supplying the Commissary of purchases—The form of which certificates shall be as follows, viz:

"No. _____ CERTIFICATE FOR _____ DOLLARS.

I do hereby certify that the State of Vermont is indebted to _____, in the sum of _____ dollars, being for _____, which sum by contract became due to _____ the _____ day of _____, for which sum he is to be paid as much money as shall be an equivalent in value to the above mentioned sum by the _____ day of _____ with the interest at six per cent. p^a annum.

"Thirdly If the provisions cannot be had for money or loan-office certificates as aforesaid, Then his Excellency the Governor is hereby directed to order the Commissary to take the provisions where they can be found in the hands of any person over and above the wants of his family, allowing to such person what the selectmen of the town shall judge to be sufficient for the support of such family until the tenth day of September next, paying such person the current price in money or certificates at his election.

“p^r order of Committee,

M. LYON, Chairm.”

The aforesaid Report being read, Resolved that said Report be accepted.

Resolved that the ammunition purchased by the order of this State be disposed of by the Governor and Council as they shall judge necessary for the benefit of this State.

March 11.—The Committee to whom was referred the petition of John Moore, Jonathan Perham and Solomon Harvey and their associates, [agents of the town of Athens,] brought in the following report, viz:¹

“That in our opinion it would be highly in the interest of this State that the tract of land situate and bounded as returned in the plan annexed to the petition be chartered by this Assembly to the sixty-seven persons whose names are annexed to the petition forthwith upon the following conditions, viz:

“First that if any of the proprietors neglect to pay for their right their names to be erased and others put in their room.

“Secondly That it shall be a condition in the Charter that each one of the proprietors shall begin a settlement on or before the first day of March 1781 on his right and continue to compleat the same.

“Thirdly That one right be reserved to be appropriated for the use of a school and one right for the first Gospel minister that shall be settled in said town, and that said petitioners be allowed corporation privileges equal to any town in this State; and that said proprietors pay for said tract of land eighteen thousand pounds at or before the delivery of the Charter, which charter shall be made out by the Governor and Council as soon as may be.

JOSHUA WEBB, Chairman.”

The above Report being read, Resolved that the said Report be accepted and Referred to the Governor and Council to be fully executed.

March 13.—The Committee appointed to examine the several petitions for lands now on file in the Secretary’s office, brought in the following report, viz:

“That (in our opinion) we have agreeable to our appointment examined the said petitions severally, and find that there is a large tract of vacant and unappropriated land lying and being in the north part of this State adjoining to the south line of the Province of Quebec and west of Lake Memphremagog and the Green mountains and bounding west on lands heretofore granted by the government of New Hampshire contiguous to lake Champlain; That your Committee are of opinion that a part of the said tract sufficient to make six townships of the contents of six miles square each, may, consistent with the interests of this State, be granted by your honors to the following gentlemen petitioners and Company for the several townships hereafter particularly named, viz:

“To Major William Goodrich, Barzilla Hudson, Charles Dibble and Company a township of six miles square as laid down in the plan herewith returned by the name of Berkshire—

“To Col^o Roger Enos and Company one like township as returned in said plan by the name of Enosburgh—

¹ Previous to acting upon this report the resolution of Oct. 20 1779, on land grants, was repealed.

“To Col^o. Howel Woodbridge and Jonathan Wells Esq^r. and Company one like township as returned in said plan by the name of Richford—

“To Doct^r. Ezra Stiles,¹ Doct^r. Benjamin Gale,² and Company one like township returned in said plan by the name of Montgomery—

“To the Officers of the Connecticut line, being sixty in number, agreeable to their petition, one like township as returned in said plan by the name of Wyllis,³ [Jay]—

“To Daniel Owen Esq^r. and Company one like township as returned in said plan by the name of Westfield.

By order of Committee,

ETHAN ALLEN, Chairman.”

Resolutions in detail for these several grants were adopted, and the Governor and Council requested to execute them. Allen was not a member of the Assembly; but, as appears from his charges paid by the State, he was in attendance “by the Desire of the Gov^r & Council” in June and October 1779, March 1780, and on four occasions in 1782 and '83.

Resolved that this Assembly will join the Governor and Council in a Committee of the whole to take into consideration the exercising the civil laws, and extending their jurisdiction throughout the State, at two o'clock in the afternoon.

March 13, P. M. - According to a Resolve passed in the forenoon, this Assembly Resolved themselves into a Committee of the whole with the Governor and Council.

The Committee of the whole having adjourned until to morrow morning nine o'clock, The House proceeded to business.⁴

The record of the Governor and Council is now resumed, as follows:

WESTMINSTER 14 March 1780.

IN COUNCIL, Thursday date above.

Resolved that Samuel Fletcher & his honor [Lieut.] Governor Carpenter join a Committee of the House to prepare a bill Stating fees & fines.

Adjourned to 8 o'clock Tomorrow.⁵

² BENJAMIN GALE, physician, who was born on Long Island in 1715 and died at Killingworth, Conn., May 21, 1790. He was distinguished for agricultural, medical, and political writings, and was a scientific and practical farmer. An agricultural society in England gave him a medal for an improved drill-plow.

³ Colonel SAMUEL and Major JOHN P. WYLLIS of Connecticut were officers in the continental army.

⁵ By a resolution of the Assembly of this date the martial law of the United States was adopted for the time being.

WEDNESDAY 15 March 1780.

Met according to Adjournment.

Resolved, that the conditions of settlement of the Townships of Berkshire, Enosburgh, Richford, Montgomery, and Westfield be as follows, viz^t

That each proprietor of said townships pay to the Treasurer of this State, or a Committee hereafter to be appointed, the sum of Eight pounds L. Money to be made Good as it passed Current in the year 1774. That the proprietors of Enosburgh & Westfield make payment to the said Committee on or before the first day of June next, on payment of which Charters of Incorporation will be given. And each Proprietor of the above Townships, their Heirs or assigns, shall plant & Cultivate five acres of Land & build a house at Least Eighteen feet square on the floor, or have one family settled on Each respective right or share of Land within the term of four years after the Circumstances of the War will admit of a Settlement with Safety, on penalty of the forfeiture of Each respective Right or share of Land in said Township, and the same to revert to the freemen of this State to be by their representatives regranted to such persons as shall appear to Settle & Cultivate the Same. And said Committee is Impowered to Erase the Names of such proprietors as shall not appear & pay the Money aforesaid & Enter others in their Stead. And that five sixty fifth parts in said Township be reserved for public uses of this State as shall be hereafter discribed in the Charters of Incorporation for said Towns, as also all Pine and oak Timber suitable for a Navy.

Resolved that the Township of Land Granted to the officers of the Connecticut Line [be known] by the Name of Wylllys, [now Jay,] that the Conditions of Settlement be as follows, viz^t That Each Proprietor in said Township pay to the Treasurer of this State six pounds L. Money to be made Good as in the year 1774. That settlement be made agreeable to the Terms proposed on the Townships aforesaid, except Four years after the present War shall be concluded between Great Britain and America—the same Reservation of public Rights and Timber as in other Towns Granted in this State.

March 15.—Resolved to reconsider the act that passed the House entitled “An Act for the purpose of empowering the inhabitants of the respective towns in this State to tax themselves on certain occasions”—which Act was sent up for concurrence [to the Governor and Council] and sent back with an amendment; Ordered that said Act with the amendment lie on the table for further consideration. [The record of the Governor and Council does not show this action of that body. The result will appear on the next page.]

March 16.—Resolved that the Governor and Council be and they are hereby requested to obtain a printer to settle within this State for the purpose of printing the Laws, &c., as soon as they shall judge it necessary.

Resolved that the Court of Confiscation be and they are hereby required to order the commissioners for sale of confiscated lands to bring their business to a close so as to make a compleat settlement before the next session of Assembly.

The following message was delivered by the Sheriff from the Council, viz:

“IN COUNCIL, Westminster, 16th March 1780.

“Whereas it appears to this Council that it will not be in the power of Joseph Bowker Esq^r commissary of purchases, fully to execute the THURSDAY, In Council, 16 March 1780.

Met according to Adjournment.

Resolved that the Township or gore of Land granted to Doct. [Solomon] Harvey & his associates by the name of Athens, sixty seven in number, pay the Money for granting said Town on or before the first day of May next, at which time a Charter of Incorporation will be given, according to Resolve of Assembly.

Resolved that the Townships of *Philadelphia*¹ & Chittenden, granted this Sessions, [pay as follows:] that the Proprietors of Chittenden pay to the Treasurer of this State five hundred & forty pounds L. Money, made Good as in the year 1774. And that the Proprietors of Philadelphia pay him five hundred & eighty pounds, Money aforesaid, to be paid on or before the first day of June next, at which time Charters of Incorporation will be made out for said Towns—The conditions of settlement to be the Same as the other Townships Granted this Session to Colo. Roger Enos & others on or near Canada line, Except such settlement to be made within two years after the Circumstances of the War will admit to Settle in Safety.

business of his appointment to that important trust: They do therefore recommend to the hon^{ble} Assembly to appoint an Assistant Commissary of purchases.

By order of Gov^r and Council,

“JOSEPH FAY, Secy.”

The aforesaid Recommendation of the Governor and Council being taken into consideration, Resolved that an Assistant Commissary of purchase be appointed this afternoon. [The foregoing message does not appear in the record of the Governor and Council. At the time fixed, Maj. Benjamin Wait was elected assistant; and on the same day Joseph Fay was elected to the same office for the lower part of Bennington county.]

On motion made, after long debate: Resolved that the following amendment be made to the Act entitled “An Act for the purpose of empowering the inhabitants of the respective towns in this State to tax themselves for certain occasions,” viz:

“Always provided that no person be compelled by the major vote of said town to build, or repair a meeting house; or support a worship, or minister of the gospel, contrary to the dictates of his conscience; Provided said person or persons shall support some sort of religious worship as to them may seem most agreeable to the word of God, anything in this Act to the contrary notwithstanding.”

The yeas and nays being required by M^r. [Matthew] Lyon whether the last clause of the amendment stand, viz.: “Provided said person or persons shall support some sort of religious worship as to him may seem most agreeable to the word of God”—they stand as follows, viz.:

Yeas—M^r. Speaker, M^r. Strong, M^r. Brewster, M^r. E. Clark, [Ezekiel of Clarendon.] M^r. Ives, M^r. Roberts, M^r. Drury, M^r. Foot, M^r. Hamilton, M^r. Underwood, M^r. Williams, M^r. Barrett, M^r. Merrick, M^r. Knight, M^r. Webb, M^r. Jones, M^r. Upham, M^r. Curtiss, M^r. Howland, M^r. Whitcomb, M^r. Gilbert, M^r. Stephens, M^r. French.

Nays.—M^r. N. Clark, [Nathan of Bennington,] M^r. Lyon, M^r. Galusha, M^r. Comstock, M^r. Ormsby, M^r. M. Robinson, [Moses of Rupert,] M^r. Hibbard, M^r. Ward, M^r. Noyce, M^r. Harris, M^r. Hale, M^r. N. Robinson, [Nathaniel of Westminster,] M^r. Russell, M^r. Wild.

So it was Resolved in the affirmative.

For the act above referred to see Slade's State Papers, p. 396.

April 7th 1789.

JOSEPH FAY, Secy.

The next entry on the record is of June 6, 1780, as of an adjourned meeting. It is probable, therefore, that there had been a meeting between March 16 and June 6, of which the record has been lost. There was a meeting of the Board of War, at which only two members of the Council seem to have been present. It is possible that a meeting of the Governor and Council had been called, and that the Councillors present, though not a quorum, adjourned to the 6th of June. The following are the proceedings of the Board of War:

RECORD OF THE BOARD OF WAR.

ARLINGTON, April 6th, 1780.

Board of War met. Present—Joseph Bradley, Eben^r. Allen, Jonathan Fassett, Ira Allen, Esquires.

April 7th, 1780.—Board of War met.—Sam^l Robinson Esq^r. joined.

Resolved that Joseph Bradley Esq^r. be Vice President.

Read a letter from the Inhabitants of the frontiers.

Adjourned to 2 o'clock.

Met at time and place, Col. Brownson in the Chair.

Resolved that this Board accept of the report of their Committee Respecting building a fourt at Pitsford, &c.

Resolved that said fourt be built near the north Line of Pitsford where Maj^r. Eben^r. Allen shall judge Proper; That said fourt be a Piquet with proper flankers, with Barracks sufficient for one Hundred and fifty men Inclosed; That such fourt be accomplished as soon as may be.

Resolved that a Picquet fourt with proper flankers be built at Hubbardton near Boardman's Place where Maj^r. Eben^r. Allen shall pitch; that there be Barracks sufficient for seventy-five men Inclosed, to be compleated as soon as may be.

Resolved that one Company of seventy-five men Exclusive of officers be immediately raised to joine Maj^r. Eben^r. Allen for the defence of the frontiers.

Resolved that said men be raised from the several Reg^t in the following Proportion, viz.:

Col ^o . Herrick's Reg ^t	24
Col ^o . Allen's Reg ^t	18
Col ^o . Warren's Reg ^t	8
Col ^o . Fletcher's Reg ^t	13
Col ^o . Marsh's Reg ^t	12

Total 75

Resolved that Cap^t Isaac Clark Take the command of said Company; That Lieut. Benj. Everst [Everest] be first Lieut.; that Rufus Branch be second Lieut.

Resolved that said officers and soldiers Continue in service untill the first day of January Next unless sooner discharged.

Resolved that the pay of said officers and soldiers be the [same as the] other Part of Maj^r. Eben^r. Allen's Command.

Resolved that Col^o. Warren Raise said eight men out of the towns of Wells, Clarendon, Timmouth, and Wallingford.

Resolved that the foregoing Resolutions be Recommended to His Excellency Tho^s. Chittenden Esq^r to carry into Execution.

Resolved that Cap^t. Jonathan Fassett be and he is Hereby appointed Commissary of Purchases with full power to appoint an assistant or assistants, and you or those you shall Hereafter appoint to assist you are fully impowered to purchase any kind of Provision or Camp materials for the use of this State's troops and pledge the faith of this State for the payment of the same, and to make up for any depretiation of money that may be from the time of Purchase to the time such money be paid, and you are further impowered to appoint such person or persons as you may from time to time find necessary to forward such Provision to the several necessary Posts in the frontiers, Taking the issuing Commissary's Receipts for the same. You will keep regular accounts of your time and Expenses and that of your assistants and all the purchases made as aforesaid in order to Exhibit to this Board for adjusting and Settlement when thereto required.

Whereas Capt. Jonathan Fassett is this day appointed Purchasing Commissary & to transport provision to this State's Troops, and whereas the Exigences of this State require that a quantity of Provisions be immediately Purchased and transported to the several Posts in the frontiers, and Whereas difficulties may from time to time arise in furnishing such supplies:

Resolved therefore that Cap^t. Fassett be directed when he shall judge the Exigences of the State require it to make application to the sivel authority who are desired to issue their warrant to seize any kind of Provision & to press a sufficient number of Carrages and Teams to forward such Provision to Camp, always provided that you leave with Each man a sufficient quantity of Provision for the use of such persons famaly & Dependance [dependents] untill the fifteenth day of September next.

Adjourned to 8 o'clock in the morning.

IN BOARD OF WAR, Arlington, April 8th 1780.

Whereas the General Assembly of this State did at their last session pass a Law impowering each Town in the State to lay Town Taxes to defray public expense, and Whereas the Exigences of this State often require the militia to turn out on the shortest notice, and for the due encouragement of that Patriotic Spirit they ought to be well rewarded for such services—and as the Assembly have not pointed out any way that such Extra Troops should be paid—it is therefore proposed that each Town by Taxes pay their own men for the time being, that each man have three shillings for each day (& officers in proportion to their Rank,) and Two pence for a Horse p^r. mile as money went in 1774, Each person to furnish himself with provitions &c. and the depreciation made up when they receive their money, such roles to be examined by the select-men of such Town & charged to this State as money went in 1774, which will in future be allowed to such Town with the Interest. That all such expence since the rising of the last Assembly be paid as aforesaid.

Resolved that the foregoing be recommended to the several Towns in this State.

Extract from the minute.

IRA ALLEN, Sec'y.

For the act of the Assembly referred to see Slade's State Papers, p. 396.

Procedures of the Board of War, April [8] 1780.

Whereas the present War with Great Britain is likely to be continued at least this Campaign and that the Continental Troops will be continued to the south of this, By which means there will be no movement to divert the Enemy in Canaday, it therefore becomes the indispensible duty of this State to make the best preparations in their power for the defence of the frontiers.

You are therefore directed without loss of time to repare to Col^o. Joel Marsh, Col^o. Peter Olcott, and such other persons as you shall judge necessary, and make Enquiry whether there is any Troops provided by New Hampshire or any other people for the defence of the frontiers of Cumberland County for this Campaign; Secondly whether any men has been raised within Col^o. Olcott's Reg^t. to join Capt. [probably Philip] Safford's Company, if so how many and whether the remainder are likely to be raised soon. 3^d to demand of Col^o. Olcott a Positive answer whether he will serve as Colonel of the fourth Regiment of Militia in this State or not. 4^{thly} to Enquire how the Militia of Cumberland County are supplied with powder, Lead, and flints, and make your return to this Board as soon as may be.

ARLINGTON, May 11th 1780.

Whereas the Board of War at their session February Last¹ Did Resolve that in case the Continent does not furnish provision for our Troops in the frontiers it be recommended to each town to furnish their Soldiers with provision, on such towns being acquainted by me that such provision will be wanted—and whereas the Continental provision is Stopped for the present, and provision of the meat kind is not now to be purchased, and as the Enemy are daily Expected on our frontiers and the soldiers now raised are almost intirely out of meat, and if they are obliged to quit the posts on our Frontiers for want of provision it will be attended with consequences that will be very distressing:

Therefore you are hereby directed to Collect thirty pounds of salt pork for Each man raised by your Town or ordered to be raised for the defence of said frontiers, and forward the same to the house of Col^o. Mead at Rutland Immediately, whose receipt you will take for said pork; and if the said pork cannot be collected without, you will take the same from the inhabitants in proportion to what they have & their families.

¹ There seems to be no record of the vote referred to.

You will use your utmost discretion in collecting said pork, and as it is of absolute necessity, you will not fail to carry this order into Execution, for which this shall be your sufficient warrant. You will keep accounts of the pork you furnish and the Expense of transportation, for which your town will be paid by this State. THOS. CHITTENDEN, Gov^r.

The Selectmen of the [town of] Sandgate.

This order was of course addressed to the selectmen of each town. Immediately following the order in a blank space on the page, these papers are recorded—apparently for the purpose of showing how the town accounts were presented and finally paid:

RECORD OF THE GOVERNOR AND COUNCIL

AT AN ADJOURNED SESSION AT ARLINGTON, JUNE 1780.

ARLINGTON, 7 June 1780.

In Council Wednesday 7th June 1780.

Met according to adjournment, & opened according to time & place and Adjourned to 9 o'Clock Tomorrow.

THURSDAY 8 June 1780.

Met according to Adjournment, and having taken into consideration the request of Silas Hamilton & Company, Resolved that the price of three thousand acres of Land Granted to them in Whitingham be one shilling p^r. Acre money made good as in the year 1774, in lieu of two shillings which price this Council set in March last.

Adjourned to 8 o'Clock Tomorrow morning.

FRIDAY 9 June 1780.

Met according to Adjournment.

Resolved, that whereas the Continental pay due to the troops who served the last season in this State, cannot be obtained of the Continent, that the Treasurer of this State be & he is hereby directed to advance the Money to Noah Smith Esq^r. pay Master, to discharge the Same.

Adjourned to 8 o'Clock Tomorrow.

[SATURDAY, 10 June 1780.]

Met according to Adjournment.

Resolved that a Committee be appointed to receive the Charter of London Dary. [Londonderry.] And to dispose of the Same according to the Resolve of the General Assembly in March last. Members chosen, Col^o. [Samuel] Fletcher, Deacon [Edward] Aikin & Major [Joseph] Tyler.

Adjourned until 8 o'Clock Monday next.¹

MONDAY 12 June 1780.

Met according to Adjournment.

Resolved, that the payment of the Granting fees of the Township of Richford and Montgomery be suspended until the 15th day of August next.

¹ B. H. HALL states that on this day, June 10, 1780, Timothy Bartholomew was appointed commissioner for the sale of the confiscated estates of enemies in the towns of Norwich, Sharon, Thetford, Stratford, [Stratford,] Fairlee, and Mooretown [Bradford.] From the copy of an order and appointments of this kind in Slade's State Papers, p. 562, it seems that commissioners were appointed by the Governor and Council acting as a court of confiscation. For this reason, perhaps, the appointment of Mr. Bartholomew was not entered on the record of the Governor and Council.

Resolved that Joseph Fay Esq^r be and he is hereby appointed & requested to procure a printer in this State.

On petition of John McNeil to this Council in April 1779 requesting a pardon from the Sentence of the Court of Commissioners, destining him to banishment, the question being put it Passed in the Negative.

Whereas it has been represented to this Council that the Town of Norwich was under many inconveniences respecting the free exercise of Civil government for want of a Justice of the Peace in said Town, Therefore

Resolved, that this Council do recommend to such of the Inhabitants of Norwich as see fit to Assemble & recommend some suitable person to his Excellency Thomas Chittenden Esq^r to be Commissioned to act in the office of a Justice of the Peace until the rising of the General Assembly in October next.¹

Letter of Gov. Chittenden on the Proclamation authorized July 25 1780.

ARLINGTON, 23^d Sept. 1780.

Gentlemen—Your petition supposed to be yesterday's date has been this day rec^d by the hand of William Lincham & I have laid the same before the members of Council, which at present are not sufficient in number for a quorum. They are of opinion with me to inform you, that it would be an advantage to the Common Cause of Liberty, as well as for the Interest of this State, to permit such persons as choose to show themselves to be on the Enemys side, to repair to them from amongst us agreeable to the proclamation, so that the mouths of all such as might in future appear and exhibit a disposition unfriendly to the Common cause might be stoped. Nine adult persons only have as yet made application for such permit and it is probable that no other will apply as the time is so far Expired that there is not sufficient time Left for them to make suitable preparation for their journey.

I must consider the Proclamation as a Legal act of the authority of this State, and that it would be an Illegal act of the authority to Engage by such proclamation safe conduct within the Enemies Lines & thereby afford an opportunity, or rather Lay a Trap or Snare for those disposed to go to Canada to discover their disposition and then take advantage of the discovery of such disposition, which was made on the faith and full confidence of the authority of the State, to punish them therefor.

I cannot conceive that any number of persons who have made themselves duly acquainted with the Nature of the act and the obligation the State is under to fulfil it, (Even admitting some may be of opinion that the act is Impolitic,) can reconcile it to their consciences for us thus to trifle with the Honor of the State. I should be happy in this to satisfy every individual Signer to the Petition in every particular of this affair, but it would be too Lengthy. I hope therefore that Colo. Robinson & others will fully make you Easy on this Subject.

I am Gentlemen your most Obedient

Hum^{ble} Servant,

THOMAS CHITTENDEN.

True [copy] delivered in answer to the petition of a number of disaffected persons who wished to remove within the Enemies Lines on the aforesaid Proclamation.

Attest,

JOS. FAY, Secy.¹

¹The proclamation to which this letter refers and which was authorized by the Council on the 25th of July, has not been preserved. Its purport seems to have been to give a limited time within which tories might leave the state and join the enemy; their room probably being deemed better than their company.

Thomas Chandler [jr.] Esq^r. who had heretofore presided as Speaker of the House of Assembly appeared before His Excellency & took the Necessary oaths to entitle him to a seat in Council.

The following message from the Governor and Council was read, viz.:
IN COUNCIL, Oct^r. 14th 1780.

This Council have had so much business in forwarding assistance to the frontiers that they have not had time sufficient to arrange the whole of the business that will likely be laid before you this session; shall therefore at this time lay before you the following for your present consideration, viz:

1st. The ways and means of supplying the treasury and securing the frontiers. [This was met by the House on the same day by the appointment of committees on petitions for land grants, and on the situation of the frontiers;* and on the 16th by a committee on finances.]

2^d.—The procuring provisions and ammunition for the year ensuing.

3^d.—The taking some effectual measures for securing such lands as heretofore have been and hereafter may be confiscated to the use of this State. [Oct. 16 the House appointed a committee on this subject.]

4th. The making such resolves concerning the unsettled rights of lands which have been heretofore granted as will appear just and reasonable and be a means of bringing forward the settlement of the unsettled towns within the lines;

And any other matters as they shall occur shall from time to time be laid before you for your consideration.

By order of Council,

THOS. CHITTENDEN, Gov^r.

Resolved that the Members constituting the Board of War as appointed the last Session be and they are hereby impowered to do the business of said board until another board of War be chosen.

* Oct. 16th the committee on the frontiers reported about one hundred and fifty men in the garrisons at Pittsford and Castleton, and about eighty east of the mountains; and that four hundred men ought to be raised immediately, of whom three hundred and fifty should be assigned to the garrisons at Pittsford and Castleton.

The Governor & Council joined the House in a Committee of both houses for the purpose of appointing a Board of War.¹

Sundry letters from Gen^l. [Ethan] Allen to Gov^r. Chittenden, dated at Head Quarters Castleton, Oct^r. 18th and 19th were read.

² It is a remarkable fact, that the first, in a long series of land grants made for the special purpose of raising funds to be expended for the defense of the State at the most critical period of its history, should be of the township which afterward became its capital. Col. TIMOTHY BIGELOW was born in Worcester, Mass., Aug. 12 1739, and died there March 13 1790. He was a blacksmith, a leading patriot, and member of the Provincial Congress in 1774-5; marched at the head of a company of minute-men to Cambridge on hearing of the battle of Lexington; and was a major in Ward's Worcester regiment May 23 1775. In that capacity he went with Arnold on the celebrated march to Quebec, and ascended that mountain in Maine (to gain sight of the desired land,) which from the perilous adventure was named Mount Bigelow. He was captured in the attack on Quebec, and remained a prisoner until the summer of 1776. Feb. 8 1777, he was made colonel of the 15th Massachusetts regiment, at the head of which he assisted in the capture of Burgoyne. He served also in Rhode Island, at Valley Forge, and at West Point. After the war he had charge of the arsenal at Springfield, Mass. His son Timothy, a graduate of Harvard University in 1786, was one of the most eminent of the lawyers and legislators of Massachusetts in his day, whose daughter Katharine married the late Hon. Abbott Lawrence, M. C. for Massachusetts 1835-7 and 1839-41, commissioner to settle the north-eastern boundary question with Great Britain in 1842, and minister to England in 1849-1852.—See observations on the land grants of 1780, post.

Resolved that those Gentlemen who have heretofore Attended Con-shire County for the defence of the northern frontiers of this State. [This resolution does not appear in the record of the Governor and Council.]

Oct. 23.—Sundry letters from Gen^l. [Ethan] Allen to Gov^r. Chittenden, dated Head Quarters Castleton 22^d Oct^r. 1780, were read.

Oct. 24.—The Committee appointed to take into consideration the ungranted lands and the several petitions filed in the Secretary's office sent the following request to the House, viz:

“Your Committee having made considerable advancement in the business of their appointment have found it necessary to take the sense of the Committee [of the whole perhaps, including Governor and Council,] in what manner the several locations made by virtue of the Authority of New York since the King's prohibition shall be considered, who are unanimously of the opinion that they ought not to be considered as a sufficient bar against granting the same to other respectable worthy petitioners; they therefore wish to know the sense of the Assembly on this subject that they may govern their future conduct in the premises accordingly.

“by order of Com^{ttee},

PAUL SPOONER, Ch^{man}.”

Which Request was read and thereupon

Resolved Unanimously that the several locations made by virtue of the authority of New York since the King's prohibition be and is hereby considered not a sufficient bar against granting the same to respectable and worthy petitioners.

Oct. 26.—Sundry letters from Gen^l. Allen, Col^o. Herrick and Capt. Sawyer were read, giving an account of the Enemy's approaching toward our frontiers, Therefore Resolved, as the present alarm requires the assistance of a large number of the members for the purpose of joining the army or taking care of their families which are in immediate danger, that this Assembly be adjourned until Monday next—and that the several members who stay at this place are hereby appointed a Committee to join a Committee from the Council when necessary to prepare business to lay before the House at their opening, and all matters that are referred for a hearing this week are referred until the opening of the Assembly.

TUESDAY 31st October 1780.

Met according to Adjourn^t. & rec^d the following request from the General Assembly viz^t:

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, Oct. 31st 1780.

Resolved that the Capt. General be & he is hereby requested to discharge the Volunteers raised for the defence of the frontiers.¹

Extract from the journals,

R. HOPKINS, Clerk.

The following Resolve received from the House viz^t:

Resolved that this Assembly do approve of the Cap^t. Gen^l. and Commander in chief's making proposals to his Excellency Gov^r. Haldimand for settling a Cartel for exchange of Prisoners, and further advise and recommend to him to appoint and empower some suitable person or persons to further negotiate the settlement of a Cartel with Maj^r. Carleton agreeable to Gen^l. Haldimand's proposals for that purpose.

Extract from the Minutes,

ROS^l. HOPKINS, Clerk.

True copy Recorded, JOSEPH FAY, Sec^y.

These resolutions were preceded on the Assembly Journal by the following entries of the date of Oct. 31 1780:

Several Letters were laid before the Assembly by the Governor, particularly one from Gen^l. Haldimand of Canada, dated at Quebec Oct^r. 22^d 1780, directed to Gov^r. Chittenden: one from Maj^r. Chs. Carleton commanding a party of the British, &c., dated at Crown Point Oct^r. 26th 1780, directed to Gen^l. Allen, both of which contained proposals to settle a Cartel for exchanging prisoners; likewise a copy of a letter from Gen^l. Allen, directed to Col^o. Webster [of New York,] dated Castleton, 29th Oct^r. 1780; a copy of a letter from Gen^l. Allen to Maj^r. [Ebenezer] Allen, and a copy of a letter from Gen^l. Allen to Maj^r. Carleton, were read.

Likewise the Governor informed the House that he had wrote to Gen^l. Haldimand by advice of his Council making proposals to exchange prisoners, which occasioned the letters from Gen^l. Haldimand & Maj^r.

¹This should have followed the next entry on the record of the Council, as the discharge of the volunteers was made in consequence of the agreement between Gen. Ethan Allen for Vermont and Maj. Carleton for Gen. Haldimand, in pursuance of which the British force was withdrawn to Canada.

Carleton, &c.—Whereupon Resolved, &c. [then followed the resolutions entered on the Council record of Oct. 31.]¹

¹The letters referred to, with these proceedings of the General Assembly, were the official initiation of what is known as "The Haldimand correspondence," between the commissioners of Vermont on the one hand and the Governor General of Canada and his agents on the other. The letters read to the Assembly, as entered above, that to Maj. Ebenezer Allen excepted, were as follows:

General Haldimand to Governor Chittenden.—Abstract.

QUEBEC, October 22 1780.

"If you will send a proper person with full power to Major Carleton at Crown Point, or St. Johns, to confer upon this business, I shall authorize the major to receive him;" but expressed an unwillingness to comply with the request [of Governor Chittenden for an exchange of prisoners] under the circumstances.

This abstract is probably inaccurate. Gen. Haldimand was not then ready for an exchange of prisoners, but desired a discussion of the subject.

Major Carleton to General Ethan Allen.

CROWN POINT, October 26 1780.

Sir:—By the bearer, Capt. Sherwood, I received General Haldimand's letter to Governor Chittenden, on the subject of an exchange of prisoners. I have authorized Captain Sherwood to treat with the Governor and you on the subject; though could I meet with you, or him, or both, perhaps the business would be sooner concluded, as, should any difficulty arise between Captain Sherwood and you, my instructions are so ample that I flatter myself that I could remove them.

During the continuation of this negotiation, no attacks or insults shall be offered to any post or scout belonging to your state or in your boundaries. I expect you will observe the same, and recall, as far as lies in your power, your scouts, to prevent through inadvertency on either part the appearance even of not adhering to the above.

I am, sir, your most obt. servt.,

CHAS. CARLETON.

Brigadier Gen. Allen.

General Ethan Allen to Colonel Webster.

HEAD QUARTERS, Castleton, 29 October, 1780.

Sir:—Last evening I received a flag from Major Carleton, commanding the British troops at Crown Point, with proposals from General Haldimand, commander-in-chief in Canada, for settling a cartel for the exchange of prisoners. Major Carleton has pledged his faith that no hostilities shall be committed on any posts or scouts within the limits of this state during the negotiation. Lest your state [New York] should suffer an incursion in the interim of time, I have this day dispatched a flag to Major Carleton, requesting that he extend cessation of hostilities on the northern posts and frontiers of New York. You will, therefore, conduct your affairs as to scouts, &c., only on the defensive until you hear further from me.

I am, &c.,

ETHAN ALLEN.

To Col. Webster. To be communicated to Col. Williams and the posts on your frontiers.

WEDNESDAY 1st November 1780.

Met according to Adjournment.

Nothing passed this day to be recorded.¹

Adjourned until tomorrow morning.

General Ethan Allen to Major Carleton.

HEAD QUARTERS, Castleton, 27th [29th] October 1780.*

Sir:—I received your letter to me, with General Haldimand's to Gov. Chittenden, last evening, by Capt. Sherwood.

Every respect will be shown your flag, and no hostilities will be permitted on my part; and it is expected you will extend your cessation of hostilities against any of the northern posts of the frontiers of the state of New York during this negotiation.

Special orders are given to prevent all hostilities until I receive your answer to this.

Major Clark is appointed to deliver this to you by a flag, and wait your answer. Your most obedient servant,

ETHAN ALLEN.

P. S. Your letter, with General Haldimand's, I have forwarded express to Governor Chittenden, and make no doubt some proper person will be appointed to settle the cartel as soon as possible.

"That they have examined said papers and also conferred with Col^o. Hay thereon and find that he is appointed by the Continental Commissary General to purchase provisions in the New Hampshire Grants:

"And that it is the opinion of your Committee that Col^o. Hay by coming to this State and making application to the Legislature thereof has missed his instructions:

"And that it is further the opinion of your said Committee that (considering the imbarasment this State lies under with regard to the claims of others States and the jurisdiction assumed over it; considering also the large supply of provisions already granted for the troops to be in the service of this State the year ensuing; should we suppose this State could be called the New-Hampshire Grants, which is by no means admissable,) the Legislature of this State ought not to undertake to supply Col^o. Hay with the beef required.

"Your Committee would remind the House that there is no law that prevents Col^o. Hay from purchasing what provisions he pleases in this State for the use of the Continent, and transporting the same where he thinks proper for that purpose.

IN COUNCIL date above.

Met according to Adjournment and proceeded to business as follows—

Resolved that the Proprietors of Randolph in number sixty Eight pay for Each right Eleven Pounds L. Money in Silver or Gold coin or other Currant Money equivalent, to be paid to a Committee hereafter to be appointed to receive the same, on or before the first day of January next, & that the Conditions of settlement be as follows viz^t that Each Proprietor of the Township of Randolph aforesaid his heirs or assigns shall plant & cultivate five acres of Land on each respective right in said Town within the Term of three years on penalty of the forfeiture of his right or share of Land in said Township, & the same to revert to the Freemen of this State, to be by their Representatives regranted to such persons as shall appear to Settle & Cultivate the same. And the Neglect of payment & reservations to be the same as the Townships Granted to the Hon^{ble} Jonathan Arnold² & Company by the name of Lyndon.

² Dr. JONATHAN ARNOLD was born in Providence, R. I., Dec. 14 1741. He was a member of the Assembly of Rhode Island in 1776 and author of the act of that year repealing the law requiring an oath of allegiance to the mother country to be taken. He was also a member of the Continental Congress 1782-4, and surgeon in the revolutionary army. After the war he removed to St. Johnsbury, Vt., and was its first town clerk in 1790. He was one of the Governor's Council in 1790, '91 and '92, and one of the judges of Orange county from 1792 until his death, Feb. 2 1798.—JOSIAH LYNDON ARNOLD, son of the doctor, was born in Providence, R. I., April 22 1768; graduated at Dartmouth in 1788; was tutor of Brown University until his father's death, when he removed to St. Johnsbury, which town he represented 1793-95. He died there June 7 1796. A volume of his poems was published the next year after his decease.—LEMUEL HASTINGS ARNOLD, another son of the Doctor, was born at St. Johnsbury, Jan. 29 1792; graduated at Dartmouth college in 1811; was a member of the Council of Rhode Island during the "Dorr rebellion" in 1842-3, governor of R. I. 1831-33, and member of Congress 1845-7. He died at Kingston, R. I., June 27, 1852.—Gen. RICHARD ARNOLD, son of governor L. H. Arnold, was born in Providence, R. I., April 12, 1828, graduated at West Point in 1850, and served with so much credit in the army as to be brevetted major general in August 1866.—SAMUEL GREENE ARNOLD was born in the same city on the 12th of April 1821, and the editor supposes was another son of the Governor. He was twice lieutenant governor of the State, U. S. Senator in 1863, and served with credit as aid to Gov. Sprague during the rebellion.—See Drake's Dictionary of American Biography.

THE LAND GRANTS OF 1780—STATE FINANCES.

The numerous grants of townships made in the autumn of 1780 were designed to play so important a part in sustaining the State that a statement of the principal circumstances is desirable. Congress on the 2d of June preceding had declared that the acts of Vermont in asserting its independence and continuing its grants of lands, in violation of the resolutions of Congress of September and October 1779, "are highly unwarrantable and subversive of the peace and welfare of the United States;" and "strictly required" the people thereof "to forbear and abstain from all acts of authority, civil or military," over those residents in Vermont who preferred to accept the jurisdiction of another state. This had been accepted by the Governor and Council as a quasi declaration of war by Congress, and on the 25th of July Gov. CHITTENDEN had protested against this action, and notified the President of that body that "Vermont have, therefore, no alternative; they must either submit to the unwarrantable decree of Congress, or continue their appeal to heaven and to arms;" and announced that the State would appeal from Congress to the legislatures of the several states "and take such other measures as self-preservation may justify." In that critical condition of affairs, the General Assembly of Oct. 1780 deliberately determined to put Vermont on a war footing, by adopting elaborate rules and regulations for the militia, and framing others for the supply of provisions, &c. to its military forces in the field; by giving the Board of War full power to raise an army, or call out the militia, or both, for nine months, the term being increased to eleven months; and finally by numerous land grants to furnish the "sinews of war." Indeed the disposable land of the State,—the improved land of the Tories that had been confiscated, and the ungranted lands that were to be sold—were the main features in the financial policy of the State.

When government was organized in March 1778, all the other states were groaning under the burden of taxes; and therefore, in Vermont, said IRA ALLEN:

It was thought good policy not to lay any taxes on the people, but to raise a sufficient revenue out of the property confiscated, and the ungranted lands. Hence it was found that those who joined the British were benefactors of the State, as they left their property to support a government they were striving to destroy. It is further to be observed, that not only the civil list was paid by the sale of the enemy's property, but new and firm friends were added to the government. While the States in New England were severely taxed to carry on the war, Vermont had no taxes to pay. This circumstance greatly promoted migration into Vermont, and those who came with that view were staunch friends to the new government, and added to its strength and consequence both at home and abroad.¹

Such being the settled policy of the State, it is of course found that it was systematically pursued.

In 1779, further said ALLEN, a form of charter and rules for granting lands were adopted; and it appears, from the petitions in the Ms. State Papers in the Secretary of State's office, that a printed form of petition to the General Assembly for a land grant, was prepared. It is hardly necessary to add that these blank petitions were widely circulated, not only throughout New England, but in the middle States and in the army. In October 1779, IRA ALLEN was appointed to attend the legislatures of the middle and other states; and his account shows that his special business was in reference to the lands both of Vermont and of the continent. Several of the states visited owned no land outside of their own bounds, and ALLEN made a point of claiming that the immense public domain of wild land, wrested from Great Britain by the revolution, should not be the property of particular states, as Virginia, Pennsylvania, New York, &c., but the common property of all the states. In this view he proposed that the confiscated and ungranted lands of Vermont should be counted as part of the common property of all the states, and engaged that Vermont would account for all it received out of lands within her limits. This was a direct and powerful appeal to those states to make common cause with Vermont, as indeed on some occasions every one of them did.² Of course ALLEN did not neglect this opportunity to scatter broadcast the blank petitions to the General Assembly of Vermont for land grants. Land companies were formed in New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Rhode Island; also by officers in the continental army; and members of the continental Congress were not excluded. In allusion to these companies, WASHINGTON said, in 1783:

Two things I am sure of, namely, that they [the Vermonters] have a powerful interest in those States, [New England,] and pursued very politic measures to strengthen and increase it, long before I had any knowledge of the matter, and before the tendency of it was seen into or suspected, by granting upon very advantageous terms large tracts of land; in which, I am sorry to find, the army in some degree have participated.³

Hence when the General Assembly met in October 1780, it found a large number of these petitions filed in the office of the Secretary of State, and the way apparently open to add materially to the funds in the treasury. This, said ALLEN, "furnished money to defray the expenses in part of the war, helped to alleviate, in a considerable degree, the burthens of the people, and to strengthen the frontiers against the common enemy."¹ At this particular juncture, however, it is obvious that the fund was raised in anticipation of a possible contest with New York, and even with Congress.

Oct. 14 1780 it was

Resolved that a Committee of five to join a Committee from the Council be appointed to take into consideration the situation of ungranted lands within this State which can be settled, and the several petitions filed in the Secretary's office praying for grants of such unlocated lands: and report their opinion what lands can be granted, and what persons will most conduce to the welfare of this State to have such grants. The Members chosen by ballot are Mr Sam^l Robinson, Mr [Edward] Harris, Col^o [John] Strong, Mr [Ebenezer] Curtiss, and Mr [Joshua] Webb.

This phraseology shows that not money only was wanted, but influence to be used for the benefit of Vermont elsewhere.

Oct. 16, the limitation of grants to "land which can be settled" was stricken out, and the committee was enlarged, as follows:

Resolved that the words "which can be settled" be erased in the resolve appointing a Committee of five to take into consideration ungranted lands, &c. and that four persons be added to said Committee. The Members chosen Mr [Matthew] Lyon, Mr [Benjamin] Whipple, Mr [Thomas] Porter, and Mr [Thomas] Murdock.

Oct. 17, the Governor and Council appointed Messrs. Ira Allen, John Fassett, jr., Jonas Fay, and Paul Spooner, to join the committee of the House.

The first grant recommended by the committee was that of Montpelier, Oct. 21, when the House resolved that the grant be made to Col. Timothy Bigelow and Company, and that "the Governor and Council are hereby requested to issue a grant or charter of incorporation of said township of Montpelier under such restrictions, reservations and for such considerations as they shall judge best for the benefit of the State."

On the same day the Governor and Council "stated the fees" and conditions as follows:

¶At Four hundred & Eighty pounds for the said Land, being one Township by the Name of Montpelier, in hard money or an equivalent in Continental currency,² to be paid by Col^o Timothy Bigelow or his attorney, on the Execution of the Charter of Incorporation, on or before the 20th day of January next.

The House at the same session recommended grants of more than fifty townships, and in nearly all the cases the Governor and Council so far executed them as to name the grantees and the conditions of the charter. Thus the State designed to realize a very large sum of cash or its equivalent, in time to meet any probable emergency. Sufficient payments being expected in the winter of 1781, when no considerable military movement could be made against the State, there was supposed to be ample time to prepare for an active spring campaign, and it was improved by the Board of War for that purpose. As we know, however, this apprehended emergency was happily escaped by the diplomacy of ALLEN and FAY with the Governor General of Canada.¹

In this connection a summary statement of the financial policy of the State may best be made. From July 1777 to October 1780, the main source of revenue was found in the sale of the confiscated property of tories. This, with funds derived from occasional land grants, sufficed for all purposes without levying any state tax. In October 1780, as has been seen, a large revenue was expected from the sale of ungranted lands, but in fact it soon became necessary to adopt another measure. Accordingly in April 1781 an act was passed "for the purpose of emitting a sum of Money, and directing the redemption of the same." It provided for the issue of bills of credit to the amount of £25,155, which were made "a lawful tender for payment on all contracts, executions, &c., as lawful money according to the face of the bill." These bills were to be redeemed by the first day of June 1782 in silver at the rate of six shillings for one Spanish milled dollar, or gold equivalent. For the act see Slade's State Papers, p. 424. For the redemption of these bills a tax of one shilling and three pence, lawful money, on the pound on the list of polls and ratable estate of the inhabitants of the state, was imposed—being the first state tax; and, in addition, a tax of ten shillings on each hundred acres of land in the state which would admit of settlement, public rights and college lands excepted. These three sources served the purpose for several years, the taxes proving in fact less than one seventh of the revenue raised. This is shown by the auditing of the state treasurer's [IRA ALLEN's] accounts in February 1787, in which the sources and gross amount of revenue from March 1777 to October 1786 are specified, as follows:

Continental money received of Commissioners [for confiscated property,]	£190,433 6 4
Lawful money received from Land Committee [for land granted,]	66,815 13 8
State notes [bills of credit] issued,	24,750 8 7
Cash received in lawful money from taxes,	38,536 17 11
Cash received on hard money taxes,	7,411 2 7
Total revenue March 1777 to October 1786, both years included,	£327,947 9 1

This covered ten financial years, and the average therefore was £3279 per annum. Five years later, in 1791, ALLEN stated the expenses of the State at £3219 9 9, and the average state tax per capita to be six pence three farthings to each inhabitant.

Adjourned 'till Tomorrow morning 8^o the clock.

THO^s. TOLMAN, Secy. Pro Tem.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 10th.—Met according to adjournment, and proceeded to business by order of the President—and upon motion made that the Board proceed to the method of raising the Troops to fill the Regiment of Infantry, resolved to be raised yesterday,

Resolved, that the several Militia Regiments within this State raise the following quotas of able bodied and effective men (viz.) Col^o. Samuel Fletcher's Reg^t. 152 men, Col. Samuel Herrick's 112, Col^o. Ebenezer Woods 99, The 4th Regiment as it stood before the last session of Assembly 111, Col^o. Ebenezer Allen's 83, and Col^o. Ira Allen's 111—Total 668.

Resolved, that each town furnish their proportion of men (agreeable to the foregoing Resolve) equipt, and ready for the field by the 10th day of February next, who shall march to the several places of Rendezvous of their respective officers, and be allowed, each, Pay 14 days, next before the day of marching from their respective towns.

Resolved that the pay of the Non Commissioned officers and Privates p^r month shall be as follows, (viz.)

Serg ^t Maj ^r	£3	Drummers, each,	£2 4
Q ^r M ^r Serg ^t	3	Fifers, each,	2 4
Serjeants each,	2 8	Corporals, each,	2 4
Drum Maj ^r	2 8	Privates, each,	2
Fife Maj ^r	2 8

Resolved, that the Equipment of a non Commissioned officer and Soldier (exclusive of his Blankets & Cloathing) shall be as follows, (viz.)

1 Good Musquet,	1 Powder [flask or horn,]
1 Good Bayonet or Tomahawk,	1 Bullet Pouch, and a sufficient
1 Good Knapsack,	Tump Line ¹ (or Sling for Packs.)

And whereas the Board consider it impracticable to appoint officers within the Bounds of the several militia Regiments in Exact proportion to the several Quotas of men raised by the same,

Resolved, That Col^o. Fletcher's and Col^o. Herrick's Regiment of militia compleat as many full companies as their Quotas will admit, and the Remainder, if more than half another full Company to be joined by, or if less than half another full Company to join themselves to the Quota of the next adjoining Regiment, who shall form Companies, and dispose of their Remainders in like manner, until the nine Companies be equally Completed.

Resolved, that this formation of Companies, together with the arrangement of the officers to Each Company be under the direction of the Lt. Col^o. Commandant, with the advice and consent of the other Gentlemen officers appointed.

And whereas it will be necessary, as well to avoid the needless cost of marching ineffective men into the Camp, as to prevent the after Trouble to the Towns who shall in this respect appear deficient,

Resolved, that previous to the marching of the men from the several towns, there shall be a review made by such officers of the Regiment as reside in the said Towns respectively, whose duty it shall be to accept none but able bodied, effective and well equipt men, and such as in their judgment are equal to, and capable for the service of a Campaign, and who shall pass in a General Muster of the Reg^t after their arrival in Camp by the muster master—and in case where towns have no officer appointed within the same to review the same previous to marching as above directed,

Resolved that the Lt Col^o Commandant and Major Benjamin Wait be directed to appoint such officer or officers as they shall judge best, to do said duty in such Towns.

And whereas it will be necessary that the Regiment of Infantry ordered to be raised be regularly mustered in Camp and enrolled in a muster master's office,

Resolved, that Thomas Tolman be, and he is hereby appointed Muster Master, whose duty it shall be to muster said Regiment as often, and in such manner, as the Captain General shall direct, and that he be allowed while in such service Six Shillings (6^l) per day and 3 Rations; and that all Returns from the said Reg^t shall be made to the Cap^t General, as often, and in such manner & form as he shall from time to time direct.

And Whereas it will be necessary for equally securing the Frontiers of the two Counties that a part of this Regiment be detached,

Resolved, that a detachment of three full companies under the Command of Major Benjamin Wait be Stationed in the frontiers of the County of Cumberland until further orders from this Board or the Cap^t General, and that the Lieut Colonel Commandant, with the advice of Major Wait, shall direct those companies in the Regiment who shall be thus detached.

Resolved, that the surgeon's mate, Serjt Major & Q. M^r Serjeant shall be annexed to do duty in Maj^r Wait's detachment, until further orders.

Resolved, that the Captain General be requested to issue his necessary orders, to put into effectual execution the foregoing Resolutions of this Board.

Resolved, that the preceding Resolutions of this Board for the defence of the frontiers of this State the ensuing Campaign, be published three weeks successively in the Vermont Gazette.

Resolved, in case either of the Majors who now Stand appointed shall not choose to accept, that Maj^r Isaac Clark be appointed to supply such vacancy, and the Captain General is requested to Commission him accordingly. By order of the Board, THOS. TOLMAN, Sec^y Pro Tem.

BENNINGTON, 9th Jan. 1781.

Sir,—Cap^t Putnam was yesterday with me (supposing that I was yet a member of the Board of War,) and has mentioned at the same time the services he has rendered this State in the capacity of Q. M. altho his appointment to that place was by the authority of the Continent. His services while acting in such Capacity, as far as come to my knowledge, were uniform, and such as merited him applause. It has been since suggested that in some degree he has been opposed to the establishment of this State—which has not sufficiently been proved to me.

It is well known that he has suffered in the present War by being drove from his possessions, and reduced to the necessity of obtaining a support of Himself and family by serving this or some other State in a Public capacity. As he has heretofore served with good acceptance, unless you can be fully satisfied that he has by his conduct forfeited the confidence of the State, I wish in his suffering condition he may have an appointment adequate to his merits.

I am, Gentlemen, your most ob^t humble servant,

JONAS FAY.

² JOSEPH TYLER came from Upton, Mass., and commenced the first settlement in Townshend in 1761. He was a patriot from the opening of the revolutionary war. In Nov. 1775 he was nominated by representatives of the towns in Cumberland county as first major of a regiment of minute-men, and was confirmed by the New York Committee of Safety in January 1776. He was a delegate for Townshend in Cumberland county Committee of Safety from June 1776 to June 1777, when the people of his town instructed him not to act in that capacity "agreeable to the new constitution of the State of New York, because it is our opinion that we do not belong to the jurisdiction of that state," &c. It seems that he had been friendly to the Vermont movement for some months, as in October previous he had been appointed by the Westminster Convention one of a committee of eleven to complete the work of obtaining signatures in Cumberland and Gloucester counties to the Vermont "Association," which pledged the signers to opposition to Great Britain. In Feb. 1781 he was made a member of the Vermont Board of War, as above. He represented Townshend in the General Assembly in 1783 and 1784.—See Vol. 1; B. H. of this State against the common enemy the ensuing season. That they find seven hundred men including officers are already ordered to be raised in the territory west of Connecticut River, and recommend that three hundred and ten men including a suitable proportion of officers be raised in the territory east of Connecticut River to be apportioned to the several Regiments and parts of Regt^s as follows, viz.

	Capt.	Lieut.	Non's & Priv.
1 st Regt. in the 2 ^d Brigade,	1	3	90
4 th do. do. do.	1	2	68
1 st Regt. in the 3 ^d Brigade east of the River,	0	2	43

That there be an addition of a suitable number of persons to the Board of War from the east side of Connecticut River. That those members of the Board of War on the west side of the mountain have direction in respect to the particular station of the men ordered by a quorum of the whole Board to be stationed west side of the mountains—and the members of the Board east of the mountains have direction of the particular station of the men ordered by a quorum of the whole Board to be stationed on the frontiers contiguous to Connecticut River. That matters in which a majority of either part of the Board of War cannot agree shall be determined by a quorum of the whole Board to be convened by the President on application of a majority of either part. or when he shall judge necessary. That the Board of War be directed and empowered at discretion to raise such number of volunteers by bounty from the State as shall amount to 1500 (including such men as have been or shall be raised by other measures already adopted by the State)—and that the whole be divided into two regiments to be properly officered and stationed in such proportion on the East and West side of the mountains as a quorum of the whole [Board] shall from time to time direct. That in apportionment of the men to be raised on the east side of the River particular regard be had by the officers who shall make the proportion to the several towns and that they make reasonable abatement to the towns for such men as they now have in Continental service. And That in order to defray the expence of defending the frontiers in the manner before mentioned, they conceive it necessary that the Assembly at their present Session devise ways and means to supply the Treasury with a sum not less than [£]30,000 lawful money.

IRA ALLEN, for the Committee.

The aforesaid report was read and passed and sent [to the Governor and Council] for concurrence April 12, 1781.

April 11 1781.—Resolved That this House will proceed to choose Brigadier Generals for each Brigade tomorrow morning.

were chosen and are hereby appointed Brigadier Gen^{ls}. for the Brigades aforesaid.

Resolved to add two members to the Board of War, and that this House will proceed to choose them tomorrow morning.

April 13 1781.—Agreeable to the order of the day proceeded to choose two members in addition to the Board of War. The ballots being taken, Col^o. Tim^o. Bedle and Capt. Eben^r. Brewster were unanimously chosen.

To meet the recommendation of the committee for the supply of the treasury, the act was passed authorizing the emission of £25,155 lawful money, before noticed. An act was also passed authorizing the Commissary General of Purchases to draw funds from the treasury on orders from the Board of War.—See Slade's State Papers, pp. 424, 429.

ETHAN ALLEN had resigned the office of Brigadier General when the inquiry was instituted on the charges made against him in the Assembly by Hutchins and Hathaway. He now declined to accept the office to which he was again elected as above, but with the promise that he would render any service desired of him at any time, although not formally commissioned; and that promise was faithfully observed.

BENJAMIN BELLOWS, of Walpole, N. H., was a leading citizen of that portion of the country, and was chairman of the committee of the Walpole Convention, Nov. 15, 1780, which recommended a union of the western towns of New Hampshire with Vermont, and called the Charlestown [N. H.] Convention of January 1781. When, however, it became evident, at the close of that year and the opening of 1782, that very serious difficulties were certain to grow out of that union, he seems to have changed his opinion. In anticipation perhaps of this result, he declined to accept the office of Brigadier General tendered to him by the Vermont Assembly. On the 20th of June following Col. SAMUEL SAFFORD of Bennington was elected Brigadier General vice Allen resigned; and Col. SAMUEL FLETCHER of Townshend vice Bellows resigned.—For references to Col. Bellows, see Vt. Hist. Soc. Coll., Vol. II, pp. 95-6, 106, 112, 143, 226; and Eastern Vermont, pp. 224-5, 739-742, 764-5.

THURSDAY, IN COUNCIL, April 12 1781.¹

Council met according to Adjourn^t.

A petition of Daniel Tillison [Tillison,] Esq^r. & others concerning the Township of Brookfield was read whereupon Resolved that the time

Copies of two letters dated at "New York March 30th 1780," and "Feby. 2^d 1781," signed "Bev. Robinson Col^o. Loy^l. American Reg^t." and directed to "Col^o. Ethan Allen," which were attested as true copies by "Ira Allen and M. Lyon," also a copy of a letter from General [Ethan] Allen to "Sam^l. Huntington Esq^r. President of Congress," which enclosed the original Letters from Bev. Robinson, were laid before this House and Read—whereupon his Excellency the Governor requested that the minds of the House might be taken whether the proceedings of Governor, Council, and Gen^l. Allen were agreeable or approved by them—which question being put passed in the Affirmative.

After soliciting proposals from Allen to the British commander-in-chief, Sir Henry Clinton, Robinson wrote to Allen as follows:

I can make no proposals to you until I know your sentiments, but I think upon your taking an active part and embodying the inhabitants of Vermont in favor of the crown of England, to act as the commander-in-chief shall direct, that you may obtain a separate government under the king and constitution of England, and the men formed into regiments under such officers as you shall recommend, and be on the same footing as all the provincial camps are here. [In New York city, then in possession of the British.]

Allen "in thirteen minutes" exhibited this letter to Gov. Chittenden and other friends, and it was determined that no answer should be returned to Robinson, but that the governor should address Gen. Haldimand on the subject of an exchange of prisoners. The second letter of Robinson repeated the suggestions of the first, by authority of Sir Henry Clinton. This letter also was not answered. It was received on the 23d of February 1781, and on the 9th of March Allen sent both letters to the President of Congress. In doing this he declared that they were the only letters he ever received from Robinson, that he returned no answer, and never had the least acquaintance with the writer of them. He at the same time declared his opinion

That Vermont has an indubitable right to agree on terms of cessation of hostilities with Great Britain, provided the United States persist in rejecting her application for a union with them, for Vermont of all people would be the most miserable, were she obliged to defend the independence of United claiming States, and they at the same time at full liberty to overturn and ruin the independence of Vermont.

See Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, pp. 59-105.

It has already been stated that the resolution of the Assembly of Oct. 31 1780, (ante, p. 48.) was "the official initiation of what is known as 'The Haldimand Correspondence.'" Not till April 12 1781, however—as above—was the actual origin of that correspondence revealed to the General Assembly and the people of the State. Its revelation in that mode and at that time was undoubtedly made to relieve the Vermonters engaged in it, and particularly ETHAN ALLEN, from a suspicion of infidelity to the cause of national independence. The letter of Governor General Haldimand to Gov. Chittenden, the correspondence between the British Major Carleton and the Vermont Brigadier General Allen, and the consequent armistice, had been made public in October 1780. Oct. 31 1780, Maj. General Schuyler informed Washington of it, and intimated unfavorable suspicions of a certain "person." Nov. 6 following, Washington wrote to Schuyler "that matters in a certain quarter carry a very suspicious face." Nov. 12 Gen. Schuyler communicated other facts to Washington, implicating, though not by name, "three members from the Vermont Assembly." On the 7th of November, however, Stephen Lush removed all mystery, in a letter to Gov. Clinton of New York, by openly charging Ethan Allen with "defection," and asserting that the Vermont Council were "trying Allen upon an impeachment containing eleven articles." It is true that Allen was on that very day "impeached" before the General Assembly on charges made by Lieut. William Hutchins and Simeon Hathaway. The charges are not stated in the record of the Assembly, but Lush's account shows that they were impeachable offences, and the armistice suggests with sufficient certainty that Allen was charged with infidelity to the country in that matter. The record does show that Allen was very indignant, declaring that the paper contained "such false and ignominious aspersions against him" that he would hear no more of it, "and went out of the house." He moreover resigned the office of Brigadier General, though prudently and patriotically promising "to serve the State according to his abilities," if the Assembly should think best to give him the command. The Assembly went on nevertheless with the investigation, and, on the testimony of Joseph Fay and Stephen R. Bradley, dismissed Hathaway's remonstrance, allowed Hutchins to withdraw, and by resolution appointed a committee to thank Allen for his good services, and informed him that his resignation was accepted "according to his offer," which has been stated above—that is, an offer of his best services when desired. See Vt. Historical Society Collections, Vol. II, pp. 68 to 82. It is obvious, from the various papers cited, that Allen was under a cloud in the minds of good and true men—of Washington and Schuyler in the continental army, of Lieut. Gov. Marsh, Gen. Jacob Bayley, and doubtless many others in Vermont. It was therefore both necessary and desirable to give the real origin of the armistice and the Haldimand correspondence, in the two letters of Beverly Robinson to Allen, and to make public the fact that Allen had communicated both of these letters to the President of Congress. This was done, as has been just shown, with explanations ample enough to vindicate his character

A Remonstrance signed Leonard Spaulding and a Number of Inhabitants against the County Elections for the County of Windham, requesting the Commissions of a Number who was appointed into office might be suspended [was read]—Whereupon and at the same time offer a powerful motive to Congress for doing justice to Vermont.

The avowals of Allen to the President of Congress were a good defense for him so far as the letters of Robinson were concerned. For the truce of 1780 he had still another good defense in the fact that it was made with the knowledge and approval of the Governor and Council and General Assembly of the State. Arnold betrayed his country's cause and joined the enemy. Allen betrayed nobody, but served his State. Strictly speaking, he owed nothing to the continental cause, as he was not in the service of Congress, nor was he or his State recognized by it. Allen retained his position as a friend of his country, and all his rights as a belligerent so far as the British were concerned; he conceded nothing to the British that was not conceded in return by them, for the benefit both of Vermont and of the confederacy. He was party to a truce which protected Vermont and New York alike, by dismissing a British force for a winter's residence in Canada. These facts show no stain upon his character as an officer or a patriot. But Allen's letter to the President of Congress reached far beyond the truce of 1780, and justified the policy which Vermont pursued until all danger from the British had ceased. It is true Congress had not conceded the independence of Vermont; but neither had it assented to or asserted the claims of New York, New Hampshire, or Massachusetts. Congress left Vermont standing alone, to defend herself as she could, and as she did, while from 1775 she had also contributed freely to the continental cause. Vermont declared herself to be, and in fact was, AN INDEPENDENT STATE; and as such she clearly had the right to protect herself by every means allowable to a sovereign—by any terms she chose to make with her enemies. That was Allen's ground, and it was also the ground assumed and asserted by Gov. Chittenden. As the result proved, it was the true ground. Vermont maintained her independence as a State, and at last that independence was acknowledged by all the other states in her admission to the Union.

¹SAMUEL KNIGHT, of Brattleboro first, and afterward of Guilford, was commissioned as an attorney in "his Majesty's courts of record" in Cumberland County June 23 1772. In Feb. 1774 he was appointed a commissioner to administer oaths of office, the only office he ever held under New York. He was counted, however, among the unpopular Yorkers, and his profession brought him to Westminster, March 13 1775. It does not appear from any of the accounts of the tragic events of that day that Judge Knight was personally engaged in the assault upon the whigs, nevertheless the coroner's jury upon their oaths named him among the murderers of William French. Judge Knight escaped arrest, and did not return to Brattleborough until March 1776. He took no active part in the revolutionary struggle, but strenuously favored New York in the controversy with Vermont as late as Nov. 1778. Satisfied at length that New York could not maintain her claim, he submitted to the authority of Vermont, and was appointed a justice of the peace. The remonstrance of Spaulding and others was of course based on these above stated antecedents, and it served for a short time to postpone the employment of Judge Knight in official service. He was judge of Windham county court four years; judge of the supreme court 1789 and '90, and chief judge 1791, '2 and '3. He represented Brattleborough in the General Assembly in 1781, '83, '84 and '85. Dr. JOHN A. GRAHAM said: "He was bred to the law; is a gentlemen of great abilities; and has rendered many essential services to his fellow citizens, but, I am sorry to add, they have by no means been recompensed as they ought to be. To Mr. Knight that celebrated line of Pope may be truly applied,—

¹NOAH SABIN was born in Rehoboth, Mass., Nov. 10 1714, a descendant of the Sabins [Saben, Sabin, Sabine,] whose names appear in the records of Plymouth Colony. He came to Putney in 1768, and was the first town clerk, 8th May 1770. In April 1772 he was appointed by New York judge of the inferior court of common pleas and justice of the peace for Cumberland County. He was one of the judges of the court at the time of the "Westminster massacre," and "was very earnest to have the law [the court] go on," discountenancing all opposition of the people to the court and the royal authority in the county. A conscientious man, he was a firm and avowed loyalist so long as there was a prospect that the royal authority could be maintained. For this he was extremely unpopular with the whigs, and for three years his life was in imminent danger because of his unpopular opinions. Not only was he denounced as a murderer because of his official connection with the court at Westminster, but in 1776 he was arrested by the Committee of Safety and confined to his farm on penalty of death at the hand of any man who should find him outside of its limits. As late as Dec. 7 1778, the church of Putney refused to receive him to "occasional communion" on account of his political opinions. He was admitted, however, in April 1781, (after he had submitted to the authority of Vermont,) and appointed judge of probate. As in judge Knight's case, the remonstrance of Spaulding and others postponed the issuing of the commission of judge

¹ JOHN MURRAY, 4th Earl of Dunmore, was born in 1732, descended in the female line from the house of Stuart, and succeeded to the peerage in 1756. He was made governor of New York in Jan. 1770, and of Virginia in July 1771. From March 1773 he was in collision with the whigs of Virginia until June 1774, when he fled with his family and found refuge on board a British ship of war. Raising a band of tories, runaway negroes and British soldiers, he carried on petty and predatory warfare upon Virginia until July 1776, when he was dislodged and wounded, and shortly afterward he returned to England. He was made governor of Bermuda in 1786. While governor of New York, in a period of less than five months between Feb. 28 and July 8 1771, he granted land in Vermont to the amount of 511,900 acres, all of which had been previously granted by Gov. Benning Wentworth of New Hampshire. Of this quantity, 51,000 acres were granted, in the names of other persons, for himself, being the land referred to in the resolution of the Governor and Council. STATE OF VERMONT, IN GENERAL [ASSEMBLY,] 13 April 1781.

Resolved to Recommend & it is hereby Recommended to his Excellency the Governor to Issue his Proclamation appointing such day as he may Judge [best] to be Observed as a day of Public Fasting & Prayer Throughout this State.

Attest, ROSWELL HOPKINS, Clerk.

A Committee from the General Assembly being appointed viz^t M^r [Elisha] Payne, M^r [Gideon] Ormsby, M^r [Nathaniel S.] Prentice, M^r [Bezaleel] Woodward, M^r [Stephen] Pearl, M^r [William] Page & M^r [Benjamin] Giles to Confer with the Governor & Council relative to appointing officers both Civil & Military on the East side of the [Connecticut] River¹—

Adjourned to 8 o'Clock Tomorrow.

SATURDAY 14 [April] 1781.

Met according to Adjournment.

Adjourned to 8 o'Clock Monday next.

¹The record here is imperfect. The resolution of the House of April 13 1781 was as follows:

Resolved that a Committee of Seven be appointed to confer with the Governor and Council respecting the appointing of county officers east of Connecticut River and Field officers in the Regiments now vacant, and make report to this House. The members chosen M^r Payne, M^r Ormsby, M^r Prentice, M^r Woodward, M^r Pearl, M^r Page and M^r Giles.

Of these, all but Messrs. Ormsby of Manchester, and Pearl [Stephen, of Rupert,] were from New Hampshire towns, to wit: Col. Elisha Payne of Lebanon, Nathaniel Sartel Prentice of Alstead, Bezaleel Woodward of Dresden [part of Hanover,] Doct. William Page of Charlestown, and Benjamin Giles of Newport. The report of this committee was not entered on the journal of the House, but the substance of it was—as the above entry on the Council journal should be—that the Governor and Council be empowered to make all necessary appointments. This is indicated by the following resolution of the House, which was adopted on the same day:

Resolved that the Governor and Council be and they are hereby requested to appoint and Commissionate, for the time being, all officers civil and military which are necessary to supply vacancies in any counties, probate districts and Regiments within this State until they can be elected by the people agreeable to the 27th Section in the frame of government.

By the 18th section the Governor and Council had ample power “to supply every vacancy in any office;” and of course this resolution was unnecessary for the filling of vacancies in office within the meaning of the constitution. The intent of it therefore was to treat the lack of necessary Vermont officers east of Connecticut river as “vacancies.” It will be seen that the Governor and Council acted promptly.

IN COUNCIL MONDAY Windsor 16 April 1781.

Met according to Adjournment.

Resolved that John Fassett [jr.] Esq^r join a Committee from the House to Make a Depreciation Scale.

Thomas Russel Esq^r [of Piermont, N. H.] is hereby appointed for the time being, an assistant Judge in and for the County of Orange in Lieu of Col^o Robert Johnson.

The following Gentlemen were Nominated and are hereby appointed for the time being Justices of the Peace & Judges of the County Court for the County of Windsor viz^t

Elisha Payne Esq^r [of Lebanon, N. H.,] Chief Judge.

Joseph Marsh Esq^r, Benjamin Emmons Esq^r, Beza Woodward Esq^r, [of Dresden, now Hanover, N. H.,] & John Weld Esq^r, Side Judges.

Samuel Chase, William Ripley, [of Cornish, N. H.,] Moses Whipple, [of Croydon, N. H.,] John Stevens, [of Plainfield, N. H.,] Abel Stevens, [of N. Grantham, N. H.,] John Wheatley, [of Lebanon, N. H.,] Elihu Hyde, [of Lebanon, N. H.,] Aaron Barney, Bazaleel Woodward, [of Dresden, now Hanover, N. H.,] & Jonathan Freeman, [of Hanover, N. H.,] Esquires, Justices of the Peace for said County.

Resolved that Bazaleel Woodward Esq^r be & he is hereby appointed Judge of Probate for the district of Dresden for the time being.

WINDSOR 16th April.

A Remonstrance signed by a Number of the Inhabitants of Rockingham against the Gentlemen who were appointed by County Election to the several offices of said County, Praying the Council to suspend Granting their Commissions, was read whereupon the question being put whether the Commissions be Suspended agreeable to s^d. Remonstrance which passed in the Negative.

Adjourned to 8 o'Clock Tomorrow.¹

TUESDAY, IN COUNCIL, Windsor 17th April, 1781.

Council met according to Adjournment.

Resolved that the Governor and Council be and they are hereby requested to appoint Commissioners to lease out and take care of the estates of Absentees in such places as they shall judge best.

The House adjourned until the second Wednesday of June, then next, leaving the Governor and Council still in session.

² It seems there were two Timothy Bedels in the Assembly in 1781: Col. Timothy Bedel representing Lyman, Morristown, and Bath, N. H.; and Timothy Bedel, Esq., one of the representatives for Haverhill, N. H. It is presumed that all the above justices were for New Hampshire towns.

Resolved that Bazaleel Woodward Esq^r. be and he is hereby appointed Secretary Pro tempore.

The following was agreed on by the Council as a form of a Commission for the Justices of the Several Counties in this State, viz^t

His Excellency Thomas Chittenden Esq^r. Gov^r. Captain General and Commander in Chief in and over the State of Vermont, To _____ Greeting:

You and Each of you being Elected and appointed Justices of the Peace within and for the County of _____, Know ye that I the said Governor in the name and by the Authority of the freemen of the State of Vermont, Do hereby Authorize and Empower you & every one of you Justices to keep the Peace in the said County of _____ And to keep & cause to be kept all ordinances & statutes Enacted for the preservation of the Peace & for the quiet rule & Government of the People within said County, according to the form force & effect of a Law of this State—And to chastise and punish according to Law all persons that offend against the same—And you are further to hear & determine all & singular the causes & suits (at any time) brought before you, according to the Laws and Statutes of this State, as in the Like cases it ought to be done.—And you and Each of you are to make & Cause to be kept true records of all and singular your doings in the premises as well of Writs precepts processes Indictments judgments and Executions as of all other matters or things which respect the Execution of your said office—And all persons are to take Notice hereof and Govern themselves accordingly.—Given under my hand and the seal of the State of Vermont this _____ day of _____, A. D. _____.

Commissions were Issued for the Judges of the County Courts for the County of Rutland, Windham, Windsor, and Orange, & for the Justices of the county^s of Windsor and Orange, also a Warrant for the Judges of Probate for the district of Drisden in Windsor County, and Towns Adjoining.¹

Adjourned to 8 o'clock tomorrow.

Attest, _____ BEZA. WOODWARD, Sec^y. P. Tem.

WEDNESDAY, IN COUNCIL, Windsor 18th April 1781.

Bryant Brown who was Elected Sheriff for the County of Windsor resigned his said office of Sheriff which resignation was accepted by the Council and the office was accordingly Declared Vacant. The Governor & Council then took into their consideration the appointment of a Sheriff for the said County for the Time being, whereupon Resolved that Capt. Ebenezer Brewster of Dresden be & hereby is appointed Sheriff for the said County of Windsor for the time being in the Room of Bryant Brown resigned.

And the question being put who will be bound for the said Sheriff, the said Ebenezer Brewster as principal & Col^o. Elisha Payne & Maj. Thomas Murdock as sureties, jointly & severally acknowledged them-

¹ In Feb. 1781, the eastern part of Vermont was divided into three counties—Windham, Windsor, and Orange. In April following the New Hampshire towns north of Claremont, Newport, Unity, and Wendell, were annexed to the counties opposite in Vermont, and the other New Hampshire towns embraced in the union were constituted a county named Washington.—See Slade's State Papers, p. 427.

RECORD OF THE GOVERNOR AND COUNCIL

AT THE

SESSION OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY AT BENNINGTON,

JUNE 13 1781.

STATE OF VERMONT. IN COUNCIL, Bennington, 13 June 1781.

Whereas complaint has this day been Exhibited to this Council by Thomas Porter Esq^r & Colonel Ebenezer Walbridge, against Judah Padock Spooner, Timothy Green, Samuel Avery, and Ezra Stiles ¹The travel is omitted, doubtless in copying into the record.

Esquire, Suspecting them to be confederate in Counterfeiting the bills of Credit of this State, Therefore Resolved that a Warrant Issue from this Council to apprehend said persons to be Brought before this Council for Examination.

Resolved that this Council be & hereby is Adjourned to 8 o'clock Tomorrow Morning.

THURSDAY 14 June 1781.

To His Excellency Thomas Chittenden Esquire and the Honorable Council of the State of Vermont comes Ebenezer Walbridge and Thomas Porter Esquires, Committee for signing the Bills of Credit Emittted by this State, and on Oath Complain, inform & give said Governor and Council to Understand that this Instant 13th June Your Complainants have rec^d a forty shilling bill of M^r Martin¹ of this State Currency N^o 36 which your Complainants is very confident is not of their Signing, & Counterfeit, that your Complainants have just reason to suspect & do Suspect Judah Paddock Spooner, Timothy Green, Samuel Avery & Ezra Stiles Esq^r of Westminster in the County of Windham are concerned in the Wicked plan of Counterfeiting said Money, all which wicked conduct is contrary to the force and effect of a certain Statute Law of this State in such case made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the Freemen of this State. Your Complainants therefore prays a writ may go forth to apprehend said persons that they may be examined and dealt with as the law directs.

EBENEZER WALBRIDGE,
THOMAS PORTER.

Bennington, June 13th 1781.

Sworn before me date above,

MOSES ROBINSON, Assistant.²

STATE OF VERMONT, Bennington June 13th 1781.

To the Sheriff of the County of Windham, his Deputy, or Either of the Constables of Westminster, and for want of a proper officer to be had,

To Benjamin Fay Esq^r Greeting—

You are hereby authorised & commanded, in the name and by the authority of the freemen of the State of Vermont, to apprehend the bodies of the above named Judah P. Spooner, Timothy Green, Samuel Avery, Ezra Stiles Esq^{rs} all of Westminster in the County of Windham, & them forthwith bring before the Governor and Council in the Council Chamber in Bennington—And make diligent Search in all Suspected places & Break Locks and Doors for Counterfeit Money. Hereof fail not, & of this Writ & your doings make returns according to law.

p^r order,

JOSEPH FAY, Secy.

Westminster 15th June 1781.³

Then personally served the within Warrant by attaching the bodies of the within named Defendants and have them now in Court.

BENJAMIN FAY, Sheriff.

¹ Probably Daniel Martin, at that time a representative for Putney who was a speculator in money, as the journal of the House discloses.

² This was the title of members of the Executive Council when acting in their capacity as justices of the peace.

³ This may have been the true date of the return, but it appears by the date of the return of the next warrant that two of the arrested parties were in Bennington on the 14th.

STATE OF VERMONT. IN COUNCIL, Bennington 13 June 1781.

To the Sheriff of the County of Bennington, or his Deputy, or either of the Constables of said Town, Greeting,—

You are hereby Comanded, in the name and by the Authority of the freemen of the State of Vermont, to apprehend the bodies of Samuel Avery and Ezra Stiles Esq^r. & cause them to be brought forthwith before this Council to answer a Complaint this day Exhibited by Thomas Porter Esq^r. & Col^o. Ebenezer Walbridge against the said Avery and Stiles suspecting them to be confederate in Counterfeiting the bills of credit of this State. Hereof you may not fail, and return this Writ with your doings thereon.

Given under my hand date above.

By order of Council,

JOSEPH FAY, Sec^y.

Bennington, June 14, 1781.

Then served the within Warrant by apprehending the bodies of the within named Samuel Avery and Ezra Stiles, and have them now before this Council.

JONAS GALUSHA, Sheriff.

STATE OF VERMONT. } County & Town of Bennington, in } Council Chamber, 14 June 1781.

To Sergeant Rufus Branch or M^r. Stephen Hopkins.

You are hereby required and Comanded to take to your assistance three faithful men, with Arms and Ammunition, as soon as this shall come to your hand, and proceed to some narrow passing on the road on the east Mountain that leads to Woodford, and place your Guard at a proper distance from the Road so as to discover all persons who may pass and to Stop and to take into Custody all who you shall find passing to the Eastward, so as not to be discovered, till this Evening, then to return them to Bennington. You will take Special care not to discover yourselves to any who may be passing to the Westward. Hereof you may not fail.

By order of the Governor and Council,

JOSEPH FAY, Sec^y.

According to the directions of the within Warrant, I proceeded to the East Mountain and fulfilled the directions of the within Warrant but found no person passing to the Eastward.

P^r

STEPHEN HOPKINS.

Bennington, June 15th 1781.¹

M^r. Samuel Avery and Ezra Stiles Esquires, who were made prisoners on Suspicion of being confederate in Counterfeiting the bills of Credit of this State, were Examined and Liberated for the present.²

Adjourned until 7 o'Clock Tomorrow Morning.

¹ The probable purpose was to prevent the escape of any body then implicated, or who might be implicated, in the supposed crime of counterfeiting.

² On the 18th a like entry was made as to Mr. Spooner, and also as to John Gould, who was not named in either of the foregoing warrants. At the session of the General Assembly in the preceding April, the issuing of bills of credit by the State to the amount of £25,155 was authorized, and counterfeiting those bills was a capital crime. The bills were to be printed under the inspection of "Matthew Lyon, Edward Harris,

FRIDAY 15 June 1781.

Council met according to adjournment and proceeded to business.

Date above personally appeared Jonathan Hunt Esquire who is Elected Sheriff in and for the County of Windham within this State as principal, Luke Knowlton and Arad Hunt Esquires as Sureties, & acknowledge themselves jointly and Severally Recognized and bound and Ezra Styles Esquires," and were to be delivered to "Honorable John Fassett, Ebenezer Walbridge, and Thomas Porter, Esquires, a committee for signing and numbering said bills."—See Slade's State Papers, p. 424. Mr. Styles, therefore, was one of the committee to inspect the printing. Spooner and Green were the printers employed. What connection Avery and Gould had with the work does not appear. They were both residents of Westminster probably, and it is possible Martin received the counterfeit bill from one of them. However this may be, the examination resulted finally in establishing the innocence of all the parties implicated, as appears from the following entry on the Assembly Journal under date June 21 1781:

The Committee appointed to inspect the press for printing the Bills of Credit &c. made a verbal Report—and one Chaffee and the printer-Boy were examined before this House by John Fassett and Paul Spooner Esq^{rs}. Assis^{ts} relating to Counterfeiting the Bills of Credit of this State and both owned the fact.

EZRA STYLES, Esq., according to the Assembly Journal, represented Keene, N. H., in the Vermont Assembly in Oct. 1781; and according to Slade, EZRA STILES, Esquire, was one of the nine commissioners appointed at that time to settle boundary lines between Vermont and New York and New Hampshire. EZRA STILES, said to be a son of Rev. Dr. Ezra Stiles of New Haven, Conn., came to Westminster at an early day, settled there as an attorney, and "died long before his learned and venerated father," who died in 1795. He was more than once employed by the State in respect to printing, and probably he was the representative for Keene in 1781. See Thompson's Gazetteer, 1824. According to Drake's Biographical Dictionary, Dr. Ezra Stiles, jr., son of Rev. Dr. Stiles, died in North Carolina in 1784.

TIMOTHY GREEN, of New London, Conn., (a descendant of Samuel Green of Cambridge, Mass., the second printer in New England,) established a press at Norwich, Conn., in 1773, and afterward continued the business in New London. JUDAH-PADDOCK SPOONER (he thus printed his name) was a brother in law of Green and served his apprenticeship with him. The two were partners in business at Westminster in 1781. See note ante p. 12; Isaiah Thomas's History of Printing; and Thompson's Vermont, Part II, p. 171.

SAMUEL AVERY of Westminster was deputy sheriff in Windham county in Oct. 1782, and in that capacity executed the sentence of banishment upon sundry violent "Yorkers." A person of the same name—probably another man—was sent to the legislature of New York unto the Treasurer of this State in the Sum of two thousand pounds lawful money for the faithful performance of the said Jonathan in his said office of Sheriff in and for said County in discharging the duty and for the answering of all such Damages as any person or persons shall sustain for any unfaithfulness or neglect in the Execution of said office.¹

His Excellency Gov^r Chittenden desired to be dismissed as one of the Committee of Pay Table. Granted.

On the same day Col. John Strong was elected to fill the vacancy.

Gen. JOHN STRONG was born in Salisbury, Conn., in 1738; married Agnes McCure, (a native of Edinburgh, Scotland,) in 1759; and settled in Addison in 1766. In 1777 he was captured by a party of British and Indians, but was paroled by Gen. Frazer; when, travelling through Vermont in search of his family, he found them at Dorset, where he remained until 1783, and then returned to Addison. He represented Dorset from 1779 to 1783, and Addison from 1784 until 1787—in all seven years. He was assistant judge for Bennington county in 1781 and '82, and chief judge for Addison county from 1785 until 1801—in all eighteen years. He was also judge of probate for Addison county from 1786 until 1802—sixteen years; member of the Council from 1786 until 1803—seventeen years; and a delegate in the Convention of 1791. He was a member of the Congregational church, and a consistent Christian. His death occurred in June, 1816. For other details see Vt. Historical Magazine, Vol. I, pp. 7-10; and see also Deming's Catalogue.

THURSDAY, June 21st [A. M.]

The Council sent back the Report of the Committee passed this House on the petition of Captains Frye Bayley [Trye Bayley in Vt. Historical Magazine, Vol. II, p. 939.] and Nehemiah Lovell [Lovewell] "not concurred with"—Therefore Resolved that a Committee of three be appointed to confer with the Council (or a Committee appointed by them for that purpose) on the subject of said Report, and Report their reasons for not concurring with the same.—The members chosen M^r. Prentice, M^r. Whipple and M^r. [Gideon] Olin.

P. M.

Resolved to reconsider the Resolution accepting the Report of the Committee on the petition of Capt. Frye Bayley and Capt. Nehemiah Lovell and said petition is hereby dismissed.

² These elections were made to fill vacancies occasioned by the refusal of ETHAN ALLEN and BENJAMIN BELLOWS to accept this office, to which they had been elected on the 11th of the preceding April. Hon. HILAND HALL has a copy of a letter written by Ethan Allen, on the 14th of April 1781, and addressed to Gov. CLINTON, in which Allen tendered his own services, and the services of two other Vermont officers, to New York, to defend that State "against their cruel invaders." This letter is explained by Mr. Hall as an attempt to show Gov. Clinton that his distrust of Allen's patriotism was unfounded. Allen had been distrusted from the truce with Carleton in October 1780; he felt bound to defend himself; and he did so by his letter to Congress March 9 1781, accompanied by Beverly Robinson's letters, and by communicating the same documents to the Vermont Assembly on the 12th of April. Two days thereafter he made the third movement for the same purpose by this letter to Clinton. Remembering only the hostile relations of Allen and Clinton, this letter will be deemed extraordinary; but remembering further, that Allen compelled Carleton to include New York as well as Vermont in the truce, his act and his letter are seen to be in perfect harmony. About this time the command of all the Vermont troops in service was given to ROGER ENOS, but precisely how does not appear from any record. As the governor could not serve in the field as commander-in-chief without the assent of the Council, the editor presumes that Governor Chittenden, with the approval of the Council, designated Gen. Enos to take his place. "Gen. Enos commands this State's troops in service," wrote Ira Allen to Gen. Haldimand, July 10 1781. Maj. Gen. ROGER ENOS entered the continental army at the opening of the revolutionary war, and in the expedition of Arnold through the forest of Maine to Quebec in the autumn of 1775, he commanded the rear division, consisting of eleven hundred men. When the difficulties were so great as to make the enterprise questionable, a council of war was held, and under the spur of Arnold's zeal it was determined to go on, and Enos was ordered to bring up his strongest men and leave the sick and feeble to return; but he took the responsibility of returning with his whole command. For this he was at first harshly censured, but ultimately his conduct was excused by the circumstances of the case. Gen. Enos first appeared in Vermont history in March 1780, when the town of Enosburgh was granted to him and his associates. He appears next as above, commander of all Vermont troops in service, when he was among the few cognizant of the Haldimand correspondence, and governed his military movements accordingly. His residence was in Hartland until after 1791, as the record shows that he represented that town on several occasions from October 1782 to October 1792. The closing years of his life were spent with his daughter, Mrs. Ira Allen, in Colchester, where he died, Oct. 6 1808, in the seventy-third year of his age. He was a major general in the Vermont militia.

Lying East of said Stratton, and that the number of 10 persons be added as proprietors in said Township of Jamaca, and the Surveyor General is hereby directed to draw the bounds of said Charter accordingly.

Resolved that Judge Jones¹ be and is hereby directed to insert the name of Nathan [Nathaniel] S. Prentice Esquire in the Commission for the Judges of the County Court for the County of Washington as an Assistant Judge.

Met according to Adjournment.

Agreeable to the request of the General Assembly of yesterday, Resolved that Colonel Henry Amanuel Lutterloh & Major Thomas Coggsel be and they are hereby Authorised & [empowered] to Locate a tract of Land Six Miles Square in some unappropriated part of this State in such form as to join in form to some Town or Towns Granted by this State & make returns of such Location to Ira Allen Esq. Surveyor General of this State in order to obtain a Charter of Incorporation.²

Per order of his Excellency the Governor and Council,

JOSEPH FAY, Secy.

Adjourned to 8 o'Clock Tomorrow Morning.

¹The territory on the east side of Connecticut river was divided into four probate districts, named Keene, Claremont, Dresden, and Haverhill.

Two incidents occurred in the Assembly on this day which illustrate peculiarities in the relations of the two houses under the first constitution. One was the presence of Councillor Fay in the House to make an important motion; and the other was the passage of an act by the House against the opinion of the Council.

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, June 26 1781.

On motion of Doct^r Fay,

Ordered that the doors be shut.

Resolved that a Committee of five to join a Committee from the Council be appointed to take into consideration the petitions from the Massachusetts line [officers] and Col^o. H. E. Lutterloh and associates, and Report.—The members chosen M^r Strong [John of Dorset,] M^r [William] Page, M^r [Edward] Harris, M^r [Isaac] Wyman, and M^r [Ebenezer] Curtiss.

On the 27th the Assembly voted grants in accordance with the petitions, and they were executed by the Governor and Council.—See observations on land grants, ante pp. 61-64.

The Governor and Council having proposed that the "Act" passed this day "to prevent turning streams of water out of their natural course" be referred to the next session—the question was put whether the said Act be referred; and it passed in the negative. The said Act was then read the 3^d time and Enacted into a Law of this State.

²HENRY EMANUEL LUTTERLOTH of New York was appointed Deputy Quarter Master General by Washington, June 30 1777. The town of Albany was chartered by this resolution by the name of Lutterloh. Maj. THOMAS COGSWELL was from Haverhill, Mass., and ultimately a citizen of Gilmanton, N. H.

Resolved that Brigadier Generals John Glover and John Patterson be & they are hereby Empowered and fully Authorised to Locate a tract of Lands six miles Square in some unappropriated part of this State in such form as to join some town or town's Granted by this State & make returns to Ira Allen Esquire Surveyor General of this State in order to the Obtaining a Charter of Incorporation.¹

By order of the Governor and Council, JOSEPH FAY, Sec^y.
Adjourned to 8 o'Clock Tomorrow Morning.²

THURSDAY 28th June 1781.

Council met according to Adjournment and having passed a number of Acts and Transacted some other business of the day Resolved to Adjourn to 8 o'Clock Tomorrow Morning.

FRIDAY 29th June 1781.

Resolved that Warrants be issued and directed [to] the respective Sheriffs in this State to Collect the British prisoners which may be found within the limits of this State and Cause them to be Safely conveyed to Head Quarters at Castleton by the 10 day of July next.

Resolved that Joseph Fay Esquire be and he is hereby appointed Commissary General of Prisoners for this State and that his Excellency the Governor be requested to make out a Commission for that purpose.³

Whereas Colonel William Williams⁴ has made application for taking off part of the Granting fees for the lands Granted him formerly known

² From the Assembly Journal:

Resolved that it be recommended to the board of war to order about one hundred men to be Stationed at the garrison at Pittsford for the support of it.

³ It appears from The Haldimand Correspondence that as early as May 22 1781, Ira Allen had engaged that Haldimand should hear from Vermont about the middle of July, adding: "he thinks the commissioners will by that time be sent to exchange some prisoners, (provided he has a certainty of their being exchanged,) and will have power finally to determine whether Vermont is to be admitted as a province or not." Both Allen and Fay were commissioned in July; and Fay met Haldimand's agents about the first of August, but he was not authorised to close with the offer of the British general.

⁴ Col. WILLIAM WILLIAMS moved from Northborough, Mass., to Marlborough, Vt., in 1769; and to Wilmington previous to 1777, as in that year he represented the last named town in the convention at Windsor by the name of Reedsborough, whereupon Resolved that the Granting fees for Each right be Eight pounds in Silver or the value.

Whereas it has been represented to this Council that there is not a supply of provisions in Store for the use of the Troops of this State, and Whereas it is found Impracticable to prepare the Same

Therefore Resolved that the Secretary be and he is hereby directed to Issue his Warrants in behalf of the Governor and Council to the Commissary General to seize such quantities of provisions as necessity may require for the Support of the Troops of this State, and from such persons only as have more than for their families use, for which a reasonable price must be given.

Resolved that the price of the Township Granted to Col^o. Ira Allen & Company in February last lying north of Cambridge be nine pounds L. Money for Each Right, & that there be sixty five in number Exclusive of five public Rights.

Resolved that the Township of Land Granted to Col^o. Ira Allen in Feb^y last which is to be laid out between Misisque Bay and the main Lake to Include Windmill point, to have an equal number of proprietors to the quantity of Land as is Allowed in other Townships Granted by this State, that Each proprietor pay Twelve pounds for Each right.

which adopted the constitution. By that convention he was appointed one of a committee of three to procure arms for the State. He served in what is called "the French war," which ended in the treaty of peace signed at Paris Feb. 10 1763. In June 1775 Col. Williams offered his services to New York, in conjunction with Benjamin Wait and Joab Hoisington, to raise a regiment to serve as minute-men for the defence of Cumberland county against "regulars, Roman Catholics, and the savages at the northward." July 4 1775, Ethan Allen and Seth Warner commended him very highly for an appointment as major by Congress in Warner's regiment, should opportunity occur; and in August 1777 he distinguished himself as commander of a regiment at the battle of Bennington. "As an officer," said B. H. HALL, "he was brave, energetic, skillful, and humane: as a citizen, enterprising, active, and progressive: as a neighbor, kind, polite, and attentive. The elegance and symmetry of his form were as perfect as his manners were agreeable." He was held in high estimation by the inhabitants of the various towns in which he dwelt at different times, and though of a wandering disposition, could easily accommodate himself to any circumstances in which he might be placed." Col. Williams was a deputy from Cumberland county in the provincial Congress of New York for the sessions commencing in May and November 1775, and May 1776; and representative of Wilmington in the General Assembly of Vermont from October 1779 to October 1781. In 1782 he seems to have been a resident of Marlborough again; but after the revolutionary war had been closed, he removed to Lower Canada, where he died in 1823.—See Vol. 1; also Vt. Hist. Soc.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICE.²

BEZALEEL WOODWARD was a native of Lebanon, Conn., and a graduate of Yale college in 1764. He was professor of mathematics and natural philosophy in Dartmouth college, married a daughter of its first President Wheelock, and continued in that institution, of which he was a trustee, until his death, Aug. 25, 1804. He seems to have been active from the first in promoting the union of the western New Hampshire towns with Vermont. He represented Dresden, [the college lands in Hanover,] on the first union in 1778, and again on the second in 1781, officiating as Clerk of the House at one time, and at another as Secretary pro tempore of the Governor and Council. During the second union he was appointed judge of probate for the district of Dresden, one of a committee to revise the laws of the State, and one of the agents to Paul Spooner was elected in his place. Oct. 23, Col. Caldwell, of Cambridge, N. Y., declined, and Jonas Fay was elected. Oct. 26, Bezaleel Woodward, of Dresden, N. attorney, was judge of the superior court of Vermont from Oct. 1781 until Feb. 13, 1782, chief judge of the court of common pleas in New Hampshire in 1784, judge of the N. H. supreme court in 1790, and chief justice in 1795. He was United States senator for New Hampshire from 1801 to 1805.—See Drake's Dictionary of American Biography. The list of judges of the superior court of Vermont for 1781-2 in Slade's State Papers, and every subsequent printed list, is inaccurate. On the resignation of judge Simeon Olcott, Feb. 13, 1782, Samuel Fletcher was elected and declined to accept, when John Throop was elected. The judges from October 1781 until the dissolution of the eastern and western unions in February 1782, were Elisha Payne, Paul Spooner, John Fassett jr., Simeon Olcott, and Jonas Fay. Subsequent to the dissolution of the unions the list was as follows: Moses Robinson, Paul Spooner, John Fassett jr., John Throop, and Jonas Fay. In Slade's State Papers, pp. 553-5, it will be seen that Jonas Fay, Ira Allen, and Jeremiah Clark sat as assistant judges of the superior court when they had not been elected as such. This was done under the act of 1779 establishing the court, which provided that in case of necessity through the absence or inability of judges to form a quorum, any member of the Executive Council might sit as judge. See Slade's State Papers p. 299.

¹ Thus in the copy of the record in the office of the Secretary of State. The fact was that the money was wanted for the expenses of the agents of the State at Congress and elsewhere, as Vermont bills of credit would hardly serve their purpose. These were the "voyages" in view. This use of the word Ira Allen was apt to adopt, though journeys or missions would have been better.

[MONDAY, Oct. 15, 1781.]

Council met according to Adjournment.

Voted that M^r. Olcott & M^r. Robinson join a Committee of the House to provide ways and means for supplying the Treasury and consider the state of paper money.

Voted that M^r. Brownson & M^r. Spooner join a Committee of the House to Concert measures for Supplying the Army.

¹ Mooretown, now Bradford. This town was originally "laid out to himself and some others associated with him," by Sir Henry Moore, Governor of New York. May 3, 1770, says HILAND HALL, it was patented to Hon. William Smith of New York, judge and historian. A committee appointed on this subject by the General Assembly, reported in 1781, "That in the year 1770 said township was patented by the then Gov^r of New York to Sir Henry Moore's heirs, whose agent, William Smith Esq^r of New York, in said Heirs behalf, conveyed to Samuel Sleeper Esq^r agent from [for] the Inhabitants of said town, three thousand acres," &c. Evidently the town was originally named for Gov. Moore. See Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. I, p. 154; H. Hall's Early History, pp. 93-95; and Manuscript Assembly Journal, 1781-1785, p. 28.

And that Samuel Knights be and he is hereby appointed a justice of the peace within and for the County of Windham.

Attest, THOMAS TOLMAN, Dep. Sec^y.

The following is a Copy of a Resolution & Grant made by the General Assembly to Col^o. W^m. Barton viz^t—

STATE OF VERMONT. IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, October 23, 1781.

Resolved that there be and hereby is Granted unto Colonel William Barton and Company, being sixty-five in number, a Township of Land by the name of Providence, and that the Surveyor General be and he is hereby directed to Survey to the said Col^o. Barton and Company as soon as may be said Township to contain the quantity of six miles square, upon the unappropriated Lands Lying near to Lake Memphremagog, and the Governor and Council be and are hereby requested, as soon as the return of the Surveyor General be made as aforesaid, to make out a Charter of Incorporation to the said Colonel Barton and Company of said Township under such restrictions and reservations and for such fees as they shall judge proper.

Resolved that this Assembly having the highest sense of the Merit of Colonel William Barton as an active, Brave and Intreppe officer in the was a private in Col. Van Rensselaer's New York regiment, but had been commissioned by Vermont as lieutenant colonel. He was arrested with others at Lansingburgh, early in October 1781, by Col. Van Rensselaer, but made his escape, collected a body of men (or rather of Col. V. R.'s prisoners who escaped with Fairbanks,) and successfully resisted an attempt at their re-arrest, wounding two of the New York soldiers.—See Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, pp. 184, 188. The petition referred to above was for a grant of confiscated land, which was for the time being refused.

¹ The bill was entitled "An act for raising sixpence on the poles and rateable estate," &c., and the Council preposed to substitute the words "An act for raising sixpence on the pound," &c. The Assembly record is that the amended act "was read and after some debate the act as it was passed yesterday was again read and passed into a Law." This was an effective way, if not a courteous one, of rejecting the amendment proposed by the Council. However, on the next day the bill was amended at the suggestion of Ira Allen, and then committed for further amendment.

STATE OF VERMONT. IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY October 26 1781.

Resolved that this house will proceed to choose by Ballot a Committee of three to burn the bills of Credit of this State agreeable to an Act

¹ Gen. WILLIAM BARTON was born in Providence, R. I., in 1747, and died there Oct. 22, 1831. July 10, 1777, as Lieut. Col. in the Rhode Island militia, he with a small party crossed Narragansett Bay, passing three British frigates, landed between Newport and Bristol ferry, and captured the British Brigadier, afterwards Lieut. General, Richard Prescott. For this service Congress honored Barton with the presentation of a sword and a commission as Colonel. His biographer, Mrs. C. M. WILLIAMS, adds that a grant of land to him in Vermont was made by Congress, which is an error. In dealing with this land Gen. Barton became entangled in the law, was imprisoned many years in Vermont for debt, and until his release in 1825 by the generosity of the Marquis de LAFAYETTE on his visit to the state. Col. Barton was wounded in action in Aug. 1778 and disabled from further service. The name of the town was originally given from the Colonel's birth-place, but was changed to Barton in his honor. The title of General was probably conferred upon him in the militia service.—See Life of, by Mrs. C. M. Williams, 1839; and Drake's Dictionary of American Biography.

²The trial of land-titles was forbidden in February 1779, and the act was repeated in October 1780. In October 1781 the first "Betterment Act" was passed and at the same time the previous prohibitory acts were repealed. Again in 1783 and 1784 the trial of land-titles was prohibited, and this prohibition continued until the enactment of the second "Betterment Act" in October 1785.—See Slade's State Papers, pp. 388, 405, 442, 488, 494, 500.

passed this day. The Ballot being taken, the Hon^{ble} Timothy Brownson, John Fassett [jr.] Esq^{rs}. and Captain Mathew Lyon were elected.¹

Resolved that the paymaster deliver £200 to Captain Luther Richardson taking his receipt for the same, he the said Richardson being accountable to deliver the Same to Captain Ward Bayley and the Officers and Soldiers of his Company at Upper Cochos, (being three months wages for said Company nearly.) and return proper accounts thereof to the said pay Master within two months from the date hereof.²

Attest, THOMAS TOLMAN, D. Secy.

Hon^{ble} Joseph Bowker Esquire moved for a dismission from Council during the present Session, which [was] accordingly Granted.

The Governor and Council was requested to attend the House for the Election of a Judge of the Supreme Court in the room of the Hon^{ble} Beza. Woodward Esq^r who declines serving. Attendance was accordingly Given and the Ballots being taken the Hon^{ble} Simeon Olcott Esquire was elected.

A Resolution of the General Assembly was read reconsidering the Grant of Brookfield and ordered to lie on the table.

An Act of the General Assembly ascertaining the fees of the Superior Court was read and Concurred.

Recognizence of £10.000.

The Hon^{ble} Timothy Brownson & John Fasset [jr.] and Captain Mathew Lyon appeared and acknowledged themselves jointly and severally Recognized to the Treasurer of this State in the penal Sum of Ten thousand pounds Lawful Money for the faithful performance of their duty as a Committee appointed by the Legislature of this State this day for burning and effectually destroying the bills of Credit of this State emitted or bearing date February 1781,³ & took the Oath of Office required by Law.

£10.000.

Attest, THOMAS TOLMAN, D. Secy.

Adjourned to 9 oClock Tomorrow Morning.

¹The bills destroyed were those redeemed by reception in payment for taxes.

²*Coos* signified the pines. Upper Coos was the region of pines on both sides of the Connecticut river near Lunenburgh, and Lower Coos was the region below the fifteen miles falls in the vicinity of Newbury. The Indian inhabitants were called Coossucks.—Rev. Dr. SILAS MCKEEN, in Vt. Hist. Mag., Vol. II, p. 802. Captain, afterward Colonel, WARD BAYLEY commanded three posts in the upper Coos and was a very efficient officer. He resided first at Maidstone and then at Guildhall. Capt. LUTHER RICHARDSON was one of a committee to run the lines of Guildhall in 1783.—See Vt. Hist. Mag. Vol. I.

³The only act authorizing the emission of state bills of credit was passed in April 1781 ; hence it appears from the above entry, and also from a copy of one of the bills, that they were antedated, "February, 1781"—no particular day stated. For fac simile of a Vermont bill of credit, see Thompson's Vermont, Part II, p. 134.

IN COUNCIL Oct. 26, 1781.

Read & Concurred. Attest, THOMAS TOLMAN, D. S.

Resolved that the fees on each right of Land in the Township of Providence, Granted to Colonel William Barton and Company, be nine pounds hard money to be paid the first day of March next, Subject to such reservations and restrictions as has been heretofore usually made on lands granted on like circumstances, and that the fees on each right granted to Nathan Fisk Esq^r. be nine pounds for each Right.

His Honor Elisha Payne Esquire Attended as Lieutenant Governor being duly qualified to that Office According to Law.

A Commission was made out for Noah Sabin Esq^r. Judge of Probate for the district of Westminster.

Resolved that the Treasurer be and he is hereby directed to pay unto Edward Harriss Esq^r. the Sum of five pounds in hard money, it being part of the Sum which he has expended in the Service of this State.

Attest, THOMAS TOLMAN, D. Sec^y.

STATE OF VERMONT. IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, Oct. 27 1781.

On motion made to choose a Surveyor General the Ballots being taken the Hon^{ble} Ira Allen was Elected.

¹ Judge ISRAEL SMITH settled in Thetford in 1766, and was an active man in town and county affairs and for national independence. He represented the town for many years in the Assembly, and held the offices of judge of probate, and county judge, having been first assistant judge from 1786 to 1793, and chief judge from 1793 to 1797. He held offices under New York from 1770 to 1777.—See Eastern Vermont, and Vt. Hist. Mag. Vol. II. Governor Israel Smith was another person.

² This grant seems to cover that part of Weston which lies north of Landgrove. Weston was formed from a part of the original Andover, with the addition, it seems, of this gore. SAMUEL BENTON was among the first settlers of Cornwall, and represented that town from 1787 to 1790 and in 1791.—See Deming's Catalogue.

On motion made to choose a Commissary General the Ballots being taken Joseph Farnsworth¹ was declared Elected.

¹THEODORE WOODBRIDGE of Rhode Island, Major in the continental service. He was in the list of officers entitled to half pay, &c., under the acts of Congress.—Records of the Revolutionary War, by W. T. R. Saffell, 1858.

²This could hardly be JOSEPH JONES, member of the Continental Congress from Virginia, though under certain conditions he was not unfriendly to the independence of Vermont. He however censured the course of Vermont in securing influence in the army and in Congress by her land grants.—See Letter of Joseph Jones to Washington, Feb. 27, 1783, in Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, p. 326.

³A charter of a town named Woodbridge was subsequently executed, but the grantees failed to comply with the prescribed conditions, and the charter was given by Gov. Chittenden to Ira Allen, as security for the indebtedness of the State to Allen at the time. The full history of this affair belongs to the date of 1788-9, and here therefore it is sufficient to say, that Gov. Chittenden was at first condemned and failed of a re-election in September 1789, but when the facts were fully understood the confidence of the people was again restored to him.—See Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, pp. 479-'80.

⁴This entry of subsequent action seems to have been made here to complete the record as to this grant. Another case like it occurred on the same day.

the dissolution of the Western Union in 1782, another grant of land was voted to them, to be contiguous to the small lakes or ponds southward of Lake Memphremagog. In fact the grant covered the town of Marshfield.

The following account of the Indians above named is in Hoyt's Indian Wars, the author referring to Massachusetts Hist. Collections, Vol. IX, p. 99—old series:

To the west of Connecticut river, extending a short distance west of the Hudson, and into the present state of Vermont, was a nation called Mohicans, or Muhheakunnucks; their chief seat was at Albany, [N. Y.] called by them Pempotawuthut, or the place of fire; the Stockbridge tribe belonged to this nation. Muhhaakunnuck in their language is said to signify a great water, or sea, that is constantly in motion, either flowing or ebbing; and these Indians state that they came from a country far to the west, where they lived in towns, by the side of a great water or sea; and were very numerous until compelled to scatter by reason of a great famine.

Resolved that there be 1000 Copies [printed] of the Report of the Grand Committee at the Session held in Charleston this present Instant October, and that the same be promulgated for the Information of the Inhabitants of this and the United States in General.¹

Resolved that Henry Silsby be and he is hereby appointed a Justice of the Peace in the County of Washington [in New Hampshire] for the time being & the register of said County is hereby directed to enter his name in the Commission of the Justices of said County.

This Council is adjourned to the last Wednesday in January next then to meet at Bennington.

THE END OF CHARLESTON SESSION.

The General Assembly closed its session on Saturday the 27th, but many of the members were in Charlestown on the 28th, when very exciting intelligence was received. Ira Allen thus described the scene :

In October, 1781, the Legislature met at Charlestown, in the East Unions, when the Government of New Hampshire sent a Major Reynolds, with two hundred men, as was supposed, to stop the election and session of the Legislature ; the friends of Vermont advised the Major, if he had any instructions from New Hampshire, which were hostile to Vermont and the East Union, that it would be for the sake of humanity adviseable for him to keep them to himself, as his force would not avail : this he prudently did, and the Assembly convened and proceeded to business without opposition. In the mean time, General St. Leger, at the head of the British army from Canada, ascended the Lake Champlain, and rested at Ticondaroga ; while General Enos had the command of the troops of Vermont on the frontiers, and his headquarters at Cas-

Resolved that Col^o Payne be and is hereby requested to inform this House whether he will accept of his Election to the office of Deputy Gov^r of this State.

Col^o Payne informed the House that he would accept that office.

Resolved that his honor the Deputy Gov^r have fifty pounds for his Salary for the present year.

The Committee appointed to prepare Instructions for the Board of War for the year ensuing Made a verbal Report—Whereupon,

Resolved that the powers and Instructions heretofore given the Board of War be and they are hereby considered as their powers and instructions till the next Session of Assembly.

Resolved that the additional Sum of fifty pounds be granted unto his Excellency the Governor for his extraordinary services the year past.

leton ; the General, and a number of officers under him, were fully acquainted with the negotiations with the British in Canada, in particular Colonels Fletcher and Walbridge. Notwithstanding, it became necessary to keep up appearances, by sending frequently small scouts to Champlain to observe the movements of the enemy. One of these scouts fell in with a party of General St. Leger's ; some shots were exchanged ; Serjeant Tupper, who commanded the scout from Vermont, was killed on the spot, and his men retreated : the body was decently buried, and General St. Leger sent all his cloaths, with an open letter, to General Enos, informing him of his regret for the fate of the serjeant, and made an apology for his death. Perhaps this was done to try the spirit and disposition of the inhabitants, previous to the publication of the proclamation as conceded to at Skeensborough the September before. The dispatch and apparel were publicly delivered to General Enos, which made considerable noise among the troops : many of them were not acquainted with the subject of the negotiation and armistice ; and some that were, had no objection to raise difficulties, in hopes of gaining popularity.

Generals Enos, Colonels Fletcher and Walbridge, wrote letters, and sent immediately an express to Governor Chittenden at Charlestown, announcing the arrival at Ticondaroga of the British army ; wherein they blended public matters and private negotiation ; Mr. Hathaway, the messenger, not being in the secret, failed not to proclaim the extraordinary message of General St. Leger through the streets of Charlestown, till he came to the Governor, which happened in the recess of the Legislature, and occasioned crowds of people to follow, to hear the news ; the Governor and others were sitting in a large room ; amongst whom were some persons that were eager to learn the negotiations that were generally supposed to be carried on between the British in Canada and Vermont, to make an ill use thereof. The Governor opened one of the letters ; he thought it prudent to peruse it himself before he allowed it to be publicly read. These letters were found to contain both public and private information, which occasioned some change of letters between the Governor, Messrs. Brownson and Fassett, who were in the secret, and next to the Governor. In this confused moment, Major Runnals came in, and enquired of Colonel Ira Allen what was the reason that General St. Leger was sorry that Serjeant Tupper was killed ? Mr. Allen said that he could not tell. Mr. Runnals repeated the question ; and Mr. Allen observed, that good men were sorry when good men were killed, or met with misfortune, which might be the case with General St. Leger. This answer enraged Mr. Runnals ; and he again loudly enquired what reasons could possibly induce a British General to be sorry when his enemies were killed, and to send his cloaths to the widow ? Colonel Allen then requested Major Runnals to go at the head of his regiment, and demand the reasons of his sorrow, and not stay there asking impertinent questions, eating up the country's provisions, doing nothing when the frontiers were invaded. Very high words passed between the Major and Colonel Allen, till Mr. Runnals left the room. This manœuvre drew all the attention from said letters ; it was then proposed that the Board of War should be convened ; and the Governor then summoned the members of the Board of War to appear as soon as possible in his chamber, leaving Mr. Hathaway to detail the news to the populace, the Board of War being all in the secret. New letters were made out from General Enos, Colonels Fletcher and Walbridge's letters, and, for the information and satisfaction of the public, read in council and assembly for the originals, and then returned to the Governor. Those letters contained every thing but the existing negociations which prudence and policy dictated to be separated from the other part of said letters.

In the mean time, Colonel Allen and Major Fay wrote to the British Commissioners, who were with General St. Leger, on the subject of their former negociations, in which they gave a list of the names of the members of the Legislature, with marks, denoting the new members, from which the change appeared great. They suggested the capture of Lord Cornwallis and his army, and added that, whether true or not, it had the same effect upon the people, who soon hoped for better news. In this critical situation, they thought it improper to publish the proposed proclamation, as several changes and circumstances seemed to presage more happy events, that should soon make all right. The packet containing Colonel Allen and Major Fay's letter was delivered at Ticondaroga about ten o'clock in the morning. About an hour after, an express arrived from the southward, which was supposed to contain the news of the capture of Lord Cornwallis and his army; for before evening, the troops, stores, &c. were embarked, and with a fair wind returned to Canada. Thus ended the campaign of 1781, with the accidental loss of only one man, on the extensive frontiers of Vermont, exposed to an army of ten thousand men; yet she did not incur any considerable debt. Such were the happy effects of these negociations.—Ira Allen's History, in Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, pp. 436-438.

The negociations referred to were with Gen. Haldimand; and the purpose of the proclamation was to declare Vermont to be a British province.—See Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II. Daniel Chipman stated that the expurgated copies of the letters above referred to, were prepared by Nathaniel Chipman.—See Life of Chipman, p. 38.

WAR WITH VERMONT PROPOSED BY NEW HAMPSHIRE AND ATTEMPTED BY NEW YORK.

The missing records alluded to above contained proceedings of the Governor and Council at one of the most critical and important periods in the history of the State, when, at the same time, war was contemplated and prepared for by New Hampshire, on the one side, but was avoided by the adroitness of Ira Allen and the firmness of Gov. Chittenden and Lieut. Gov. Payne; and actually attempted by New York, on the other side, but was defeated by an overpowering force of the militia of the "Western District," so called, and from Vermont proper.—See Appendix H.

Hon ^l Joseph Bowker,	John Fassett,
Timothy Brownson,	Sam ^l Fletcher &
Moses Robinson,	Benj ^a . Emmons.

Adjourned to 8 oClock Tomorrow.

TUESDAY 5 February 1782.

Council Met According to Adjournment and Adjourned to 9 oClock Tomorrow Morning.

WEDNESDAY 6 February 1782.

Council Met According to Adjournment & Adjourned to 2 oClock Afternoon to meet at Major Jos. Fay's.

Council Met According to Adjournment and Adjourned to 9 oClock Tomorrow.

THURSDAY 7 February 1782.

Council Met According to Adjournment.

His Excellency the Governor moved the Council for an order on the Treasurer for two years salary which is yet behind—Whereupon

Resolved to make out an order as follows—

BENNINGTON 7th February 1782.

Sir—You are hereby directed to pay to His Excellency Thomas Chittenden Esq^r four hundred pounds L. Money in silver for his Salary Granted him by the Vermont Assembly for the years 1780 and 1781.

Pr Order of Council,

Jos. FAY, Sec^y.

Ira Allen Esq^r. Treasurer.

Adjourned to 2 oClock P. M. then to meet at this place.

Met According to Adjournment and Adjourned to 9 oClock Tomorrow.

FRIDAY 8 February 1782.

Council Met According to Adjournment, at which time the papers relative to the dispute Subsisting Between the Grantees of Brookfield and Wickham proprietors was read [and] ordered to be lodged on the files.

Adjourned to 2 oClock P. M. then to meet at Major Joseph Fay's.

Met According to Adjournment.

Having made a determination relative to the dispute between the proprietors of Brookfield and Wickham,¹ Resolved as follows, viz^t

Whereas Mr. Phinehas Lyman and his associates in October 1779 [Nov. 6, 1780,] Obtained a Grant of a Township of Land in this State by the name of Brookfield,

And Whereas a Matter of dispute arose between Colonel Israel Williams, Israel Williams Jun^r & Mr. Pattridge² who Claim to be Associated with Mr. Lyman in the aforesaid Grant, and have paid money therefor,

And Whereas the Governor recommended to them and Each of them to settle the matter in dispute by submitting it to Arbitrators Mutually chosen, and as it appears that they have not agreed upon a submission as aforesaid but each party chusing to submit the matter in dispute to the Governor and Council of this State—Mr. Lyman appearing and Mess^{rs} Williams & Pattridge not appearing altho notified, this Council having heard the evidence and agreements that were exhibited on both Parties—

It is the opinion of this Council, that as Colonel Israel Williams, Israel Williams Jun^r and Mr. Patridge did not choose to be Adventurers with Mr. Lyman in Soliciting said Grant until almost one year after the Grant was made, they therefore cannot be considered as Grantees without the permission of Lyman, And as said Money was rec^d through mistake it ought to be returned.

Attest, JOSEPH FAY, Sec^y.

Resolved that the Proprietors of Moortown [Bradford,] sixty five in number pay for each acre [right ?] nine pounds L. Money in silver.

Adjourned to 9 oClock Tomorrow & Adjourned to 2 oClock P. M. and Continued the Adjournment to one oClock Monday next.

MONDAY 11th February 1782.

Council Met According to Adjournment, and being informed that the General Assembly had formed a house His Excellency and Council laid before the house a Letter from His Excellency General Washington, one from General Wolcott, and sundry other letters of a public nature which was publicly read after which the Governor and Council returned to Mr. Robinson's.³

¹“Wickham” is a mystery the editor cannot solve. All the parties in this contest seem to have been claimants to Brookfield.

²Probably Col. Israel Williams and Samuel Patridge of Hatfield, Mass.—See B. H. Hall's Eastern Vermont.

³Undoubtedly the most important letters were those named above.—For letter of Gen. Washington see Appendix H. Gen. Wolcott's letter must have been of like tenor, and written with a knowledge of Washington's views. Both letters were written in Philadelphia, Washington's on the 1st and Wolcott's on the 18th of January 1782. OLIVER WOLCOTT, son of Gov. Roger Wolcott, was born at Windsor, Conn., Nov. 26, 1726, and graduated at Yale in 1746; served as a captain in the French war, and commissioner of Indian affairs in 1775; was member of the continental Congress and signer of the Declaration of Independence in 1776, colonel in active service under Gates, participating in the capture of Burgoyne, and for his services on that occasion was made brigadier general on the field. He was lieutenant governor of Connecticut from 1786 to 1796, and governor in 1796-7. He died in Litchfield Dec. 1, 1797.—See Blake's and Drake's Biographical Dictionaries. For the purity of his character, the value of his services, and his friendship for Vermont, Oliver Wolcott probably ranked next to Washington in the esteem of the leading Vermonters in his day. Chief Justice SAMUEL CHURCH, of Litchfield, Conn., in his address at the Centennial Jubilee at Salisbury Conn., in 1841, declared that the policy of Vermont, in the Haldimand Correspondence and the Eastern and Western Unions, was shaped at a council of the friends of Vermont in Litchfield county, held at the house of Oliver Wolcott. The statement, as quoted in John M. Weeks's History of Salisbury, Vt., p. 216, was as follows:

The spirit of emigration, that same Anglo-Saxon temperament which brought our ancestors into the country, and which constantly pushes forward to the trial of unknown fortune, began its manifestations before the revolution, and sought its gratification first in Vermont. Vermont is the child of Litchfield county. We gave to her her first governor, and three governors [Thomas and Martin Chittenden, and Skinner;] beside as many as three senators in Congress, [Chipman, Seymour, and Phelps,] and also many of her most efficient founders and early distinguished citizens, Chittendens, Allens, Galushas, Chipmans, Skinner and others. The attitude assumed by Vermont in the early stages of the revolutionary war, in respect to Canada on the north, and the threatening states of New York and New Hampshire on either side, was peculiar and delicate, and demanded the most adroit policy to secure her purpose of independence. In her dilemma, her most sagacious men resorted to the councils of her old friends of Litchfield county, and it is said that her final course was shaped, and her designs accomplished, by the advice of a confidential council, assembled at the house of Governor Wolcott, in the village of Litchfield.

Accompanying the letters of Washington and Wolcott were several relating to the collisions in New Hampshire and New York, together with copies of Gov. Chittenden's letters and orders in reply. The most important of these, so far as preserved, are given in the appropriate places.—See Appendix H.

¹This custom in the early history of Vermont legislatures, substantially supplied the place of the modern executive message. On this occasion the budget so fully showed the gravity and dignity of state legislation at that time as to deserve notice. The report of the committee was as follows:

The Committee appointed to arrange the most necessary business brought in the following Report, viz—

1st. To call upon his Excellency the Gov^r and his Council to lay before the House all official papers relating to the Interest of this State received since the Session in Oct. last.

2^d. To call upon the Commiss^{rs} appointed by the Legislature to treat

The Committee to whom was referred the petition of John Payne and Joseph Fisk, relating to a right of land in Brookfield [made a report] which is as follows viz^t—

BENNINGTON 11 February 1782.

To His Excellency the Governor and the Council of the State of Vermont—Your Committee appointed to rectify any Mistakes that might heretofore have been made in the return of the Actual settlers in the Township of Brookfield within this State Beg Leave to report further that the Names of Jedediah Hyde, Amasa Hyde and Ichabod Hyde, remain as formerly, their Agent obliging himself in behalf of himself and constituents to Exchange their Obligations for Lands in said Brookfield which they hold against M^r. Nubal Cross,¹ for the Obligations said Cross has Against said Hyde and his constituents for said Lands, at the request of M^r. Cross.

Your Committee further report that Paul Spooner Esq^r. have his name inserted in the Grant of the Township of Brookfield in the room of Noah or John Payne 3^d he engaging to convey a deed to John Payne 3^d if it shall appear on trial that the whole of said right properly belongs to him, or said Payne 3^d and said Noah Payne in partnership if on trial it shall appear just that the aforesaid right should be so given, the Trial to be had before John Throop & Paul Spooner Esquires on the application of either John Payne 3^d or Noah Payne and that the opposite party be duly cited to appear at time and place Agreed on, to be held at the expence of the party applying.

with Commiss^{rs} to be appointed by New-York and New-Hampshire relative to the boundary lines of this State to make their Report.

3^d. To call upon the Committee for Revising the Laws.

4th. To call upon the Auditors of accounts for their Report.

5th. To adopt proper measures for the defence of this State against the common Enemy, &c.

6th. That the Surveyor Gen^l be called upon to lay before the House a survey of the State, as far as he has obtained it, as also a plan of all the townships granted and the vacant lands ungranted.

7th. To call upon the Treasurer to give an account of what paper money has been received into the Treasury since Oct^r. last and how it has been disposed of.

8th. To lay before the Hon^{ble} the Cont^l. Congress in a decent and spirited manner our determination to Support our just Rights, and repeat our desire to be admitted into the federal Union.

9th. That a proper Check be put upon the Treasurer to enable the Auditors to adjust his accounts.

10th. To make provision for the payment of the Soldiers in the State's service in the last Campaign.

11th. To take under consideration the paper currency.

12th. To take proper measures to regulate the press.

MOSES ROBINSON, Chairman.

The last item was not legislation on the liberty of the newspaper press, there being no newspaper at that date, but to revive the then suspended newspaper at Westminster, or provide for the removal of the printing materials and the establishment of a newspaper at Bennington. This project resulted in the establishment, in the next year, of two newspapers, one at Bennington and the other at Windsor.—See ante pp. 12-13, note; and post, under date of March 1 1782.

Your Committee further report that the name of Ebenezer Brewster be inserted in s^d Charter of Brookfield in the room of Joseph Fisk, he [Brewster] obliging himself to convey a deed of said right to Joseph Fisk or John Payne, or both in Partnership, as shall be determined on a fair hearing of said Fisk and Payne before Paul Spooner and John Throop Esquires and Transmitted to Ebenezer Brewster by said Throop and Spooner.

¹Capt. NEHEMIAH LOVEWELL, a famous fighter, as were others in New Hampshire of his name before him—Capt. John, the hero of Pig-wacket, and John's son Col. Zacheus, who served under Amherst in the reduction of Ticonderoga and Crown Point in 1759. Capt. Nehemiah served in Vermont as captain in 1780, '81 and '82, his first Vermont company having been raised in February, 1780, "on the west side of Connecticut river." Lovewell was one of the grantees of Goshen, and a representative for Corinth in 1783. The pay-roll of Lovewell's company, and a large number of others, can be seen in the office of the Secretary of State. He married Betsey Hazelton, the first white person born in Newbury. Samuel Avery had no connection with Lovewell's pay-roll, the Assembly journal showing that the two papers were referred to distinct committees.

²"In the room of Sam^l Fletcher Esq^r who did not accept the appointment," in the Assembly journal. Mr. Fletcher had been elected in place of Simeon Olcott, of Charlestown, N. H., resigned.

³Avery, Cockburne, and Campbell were all proprietors of land in Vermont under New York—the two first named of a large quantity; and each of them received a portion of the $30,000 paid to New York by Vermont.

And Agreeable to the order of the day, His Excellency the Governor, the Hon^{ble} Council & General Assembly resolved themselves into a Committee of the whole to take into Consideration the several Letters rec^d from abroad viz^t—one from his Excellency General Washington & one from General Wolcott and sundry others, together with other papers which relate to the Independence of Vermont and the relinquishment of the Unions with this State.¹

article on Hubbardton, p. 156, the name Hickok is given. In the Ms. Assembly Journal, Vol. 2, p. 69, the record is as follows:

Resolved that the Committee of Pay-Table be and they are hereby directed to adjust the accounts of Capt. Gideon Brownson, Capt. Ebenezer Allen and Capt. Benjamin Hecock for the Companies that were raised by them in 1776 by order of the Convention of the New Hampshire Grants, and to give orders on the Treasury for what shall be found due to the officers and soldiers of said Companies—Provided they give sufficient evidence to the Committee of Pay-Table that they have never been paid for their services from the United States.

It appears from the record of the Convention at Dorset, Sept. 25, 1776, that there were “several colonels on the west side of the Green Mountains,” with companies organized and armed for service, who were subject first to the Committee of War, and ultimately to the Convention. See Vol. I, pp. 33–35. It is stated in the Gazetteer we have referred to, that Benjamin Hickok, with others, was taken prisoner at Hubbardton, July 6, 1777, by a “party of Indians and tories under a Captain [Justice] Sherwood.” The inference from that account is that he was released, while other prisoners were taken to Ticonderoga.

And also of the said Goods or Chattels to satisfy yourself for your own fees as by Law you are intitled.

Hereof fail not, but make due returnes of this writ with your doings thereon within ninety days from the date hereof.

Dated at Arlington this Eighteenth day of March A. D. 1782.

By order of His Excellency the Governor with the advice of Council.
THOMAS TOLMAN, D. Sec^y.

STATE OF VERMONT. IN COUNCIL, Arlington 7th May 1782.

This Council having taken into consideration the manner in which the prisoners Lately taken should be disposed of, whereupon

Resolved that Joseph Fay Esquire Com^{ry} General of Prisoners be and he is hereby directed to take a list of said Prisoners and such as have been actually in the British Service to cause to be immediately Sent to Canada to be exchanged & the remainder¹ to remain in close Confinement until further orders from this Council.

Attest,

THOMAS TOLMAN, D. Sec^y.

¹Tories and disaffected persons, probably. When Mr. Fay proceeded to execute this resolution by returning seventeen prisoners, strong opposition to the release of any of the prisoners of war was made by citizens of Bennington and vicinity, and Gov. Chittenden ordered a military force to take the prisoners to the frontier to be exchanged

Whereas it appears to this Council that there is not a sufficiency of provision collected for the present support of the Troops in service and that unless immediate exertions be made the Troops cannot be supported, Therefore

Resolved that it be and hereby is recommended to the Inhabitants of the Several Towns within this State to take some immediate & effectual measure to raise a Sufficiency of Provision at Cost to Support the number of Soldiers sent from such Town, until they can be other ways supplied by the present Crops on the Ground.

Attest,

JOSEPH FAY, Secy.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—The first manuscript volume in the Secretary of State's office in fact ends with April 18, 1781, and Secretary Fay's copy of the original minutes preceding June 13 1782 was attached to the second manuscript volume; doubtless by a blunder of the binder of the books. The second manuscript volume commences as above indicated by Secretary Fay.

JOURNALS OF COUNCIL

AT THE

SESSION WITH THE ASSEMBLY AT WINDSOR, JUNE 1782.

WINDSOR June 13th 1782 (Thursday.)

Agreeable to an Adjournment in February last, The Council met at this Place—(at Mr. Hawley's.)

Present—His Excell^y Tho^s. Chittenden Esq^r. Governor. Members—The Hon^{ble} Ira Allen & Sam^l. Fletcher Esq^{rs}. Tho^s. Tolman Dep. Sec^y, Benj^a. Wait Esq^r. Sheriff.

Col. Seth Warner, with a committee from Bennington, remonstrated with the Governor and threatened to bring them back. The Governor replied that he had acted by the authority of the Council, (the above resolution;) that Col. Allen's regiment would be sufficient to execute his orders; and he advised the committee to return to Bennington and quiet the people. The seventeen prisoners were sent to Canada and exchanged for forty citizens of Vermont and neighboring states who had been captured by the British. Upon this, all opposition ceased and the course of the Governor was approved by all parties.—See Ira Allen's History, in Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. I, pp. 459, 460.

But not being a Quorum, adjourned 'till Tomorrow Morning 10^oth Clock—Then to meet at this Place.

FRIDAY, June 14th 1782.

Council met according to Adjournment. Present His Excell^y the Governor.—Members present—The Hon. Ira Allen, Sam^l Fletcher, John Throop, Benj^a. Emmons, Esq^{rs}.

The Hon. Paul Spooner Esq^r attended the Board. Not being a Quorum to transact Business, adjourned 'till Tomorrow Morning at 8^oth Clock—Then to meet at this Place.

SATURDAY, June 15th 1782.

Council met according to adjournment.—Present His Excellency the Governor. Members—The Hon. Jonas Fay, Ira Allen, John Fasset Jun^r, Sam^l Fletcher, John Throop, & Benj^a. Emmons Esq^{rs}.

His Excellency and Council then waited on the House, when his Excellency the Governor laid before the Assembly the following Letters and Copies which were read in order by the Secretary, viz.

Copy of a Letter from Tho^s. Tolman D. Sec^y by order of His Excellency to Governor Clinton Dated Apr^l. 15th 1782. Copy of a Letter from His Excell^y to General Washington Dated Mar. 16th 1782. Copy of a Letter from His Excell^y to Oliver Wolcott Esq^r d^o. Letter from Barzilla Rice to Jon^a. Hunt Esq^r dated May 14th 1782.¹ Letter of May 15th from Jon^a. Hunt Esq^r to His Excell^y the Governor. Letter of May 16th from Jn^o. Shepardson Esq^r to His Excell^y. Letter of May 23^d from W^m. Biggelow² to His Excell^y the Governor. Copy of a Letter from His Excell^y the Gov^r to Maj^r. Shepardson Dated May 23^d 1782. Copy of a Letter from His Excell^y to Jon^a. Hunt Esq^r Sheriff Dated May 22^d 1782. Copy of a Letter from His Excell^y to Stephen R. Bradley Esq^r Dated d^o. Copy of a Letter from His Excell^y to Gen^l. Fletcher, Dated d^o. Copy of a Letter to Jotham Biggelow, Dan^l. Lynde, Josiah Biggelow, and others—from His Excell^y. Dated the same as above.³

His Excellency then laid before the Assembly the necessary Business of the Session—after which His Excellency and Council returned to the Council Room.⁴

The Hon^{ble} Paul Spooner Esq^r attended the Board.

¹ Hunt was sheriff of Windham county, and Rice was one of his deputies. These letters related doubtless to the resistance of the Yorkers in Guilford.

² An adherent to New York, residing in Guilford.

³ These were all residents of Guilford, who were indicted by the grand jury in September 1782 for resisting the authority of Vermont.

⁴ From the Assembly Journal :

After reading the aforesaid letters [noted in the Council journal above] his Excellency requested that there might be some alterations made in the following Acts viz—the Act directing the laying and serving executions—the Act respecting the making up the depreciation to Col^o Warners Regiment—and the provision Act.

The Agents appointed to wait on Congress requested that Monday next might be assigned to hear their report—therefore Ordered that Monday next at the opening of the House in the afternoon be assigned for that purpose.

A Resolution of Assembly appointing a Committee of five to arrange the Business of the Session, was rec'd and read, whereupon a Committee of Council was appointed to join said Committee. Members chosen, General Fletcher and John Fasset, Jun^r Esq^r.

Upon an application to this Council by Mr^r Benj^a. Jacobs of Salem in the Common Wealth of Massachusetts, producing a Letter directed from the Com^{ss} of Prisoners at Boston to the Commiss^y Gen^l of Prisoners at Quebec, and desiring a Permit for the Purpose of passing into Canada to negotiate the Exchange of a number of Prisoners agreeable to the Request of said Letter—

And Colonel Chase appearing and informing the Council that from an acquaintance with the said Jacobs he could recommend him as a gentleman of good Character, Therefore

Resolved that it be and hereby is recommended to his Excellency the Governor to grant a Permit agreeable to the said Request—and also to include in said Permit one Jos. Taylor to attend the said Jacobs—

N. B. (A Copy of the Permit granted is on the Files of Council.)

☞ The Permit was altered as will appear by the Copy on File.

Adjourned to 2 otheClock afternoon, to meet at this place.

Met according to adjournment.

Jonas Fay Esq^r was appointed to join a Committee from the House to draw a Bill for the Appointment of a Special Superior Court in the County of Windham. [On account of the disturbances at that time.]

The Hon^{ble} Moses Robinson Esq^r attended the Board.

An Act altering the name of Hertford (the Name of a Town in this State) to Waterford was read, and concurred. [See journal of the 17th.]

An Act pardoning John Arms was read and concurred.¹

A Resolution of Assembly appointing a Committee of three to take under Consideration the 1st Article in the Report arranging the Business of the Session, which is "that an Amendment be made in the Act directing the levying Executions" was received and read, Whereupon a Committee of Council was appointed to join s^d Committee. Members chosen, Moses Robinson & Samuel Fletcher Esq^{rs}.

A Resolution of Assembly appointing a Comm^{tee} of five to take under Consideration the 4th Article in the Report of Arrangement which is "To take under Consideration the Act for levying a Tax on the lands in this State," was received and read, whereupon a Committee of Council was appointed to join said Committee. Members chosen John Fasset Jun^r & Ira Allen Esq^{rs}.

Council adjourned till Monday next at 9 otheClock in the Morning. Then to meet at this place.

MONDAY, June 17th 1782.

Council met according to Adjournment—Present His Excell^y. Members—The Hon^{ble} Ira Allen, Jonas Fay, Moses Robinson, & John Fasset Jun^r Esq^{rs}.

The Hon^{ble} Paul Spooner and General Fletcher attended the Council Board.

¹ JOHN ARMS was one of the first settlers of Brattleborough, and held several offices under New York from 1766 until 1770. He joined the enemy, but repented and returned to Vermont, and was pardoned on taking the oath of allegiance to Vermont. He wrote a poetical account of the Westminster massacre, which is one of the most truthful of the tory accounts.—See B. H. Hall's Eastern Vermont.

The Governor and Council joined the House in a Committee of the whole to hear the Report of the Proceedings of our Agents at Congress, in Consequence of their two last Missions—In hearing which Reports, the greater part of the Afternoon was taken up.¹

The Act mentioned in yesterday's Journal, "altering the name of Hertford to Waterford" as concurred by Council, was this Day reconsidered, and proposed to the Assembly by Paul Spooner Esq^r. from the Council, to be altered from "Waterford" to Hartland.

A Resolution of Assembly appointing a Committee to prepare a Bill in addition to an Act intituled "an Act directing and regulating the levying and serving Executions" and make report—was received and read; whereupon Resolved that a Committee of Council be appointed to join said Committee. Member chosen—Paul Spooner Esq.

Council adjourned to Tomorrow Morning at 8^o Clock—Then to meet

The Hon^{ble} Paul Spooner Esq^r. requested Liberty to resign his Office of Judge of Probate for the District of Hartford, whereupon Resolved that Elias Wild Esq^r. be and he is hereby appointed Judge of Probate within and for the District of Hartford, in the Room of the Hon^{ble} Paul Spooner Esq^r. resigned.

The Governor and Council joined this House to choose a Chief Judge of the Superior Court. The ballots being taken The Hon^{ble} Moses Robinson was Elected. [In place of Elisha Payne, who by the dissolution of the union with the “Eastern District” had become a citizen of New Hampshire.]

The following Acts which had previously passed the House of Assembly, were this day passed in Council with the several Proposals of Amendment added to each viz—

An Act establishing the Constitution of Vermont and securing the Privileges of the People.

An Act adopting the Common Statute Law of England.

An Act defining and limiting the Powers of the several Courts within this State.¹

An Act regulating all Processes in Civil Causes.

An Act directing County Election in the County of Windsor.

The acts establishing the constitution of Vermont, &c., have occasionally been criticised, and to the discredit of the critics. The fact that at that day the General Assembly was intended to be omnipotent, and was made so by the constitution, except as to altering, or infringing upon, that instrument, is a sufficient answer to these criticisms.—See Vt. Historical Soc. Collections, Vol. II, pp. 277, 429, 448; and D. Chipman's Memoir of Chittenden, pp. 100–113. The act of June 1782 was for "establishing the Constitution of Vermont, and securing the Privileges of the People,"—not to infringe upon either. It originated in the 5th clause of the items of business agreed upon for the session, which was in these words: "That a Statute be made in explanation of the 25th Section of the Constitution." That section related to the personal liberty of debtors, and the admission of prisoners to bail. The act was drawn probably by MICAH TOWNSHEND, a lawyer of good reputation, who was then Secretary of State. The first section, establishing the constitution, was enacted "to prevent disputes respecting the legal force of the Constitution of this state;" and the remaining section gave the general privileges of the constitution and laws of the state to "all the people of the American States, within this State, whether they be inhabitants or not." See Slade's State Papers, p. 449.

Council adjourned with the General Assembly to the Second Thursday in Oct^r next agreeable to Constitution, to meet at Manchester—Unless necessary Business shall require some intermediate Meetings of this Board, to be called by His Excellency the Governor.

END OF JUNE SESSION AT WINDSOR, 1782.

Attest, THOMAS TOLMAN, D. Secy.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GOVERNOR AND COUNCIL

SPECIAL SESSION AT MANCHESTER, AUGUST 29th. 1782.

STATE OF VERMONT. IN COUNCIL Manchester Aug^t 29th 1782.

AN ACT empowering the Governor to raise men to assist the Sheriffs.

Be it enacted and it is hereby enacted by the Representatives of the Freemen of the State of Vermont in General Assembly met and by the authority of the same, that His Excellency the Captain General of this State be, and hereby is empowered to order & direct any Officer or Officers in this State to raise any number of Men in the same, and to march them to any part thereof, to assist the Sheriffs in their respective Counties in the due Execution of their Office—And that His Excellency be empowered to appoint and commissionate any Person or Persons with full power for all the Intents & Purposes aforesaid—And that His Excellency call on the Commissary General to furnish the Men when so raised with Provisions as need may require; and for that purpose that he grant a Warrant to said Commissary to levy by Distress and take Provisions wherever it may be found, a sufficiency to supply said Troops while in actual Service for the Purposes aforesaid.

WINDSOR June 22^d 1782.

The preceeding is a true Copy of an Act of the Legislature of the State of Vermont passed yesterday.

Attest, MICAH TOWNSEND, Secy.¹

IN COUNCIL at the House of M^r Elias Gilberts in Manchester, August 29th 1782.

The Council having met at this place, agreeable to Request of His Excellency the Governor, & a Quorum being present, the Board proceeded to Business.

The present situation of the County of Windham being taken under the due Consideration of this Board, ¹This act and a resolution requiring a special session of the superior court in Windham county, were, by a resolution of the Assembly of June 21, to be kept secret until the session of the court.

Resolved, that His Excellency the Governor be advised to raise 150 Men as Vollunteers within Col^o. Eben^r Walbridge's Regiment, and 100 within Col^o. Ira Allen's Regiment, for the purpose of assisting the Civil Authority of this State in carrying into Execution the Laws thereof in the said County of Windham.

Resolved, that His Excellency the Governor be also advised to appoint and commissionate B. Gen^l Ethan Allen, to take the command of the said Vollunteers.

Resolved, that the Hon^{ble} Jonas Fay Esq^r. be, and he is hereby appointed Judge of Probate for the District of Bennington, in the Room of Col^o. Nath^l. Brush resigned—This appointment to remain in full Force & Virtue, until some other Person shall be regularly elected & commissioned to that Office, according to Constitution.

The Hon. Jonas Fay being duly sworn to that office was accordingly commissioned.

Upon the Application of Benjamin Bennet to this Council by his Attorney Stephen R. Bradley Esq^r requesting that the Sentence given by the Hon. Superior Court of this State, at their Session in Tinmouth the last week, against the said Bennet, be mitigated by this Board,

Resolved, that as it is the Desire of this Council when consistent with Constitution, & in Case of Penitency, to mitigate the Rigours of the Law upon Offenders, the said Benjamin Bennet is hereby discharged from Three Months & an half of the Imprisonment ordered by said Sentence, upon Condition that he pay to the Sheriff of the County of Bennington, the Fine ordered by said Court, with Costs of Prosecution, Commitment, &c ; or procure good and sufficient Security to the Acceptance of the said Sheriff, that the same shall be paid within Three Months after liberation,

And the Sheriff of the said County of Bennington, upon such Payment or Security being made, at the Expiration of Fourteen Days next after the rising of said Court, is hereby directed to liberate & discharge the said Benjamin Bennet from his Confinement in the Goal in Bennington.

By Order of the Governor and Council, THO. TOLMAN Dep. Secry.

Resolved that the Secretary of Council, or Deputy, be directed to redraught in a plain and legible Manner the former minutes of this Council, and compile the same into one Book in Folio.

Attest, THOMAS TOLMAN, Dep^y Secry.

A COMMISSION, WITH INSTRUCTIONS, TO BRIGADIER GENERAL
ETHAN ALLEN.

To the Honorable Brig^r General Ethan Allen.—In pursuance of an Act of the General Assembly of this State at their Session in the month of June last, entitled “An Act empowering the Governor to raise Men to assist the Sheriffs” by & with the advice of the Council Board of this State met at Manchester on the 29th day of August last, which is as follows, viz^t: “Resolved, that His Excellency the Governor be also advised to appoint & commissionate B. General Ethan Allen to take the command of the said Vollunteers” and reposing Special Trust & confidence in your Fidelity & good Conduct, I do by these Presents, In the name, and by the authority of the Freemen of the State of Vermont, fully authorize and empower you, the said Ethan Allen, to act and transact the following matters, for the purpose of assisting the Civil Authority in the due Execution of the Laws of this State, for the suppression of the late, and present tumultuous Insurrections in the County of Windham.

Firstly. You will proceed to raise as Volunteers, Two Hundred and Fifty men (One Hundred & Fifty of which in Colonel Walbridge's, and One Hundred in Colonel Allen's Regiment of Militia) & see them equip with Horses, Arms and Accoutrements. Provisions and Ammunition will be furnished by the Commissary General.

Secondly. The Men when raised & thus equip you will march into the County of Windham as a Posse Comitatus for the Assistance of the Civil Authority in the said County of Windham as aforesaid, In pursuance of the Trust reposed. Given under my Hand at Arlington this Second Day of September Annoque Domini 1782.

(Signed)

THOMAS CHITTENDEN, Capt. General.

By His Excellency's Command,

In the spring and summer of 1782, the adherents to New York in the southern part of Windham county were very active in their opposition to the authority of Vermont, being encouraged therein by Governor Clinton, by whom civil and military officers, residing in that county, were commissioned. The opposition culminated on the 22d of August, in successful resistance to an attempt of Jonathan Hunt, the Vermont sheriff, to arrest Timothy Church of Brattleborough, on an execution. Thereupon the special session of the Council of August 29 was called, and the above commission was given to General Allen. On the 8th of September the General gathered his posse; on the 9th the party of mounted men reached the scene of disturbance; on the 10th the principal offenders were arrested; and by the 19th they were convicted and sentenced by the superior court, some to banishment and confiscation, and others to fines.—See *Vt. COUNCIL-CHAMBER.

CATAMOUNT-TAVERN.

APPENDIX A.

THE FIRST VERMONT COUNCIL CHAMBER, IN THE OLD CATAMOUNT TAVERN AT BENNINGTON.¹ BY HILAND HALL.

[From The American Historical Record, number for Jan. 1872.]

ON the 30th of March 1871 the old "Catamount Tavern" House which had long been the most notable relic of early times in the Center Village of Bennington, Vermont, was burnt to the ground. It had been unoccupied for a short time and the origin of the fire is unknown. The house, which was in a tolerable state of preservation, had been built over a hundred years, having been erected by Captain Stephen Fay, a year or two prior to 1770. It was a wooden building about 44 feet by 34, two stories high, having two high chimneys with high fire places in each story, besides which there was a very large fireplace in the cellar or basement, part of which was used as a wash room, and a cook room as occasion required. The two chimneys are now standing (Autumn of 1871) exhibiting their spacious fire places, with heavy iron cranes in those of the lower story and basement. On the marble mantle of one of the fire places the words "Council room" appear, cut there in early times.² On the top of the high sign post was placed the stuffed skin of a Catamount, from which came the name of the house, though in its early days it was, in accordance with the custom of the time, more generally spoken of as "Landlord Fay's."

During the period of the early settlement of the state, the house was a great resort for travellers and emigrants, and it was also widely known as the Head Quarters of the settlers in their contest with the New York land claimants. It was the home of Ethan Allen for several years from 1770, when he first came to the "New Hampshire Grants," as Vermont was then called. The settlers held their lands under grants from New Hampshire, to which the territory was supposed to belong, but in 1764 the king, by an order in council, placed them under the jurisdiction of New York. Whereupon the governor of that province declared their titles to be void, and re-granted their lands to speculators, who recovered judgments in the New York courts against the settlers, and sent their sheriffs and possees to execute them, who were resisted by the occupants and forcibly prevented from obtaining possession. This controversy raged for years, and the settlers appointed committees of safety before whom offenders against the integrity of their titles, styled "Yorkers," were brought for trial. On conviction they were variously punished, sometimes by banishment from the territory, and sometimes by whipping on the naked back, a mode of punishment for crime then in common use throughout the country. The latter punishment, in allusion to the Great Seal of the Governor of New Hampshire affixed to their charter titles, and to the instrument with which it was commonly inflicted, the settlers humorously called "the application of the beech seal."¹

Another mode of punishment was devised for one offender residing within their own limits. One Doctor Samuel Adams of Arlington who had held his lands under a New Hampshire charter, suddenly became an open advocate of the New York title, advising his neighbors to purchase it. This tended to weaken the opposition to New York by producing division among the settlers, and he was repeatedly warned to desist from such discourse. But he persisted in his offensive language, and arming himself with pistols and other weapons, threatened death to any one who should molest him. What followed is related in the language of a contemporary: "The Doctor was soon taken by surprise, and carried [15 miles] to the Green Mountain [Landlord Fay's] tavern, at Bennington, where the committee heard his defence, and then ordered him to be tied in an armed chair and hoisted up to the sign (a catamount's skin stuffed, sitting upon the sign post, 25 feet from the ground, with large teeth, looking and grinning towards New York) and there to hang two hours, in sight of the people, as a punishment merited by his enmity to the rights and liberty of the inhabitants of the New Hampshire Grants. The judgment was executed, to the no small merriment of a large concourse of people. The Doctor was let down and dismissed by the committee, with an admonition to go and sin no more. This mild and exemplary disgrace had a salutary effect on the Doctor and many others."² Dr. Adams, on Burgoyne's invasion, became a violent tory, and fled to Canada, from which he never returned.

When Sir Wm. Tryon, governor of New York in 1771, issued a proclamation offering a reward of 20 pounds each for the apprehension of Ethan Allen, Remember Baker and Robert Cochran for their riotous opposition to the New York government, they retaliated by publishing over their names a counter proclamation offering a reward of 15 pounds for James Duane and 10 pounds for John Kempe, their two leading land-claiming antagonists, styling them "those common disturbers of the public peace," the rewards so payable on their being brought to "Landlord Fay's at Bennington."¹ Colonel Ethan Allen was sojourning at the "Catamount Tavern" in the spring of 1775 and from the "Council Room" of that house went forth his order of May 3rd, for mustering the Green Mountain Boys for the capture of Ticonderoga which was effected seven days afterwards in the name of "the great Jehovah and the Continental Congress."

In this noted tavern house sat the Vermont Council of Safety during the trying campaign of 1777 guiding and directing the patriotic exertions of the Green Mountain Boys to stem the torrent of Burgoyne's invasion; and here also Stark and Warner, with the aid of the Council, planned the famous attack on Baum's entrenchments, where was won the brilliant victory of Bennington, which turned the current of success from the British to the American arms, and was followed in a few weeks, by the capture of Burgoyne and his army at Saratoga. Captain Fay, the proprietor of the house, had five sons in the Battle of Bennington one of whom was killed. On being told that one of his sons had fallen in the fight, the venerable patriot, through his deep grief "thanked God that he had a son who was willing to die for his country."²

Here, in 1778, was tried and condemned, one David Redding, a traitor and spy; and in a field in front of the house a gallows had been erected, and a great crowd had assembled to see him executed. But on the morning fixed for the execution, the Governor and Council granted him a reprieve for one week, for the reason that he had been tried by a jury of six, while by the common law there ought to have been twelve. The multitude, who as well as the six jurors, had condemned the traitor, were clamorous at their disappointment, and violence was seriously apprehended, whereupon Col. Ethan Allen, who had just returned from his long English captivity,³ mounted a stump and waving his hat and exclaiming attention the whole! proceeded to announce the reasons which produced the reprieve, advised the multitude to depart peaceably to their habitations, and to return on the day fixed by the Governor and Council, adding, with an oath, "you shall see somebody hung at all events, for if

Any person that will apprehend those common disturbers, viz. James Duane and John Kempe, and bring them to Landlord Fay's at Bennington, shall have £15 reward for James Duane and £10 for John Kemp, paid by ³ In September, 1775, Colonel Allen was in command of a body of Canadian Volunteers, on the borders of the St. Lawrence River. He was captured near Montreal and sent a prisoner in chains to England. He was exchanged, in New York, in May, 1778, when he returned to his home in Vermont.

Redding is not then hung I will be hung myself." Upon this the uproar ceased and the crowd dispersed. Redding having been afterwards tried and condemned by a jury of twelve, was hung on the day to which his reprieve had been granted, in accordance with Allen's prediction.¹

The children of Captain Stephen Fay were numerous and respectable, and several of them have been prominent in the affairs of the state of Vermont. He died in 1781, and the house, not many years afterwards, became a private dwelling for two of his sons, in succession; then for a grandson and finally for a great grandson, John Fay, Esq., who died Feb. 25, 1866.

RESOLUTIONS OF CONGRESS IN SEPTEMBER AND OCTOBER 1779, AND ACTION OF VERMONT THEREON.

THE AGENTS OF VERMONT TO CONGRESS.

PHILADELPHIA, July 1st 1779.

Gentlemen.—We ever have been and still are willing that every part of the conduct of the people we represent, (so far as relates to the measures which have been come into for establishing the State of Vermont,) should at any convenient time be fully laid before the Grand Council of America, together with the solicitation of our constituents for a union with the other free and independent States of America; as agreeable to the declaration of said constituents (in full Convention) made at Westminster on the fifteenth day of January A. D. 1777, and exhibited to Congress soon after.¹ They always stand ready, in conjunction with their fellow brethren in the United States, to pay their equal proportion of the expenses of the present just war with Great Britain.

But being sensible of the inconvenience which might attend your honors in the deliberation and final determination of a matter of such importance while the War with Great Britain and the circulating medium remain in the present condition, we would be far from urging a decision in the premises until you can have leisure to take it up deliberately, confidently relying (in the mean time) that when ever such opportunity shall present, we shall have seasonable notice to prepare and lay in our defence. Therefore (at this time) we enclose you only a copy of our appointment and instructions, with a printed hand-bill containing viz. Governor Chittenden's orders to Col. Allen dated the 6th day of May last, an extract of the proceedings of an adjourned Superior Court held at Westminster on the 26th day of the same month, and his Excellency's Proclamation of the 3d of June;² and transmit you a book containing a code of Laws as established in the State of Vermont; and have the satisfaction to be, with real sentiments of esteem,

Gentlemen, Your honors' most

MEMORIAL OF A CONVENTION HELD AT LEBANON, N. H., JULY 27
1779, BY A COMMITTEE OF THE CONVENTION.¹

To the honorable Committee appointed by Congress to repair to the New Hampshire Grants and inquire into the reasons why the inhabitants refuse to continue citizens of the respective states which heretofore exercised jurisdiction over them &c.

A Committee appointed by a convention of delegates from nineteen towns on said grants on both sides of Connecticut river beg leave to exhibit the following sentiments of the people and peculiar circumstances of the grants from which they form apprehensions that they ought not to be holden to the States of New York and New Hampshire.

The people in these parts conceive that in the formation of Republican States no class or body of men ought to be holden or considered as part of any community without their consent and that such consent must be given in one of the following ways. 1st By their express and direct act for that purpose. 2nd By their acquiescence in the measures taken by the State for an establishment of such government. 3^d By their being duly represented in a State after it is formed. Or 4, By their holding some charter of privilege by which they are necessarily connected with the State in order to an enjoyment of y^e privileges contained in the charter.

To have them holden to a State without such consent they apprehend is inconsistent with republican government; which (as they imagine) supposes the subjects to be governed by their free consent, by a legislature in which they are duly represented, by officers in whose appointment they have a voice (at least) by their representatives, and in a manner which the majority of those who unite for the purpose of government agree upon—which they conceive to be clearly stated in an address to the people of New Hampshire—a public defence of the rights of the grants, and in a pamphlet entitled, a Republican; which accompany this.²

¹ New Hampshire Grants, Vol. I, No. 40, p. 277, in the Archives of the State Department, Washington. This memorial was addressed to the committee of Congress which had been appointed in June 1779 to visit Vermont; as was also the letter of JOSEPH MARSH, which is appended to it. As this committee had returned to Philadelphia before the convention met at Lebanon, these papers were of course addressed to the committee at Philadelphia, and were thus brought to the knowledge of Congress. At the same session of Congress, in August 1779, a memorial of a Convention of the towns of Hartford, Norwich, Sharon, Royalton, Fairlee, Newbury and Barnet was presented, dated March 1779. It was again presented by Peter Olcott in Feb. 1780, and will be found in Appendix G. These documents, so far as the editor can ascertain, have never been printed.

² The document first named is a pamphlet of sixteen small pages, entitled as follows: "An ADDRESS of the INHABITANTS of the TOWNS of Plainfield, Lebanon, Enfield, (alias Relhan,) Canaan, Cardigan, Hanover, Lime, Orford, Haverhill, Bath, and Landaff, to the Inhabitants of the several Towns in the Colony of New Hampshire. Norwich: (Conn.) Printed by JOHN TRUMBULL, M,DCC,LXXVI." It was signed by NEHEMIAH ESTERBROOK, Chairman, and BEZALEEL WOODWARD, Clerk; and Those pamphlets, the people apprehend, clearly evince that the only band which held the grants connected with New York & New Hampshire was dissolved by the declaration of Independence of the United States. In order to a more full understanding whereof it will be necessary to attend to various and peculiar circumstances the Grants have been under in the different stages since they were first granted. And 1st. No one will deny that the fee of the tract of land now called the New Hampshire grants, before it was chartered appertained to the crown of Great Britain as the law of the land then stood and that it never had been vested in any subject whatever. That in the course of the last war and soon after the close of it, without an express annexation of it to the jurisdiction of any particular government, the governor of New Hampshire by express direction or (at least) concurrence of the crown, allotted the said grants on both sides of Connecticut river into townships and granted charters of them in the name of the King to such persons as were willing to undertake the settlement of them, by which charters the grantees not only became entitled to the lands as granted but were also erected into bodies corporate, with certain immunities and privileges.

The grantees by receiving a title to their lands and such ample incorporations from the governor of New Hampshire, conceived they had good reason to expect to be subject to that government, & no other, as they viewed that act of the King to be of the nature and complexion of an engagement on his part that he would not remove them to another government & in confidence and expectation thereof large numbers of the grantees removed their families and substance on to those lands and underwent infinite hardships, toils and fatigues to put them under cultivation.

was dated Hanover, July 31, A. D. 1776. To it was appended a notice for an adjourned meeting at College Hall, Hanover, on the second Thursday of October following; at which meeting possibly the next document referred to in the text was adopted. The pamphlet, of which the title is given above, complains that the former government of the colony was absolute; that the desire of the people in 1776 was to adopt a republican government; but that the convention which formed the council and assembly then in existence had defeated this purpose, by apportioning representation according to population, thus depriving many towns of representation at all, and many others so in effect—and, further, by “confining the electors in their choice of a representative to persons of £200 estate and so on, in that manner, as they of their sovereign pleasure thought fit to dictate.” The case is forcibly presented and ably argued. The three documents referred to were doubtless of the same character and for the same purpose; and, though unsuccessful in New Hampshire, it is apparent they were influential in Vermont.—See first Constitution of Vermont, chap. II, section sixteen. JEREMY BELKNAP stated that the N. H. Convention of Nov. 14 1775 required every elector to possess real estate of twenty pounds value; every candidate for election of three hundred pounds; and fixed the number of representatives at 89, of which Cheshire and Grafton counties (western New Hampshire,) had only 21.—See Belknap’s History of New Hampshire, Vol. II, p. 305–309.

2. Through the influence of vigorous exertions on the part of New York and default on the part of New Hampshire a decree was obtained in 1764 from the King in council (without the grantees of the lands ever being notified in the matter) whereby the grants were divided by a line at the western bank of Connecticut river and those west of the river subjected to the government of New York, while those east of the river were continued under the government of New Hampshire. The people on the grants were surprised and confounded at being thus divided and especially those west of the river who found themselves thereby annexed to a government very disagreeable to them—the settlement of the lands thereby retarded and the whole thrown under the greatest possible disadvantage as to taking measures for a redress of those grievances. Some part of them however combined for the purpose of obtaining redress and were at the expense to send agents to Great Britain to endeavor it; which joined with the exertions of the governor of New Hampshire and humble petitions of the people from other parts of the grants had brought the matter again under consideration; and the inhabitants with reason solaced themselves in the prospect of being again re-annexed to New Hampshire, & thereby have the whole of the grants united: But the attention of the King at that time being more closely engaged in absolute dominion over his American subjects than in a redress of their grievances the matter was delayed till the commencement of the present war.

The governor of New York in the mean time had threatened the inhabitants who had been thus unjustly subjected, that unless they would resign up the grants which they had obtained from the governor of New Hampshire and receive patents of their lands from him, he would grant them to other persons, which he actually did in sundry instances - by means of which and other artifices many of the grantees were prevailed on to suffer their charter to be deposited in the hands of the council of New York. This being the case those who were able and willing to pay the exorbitant demand of two thousand three hundred dollars & suffer an enhancement of their quitrents, obtained grants or promises of charter from that governor—while others opposed the New York measures by force of arms, for which their leaders suffered an outlawry. The governor of New York being at length prohibited making re-grants—those who had been so submissive as to trust him with their New Hampshire charters (except the few above mentioned) could neither recover them nor obtain new grants.

The most of the inhabitants west of the river did notwithstanding submit to the government of New York and those east of the river continued under the government of New Hampshire until the declaration of independence of the United States.

By that declaration the people conceived themselves freed from that unrighteous act in 1764 which they have ever viewed as being of the same nature as those measures of Great Britain, on account of which the United States disowned subjection thereto, with this difference only that the former had respect to a certain district of the American colonies only, while some of the latter had respect to the whole. They have conceived that a division of them by a line at the river which was viewed by disinterested judges as cruel, arbitrary and unjust and which has ever been complained of as such by those who were immediately affected, ceased on the declaration of independence, as the immediate ground and object of that independence was to free y^e inhabitants of the United States from the inquisitous and tyrannical measures Great Britain had for a number of years been concerting against us, of which this was one—hence the inhabitants on the two sides of the river conceive it to be manifest that they had good right to connect themselves together when independence took place.

For the foregoing and other important reasons suggested at the proceedings of a late convention at Dresden and which accompany this,¹ the people on the grants west of the river have ever been very uneasy at being subjected to the jurisdiction of New York, and since the commencement of the war by far the greatest part of them have constantly determined no longer to submit to that jurisdiction.

The foregoing representation of the circumstances of the grants we apprehend also clearly shows the injury done to the inhabitants east of the river in their being separated from those west of the river, as they were by that separation exposed to such measures as New Hampshire saw fit to impose on them. And the wide difference in sentiments in respect to representation between the inhabitants within the Mason-claim, and those on the grants, occasioned a number of towns on the grants as early as Decem. 1775 to remonstrate against the measures taken by the convention of that state—a copy of which is herewith exhibited—and no satisfactory answer being obtained thereto they in the next place published an address to the people of New Hampshire on the subject.²

By the declaration of independence the people [who] were aggrieved, supposed themselves freed from further obligations to New Hampshire but were notwithstanding willing to connect with them in case they could agree on terms—in consequence whereof proposals were made to unite with them, which are also inclosed with their answer which last was esteemed so vague and indeterminate that it gave no satisfaction of relief in the point of representation which had primarily occasioned their controversy with New Hampshire.

The inhabitants on the grants west of the river had in the mean time declared independence from New York and taken measures to procure government among themselves, and also invited those east of the river (who were unwilling to connect with New Hampshire under present circumstances) to unite with them therein, which on consideration of the dissolution of their connection with New Hampshire by the declaration of independence, and the reunion of the grants on the the two sides of the river by the extinction of the decree in 1764 they agreed to accept.

About half of the inhabitants on the grants east of the river have notwithstanding continued to act with New Hampshire and exerted themselves to have the whole of the grants re-united to that State, to which opposition has been all along made by the other part of the inhabitants and which they are still averse to, as New Hampshire by their late plan of government still give evidence that their intention is to establish their representation according to numbers, which the people in this quarter of the grants are unwilling to unite upon.

On the whole the body of the people in the northern half of the grants east of the river, for the reasons before mentioned conceive they are under no obligations to connect with New Hampshire. And the whole are unwilling to be separated from the inhabitants west of the river, whom they view as brethren and of the same family, which endearing connection they think ought not to be dissolved.

LEBANON ON THE NEW HAMPS^R. GRANTS }
July 27th 1779. }

Gentlemen,—When the people on the New Hampshire grants were informed of your appointment by Congress to repair to these parts to enquire into the reasons of the difficulties subsisting among them relative to their not continuing citizens of the respective States to which they had belonged &c. it gave universal satisfaction in expectation that they should in that way have an opportunity of laying before Congress those matters of difficulty which have long subsisted between those states and the people on these grants; but when they were informed that the committee had been on some part of the grants and were returned, they were much disappointed. Notwithstanding, being anxious of having those matters brought to a speedy issue they have met in convention and ordered a brief representation of their political circumstances, together with their reasons for not submitting to the government of said states, to be transmitted to your Honors, which is now done by Col. Olcott, hoping the committee will receive them so far at least as to inform themselves that those difficulties are still subsisting in these parts of the grants and will probably continue until the interposition of Congress shall bring them to an issue.

We would beg leave earnestly to request that in case the committee shall not think themselves authorized to make their report on the information which we have exhibited & what they have otherwise obtained, that they will devise some way whereby y^e people may be heard so that Congress may be fully availed of the true situation and circumstances of the people on the grants before any decisive decree shall be made thereon. We would beg leave further to inform that the people on the grants are so divided that unless the whole of the grants can be made an entire state we apprehend the only alternative left which will bring the dispute to a happy close will be by connecting the whole of the grants with New Hampshire as they were before the decree in 1764.

And as the state of anarchy and confusion which we have for a number of years been and still continue under, lays us under the greatest difficulty in performing our part as members and citizens of the American States—We therefore earnestly request that those matters may be in some proper way and manner brought to a speedy issue, whereby we may both do & pay our part of the continental cause & dispute with Great Britain—At the same time humbly expecting will never suffer any trial or decision of the matters of controversy whereby the people on the grants will be affected without providing for them an opportunity of being heard and defending themselves.

I write this in behalf of the general committee in y^e northern district of the New Hampshire grants, in compliance with directions from their constituents, and am with much respect gentlemen your honors most obedient and most humble servant,

JOSEPH MARSH, Chairman.

Hon^{ble} Committee of Congress.

IN CONGRESS Friday, July 2, 1779.¹

A letter of the 1st, from Ethan Allen and Jonas Fay, was read, enclosing a paper endorsed col. Allen and Dr. Fays' appointment and instructions, and accompanied with a book entitled "Acts and laws of the State of Vermont in America."

Ordered to lie on the table.

July 31 1779, Jonas Fay and Paul Spooner, two of the Committee appointed by the General Assembly on the 16th of the previous February, were instructed to wait upon Congress and request copies of such letters and resolutions as they might deem necessary, and to transact any other business concerning this State.² They promptly discharged this duty, and also delivered the following letter.

GOVERNOR CHITTENDEN TO CONGRESS.³

BENNINGTON August 5th 1779.

Gentlemen,—After reading a resolution of your Honorable Body of June last, purporting that any further consideration on the dispute subsisting between the States of New York & Vermont should be postponed until your Committee (appointed to examine the said dispute) should have made their report specially in the premisses: I cannot but take notice with some concern of your resolution of the 16th of the same month which was sent to your Committee by Express while they were in this Vicinity, resolving unanimously, that "the officers acting under the State of N. York who were lately restrained of their liberty by certain persons of a district called the N. Hampshire Grants ought to be liberated."

This last resolve I find creates some jealousies in the minds of many of the inhabitants of this State on several accounts, viz.

1st. Because it appears to be counter to the resolution of the first of June aforesaid.

2^d. Because it enters into the merits of the controversy subsisting previous to the report of said Committee, And

3^d. Because it appears that the resolve was made Ex parte, and that the real facts on which it was founded with the many circumstances attending that matter, would not (at that time) have been particularly known to Congress: and that under such circumstances it appears to those inhabitants that the authority of this State ought not to be impeached or Censured by any resolve.

What the said officers (alias delinquents) had suffered, was for a high-handed breach of the peace, in rescuing several Cattle taken by legal authority for the payment of fines imposed on certain persons who refused to do any proportion in guarding the frontiers of this State from the invasions of the British, Savages, &c. and the said officers were liberated before the date of said resolution.⁴ But as this matter necessarily terminates with the grand controversy subsisting between the two contending Governments, I shall omit making any particular remarks (by way of defense) in the premises, until Congress shall appoint a future time when N. York and Vermont may be heard on the subject at large; at which time I shall respectfully present to you, a vindication of the conduct of this State, from its early conflict with N. York down to the present Æra; and a representation of the many good consequences which have already accrued to these independent States, by their assuming Government. In the mean time I renew the application of Mess^{rs}. Allen & Fay (Agents for this State) to your hon^{ble} Body, of the first of July ultimo, for a union with the free, Sovereign and independant States of America, and in behalf of the people over whom I preside, [offer] to pay a just proportion of the expence of the present War with G. Britain when thereto legally requested.

It is evident the inhabitants of this State are in alliance with the States of America already; that they have fought, bled, and a great number of them suffered by being driven, by the enemy, from their possessions, with the loss of their most valuable effects, while many of their patriotic fellow citizens have nobly fallen in the Glorious Conflict: Witness the memorable Battle fought at this place on the 16th day of August 1777, the taking a number of British and delivering about one hundred American prisoners at the landing near Ticonderoga (soon after the Battle aforesaid) by a detachment composed principally of Col. Herrick's Regiment of Rangers raised within this State, with other Green Mountain Boys, (commanded by Col^o John Brown,) and the many other important services rendered in the common cause by your friends in this State; for which nothing can make an adequate compensation but their being admitted to a union with the other independant States of America.

Congress will doubtless bear in mind that this important controversy subsisted many years before the late revolution took place, that it was not occasioned in consequence of it, and consequently that it does not equally affect Congress to settle it as tho' their own measures had given rise and existence to it; so that Governor Clinton's extraordinary and repeated importunities to you, to come to any determination of the matter ex parte, and his hints of coercive measures in case of procrastination in the affair, are the more reprehensible. I find by a Copy of his letter of the 29th of May last to Congress, that he should defer taking any decisive measures, except issuing the necessary order to the Militia of this State,¹ and notwithstanding I am far from countenancing a measure so disagreeable in its nature, while I am sensible that the assistance of every power (which has and continues to operate for the happiness of these independent States) ought to be exerted wholly for their defense and security—Yet the free-born Citizens of this State can never so far degrade the dignity of humane nature, or relinquish any part of that glorious Spirit of patriotism which has hitherto distinguished them in every conflict with the unrelenting and long-continued Tyranny of Designing men, as tamely to submit to his Mandates or even to be intimidated by a challenge from him. There is a large number of able bodied effective men in the lower halfshire of the County of Cumberland, some of whom are persons of very considerable property, that have been averse to taking up arms in defense of these States, who take the advantage of the dispute between N. York & Vermont to screen themselves from service, and by their living in the more interior part of the State are necessarily protected by the exertions of their neighbors; the Militia officers who pretend to act under N. York have been repeatedly applied to to furnish a quota to assist in defending the frontier in any way themselves might choose, and have as often refused; I heartily wish that some method may be adopted, by Congress, to rouse them to their duty.

I wish you every happiness and am gentlemen with the highest sentiments of esteem, Your Honors most obedient and very Humble servant,

JONAS FAY AND PAUL SPOONER TO CONGRESS.¹

PHILADELPHIA Aug. 20th 1779.

Most Honour'd Gentlemen,—We inclose herein to you a Copy of our instructions (which alludes to our appointment) to wait on you for the purposes therein named; and as complaints have from time to time been exhibited to Congress against the conduct of our constituents, who, have not the favour of a seat in the grand council of America; We humbly conceive ourselves (in our Capacity) justly entitled to copies of all such complaints and therefore beg that we may be furnished with those named in the list herewith exhibited, with any other papers we may have omitted naming (that concerns the people we represent) together with any resolutions that have been had thereon by Congress, since the commencement of the present war with G. Briton.

And as we are here, at the expense of a State who furnish men, to defend not only their own, but the frontiers of Several other States, we pray that we may be indulged in the request with all convenient speed, and are in the mean time, with the highest esteem and confidence in your Wisdom and integrity

Gentlemen your Honors most Obedient & very Humble Servants, JONAS FAY,
PAUL SPOONER.

The Hon^{ble} the Congress &c.

IN CONGRESS, Tuesday, August 24, 1779.²

A letter, of August the 5th, from Thomas Chittenden, and one of the 20th, from Jonas Fay and Paul Spooner, with two papers enclosed, were read:

On motion of Mr. M'Kean, seconded by Mr. Holten,

Resolved, That copies of the following papers be delivered to Jonas Fay and Paul Spooner, as private persons, viz.

1. Proceedings of Congress on the petition from the representatives of the New Hampshire Grants dated January the 17th, 1776, and read the 8th of May following:³

2. Report on Joseph Woodward's letter, dated the 17th of January, 1776, and read the 30th of May following:⁴

³ See Vol. I, pp. 16-21.

⁴ Joseph Woodward was chairman of the Convention of Jan. 1776 at Dorset. For resolutions reported by the committee of Congress, see Vol. I, p. 20 note ².

3. Proceedings of Congress on the extracts of the proceedings of the convention of New Hampshire Grants, 24th of July and 25th of September 1776 :¹

4. A letter from Pierre Van Cortlandt, President of New-York, to Congress, dated May the 27th, 1777, and proceedings of Congress thereon :²

5. Governor Clinton's letter of May [July] the 8th, 1778, and read the 18th of September following, and the resolution thereon :³

6. Gov. Clinton's letters of the 27th [18th] and 28th [29th] of May, with three papers enclosed, and of the 7th of June, 1779, and resolves of Congress :⁴

7. The several papers relating to the trial of Hilkiah Trout, [Grout,] dated February the 18th, 1779.⁵

² See Slade's State Papers, p. 77. This letter hastened the resolutions of Congress of June 30, 1777, referred to in the preceding note. This letter and the Vermont petition were referred to a committee of the whole, June 23 1777, and both were disposed of by the resolutions adopted a week later.

³ In this letter, Gov. Clinton complained, among other things, of the draft of every fourth man in Vermont to recruit Warner's regiment.—See Eastern Vermont, p. 324.

⁵ Major HILKIAH GROUT, of Weathersfield, was born in Lunenburgh, Mass., July 23 1728. He came to Vermont previous to June 27 1755, as on that day he, with several others, was captured by Indians at Bridgman's Fort in Vernon. In 1758 or 9, being released, he returned to Cumberland County. He adhered to New York, and was employed in various offices under that state, having been appointed captain of the Weathersfield company, in the upper regiment for Cumberland county, in 1775, and first major of the regiment in 1776; delegate for Weathersfield in the County Congress, or Committee of Safety, in 1777; assistant of inferior court of common pleas in 1778; and justice of the peace, commissioner to administer oaths of office, and justice of the court of oyer and terminer in 1782. On the 17th of Feb. 1779, he went to Shrewsbury, in the exercise of his office as a New York magistrate, and took sundry affidavits, for which he was seized and tried by a court-martial, Feb. 18, consisting of several officers of Warner's regiment, the decision being that the charge was not supported. To this trial the above vote of Congress doubtless referred. Grout was afterward tried, convicted, and fined by a Vermont civil court. He represented Weathersfield in the Vermont Legislature of 1785.—See Eastern Vermont; Deming's Catalogue; and Slade's State Papers, p. 552.

IN CONGRESS, Wednesday, September 8, 1779.¹

The delegates for the state of New-York laid before Congress certain instructions which they have received from their constituents, accompanied with sundry papers, which were read; also a petition of the committees of Cumberland county to Congress was read, praying their speedy interposition in settling the disturbances upon the New-Hampshire Grants, accompanied with sundry papers:²

Ordered, That the same be referred to a committee of five:

The members chosen, Mr. M^cKean, Mr. Paca, Mr. Holten, Mr. Huntington and Mr. Smith.

INSTRUCTIONS of the New York Legislature to its delegates in Congress relative to the disorders prevailing in the north eastern parts of the state of New York.³

KINGSTON, August 27, 1779.

Gents.—We anxiously expected that, by an effectual Interposition of Congress, our deluded Fellow Citizens in the North Eastern Parts of the State would before our present meeting have peaceably returned to their duty, and prevented the necessity of coercive Measures to compel a submission to the authority of Legal Government. This we were the more readily induced to hope as we conceive the Terms we have offered to them to be not only perfectly just and equitable but even generous; these pacific Overtures have been disregarded, Violence and Outrage are daily committed upon, and the Severest punishment threatened against (the latter of which will appear from the inclosed Copy of an Act of the Legislature of the pretended State of Vermont⁴) our good subjects in Brattleborough and other well affected Towns, who now claim from us that Protection which we have Solemnly promised to them and which consistent with justice we can no longer withhold.

While on the one hand we view with a degree of Horror the dreadful consequences of having Recourse to Force, not only to this State, and especially to the unhappy People who will be its immediate Object, but also to the common cause of America—yet on the other we are persuaded our Successful efforts, to expel a foreign Tyranny will avail us little while we remain Subject to the domestic Usurpation; earnestly wishing however by every attempt to Peace, to prevent the evils of a Civil War, we must direct you to entreat once more the mediation of Congress.

A Quorum of the Committee, appointed by the Resolution of the first of June last, having never met,⁵ and as we have not been informed that

⁵ Messrs. Root and Ellsworth, of the committee of Congress, reached Bennington on the 26th of June, a few hours after Messrs. Atlee and Witherspoon had left. John Sessions, and an associate from Cumberland county, followed Messrs. A. and W. to Albany and endeavored, but Congress have since proceeded in the business, we presume it is remaining before them in the same State it was prior to that day. Upon this supposition we shall take the Liberty of suggesting several matters for their consideration and proposing certain measures, not only just and satisfactory in themselves, but such as we believe will be effectual in restoring the Peace of the State.

It is to be observed that all the Lands in that District of Country, which has attempted a Separation from this State under the name of Vermont, is 1st either unpatented and unoccupied or 2^{dly} unpatented and actually occupied or 3^{dly} Patented by New Hampshire or Massachusetts Bay and not afterward patented by New York or 4^{thly} Patented by New York prior to any patent under New Hampshire or Massachusetts Bay or 5 Patented by New Hampshire or Massachusetts Bay and afterwards patented by New York.

With respect to the first Case the Lands must remain for the future Disposition of Government. With respect to the second we have engaged to confirm to the Occupants their respective Possessions together with as much vacant adjoining Land as to form convenient Farms not exceeding three hundred acres each.

With respect to the third we have engaged to confirm the Patents under New Hampshire or Massachusetts Bay as fully as if they had been made under New York without taking any advantage of a non performance of Condition.

With respect to the fourth and fifth Cases we have engaged besides confirming such Possessions as were made under New Hampshire or Massachusetts Bay prior to any Patent for the same Lands under New York to submit the Determination of the Right of Soil to Commis^{rs} to be appointed by Congress who are to determine agreeable to Equity and Justice without adhering to the strict Rules of Law Provided nevertheless that the actual Occupants under New York shall be confirmed in their respective Possessions.

It is further to be observed that every part of the above District was indisputably included within the Jurisdiction either of New York or New Hampshire or Massachusetts' Bay and that the Right of Jurisdiction as Congress themselves have declared was not altered by these Communities respectively becoming Independent States.

Having made these observations we would premise further that in order to remove every objection, fully to evince the Uprightness of our Intentions and our earnest desire for an accommodation, We are willing that if Congress should deem the above mode of determining the Right of Soil between interfering Claimants under New Hampshire or Massachusetts Bay on the one and under New York on the other part ineligible, we will consent that it shall be determined either immediately by Congress themselves or in such other manner as they shall think proper. We will also concede that on all Questions relative to such Right of Soil this State shall not vote in Congress, that Congress shall guaranty to the Inhabitants on the Grants the Performance of these Terms and that no Proceeding of Congress requiring or recommending it to the Inhabitants to submit to the Authority of this State shall be construed to injure any Right of Jurisdiction which the States of New Hampshire or Massachusetts Bay may respectively have to the above Territory or any part thereof.

in vain, to persuade them to return to Bennington.—Micah Townshend to Gov. Clinton, July 5, 1779, in Ms. Clinton Papers, N. Y. State Library, No. 2428.

This last Proposal does not arise from an apprehension that probably these States will claim the jurisdiction of any of the Grants lying West of Connecticut River but is mentioned solely with a view that nothing would remain which can possibly have even the appearance of a Difficulty. We will at all Times cheerfully submit the Right of Jurisdiction to the decision of Congress agreeable to the 9th Article of Confederation.

These Terms and Proposals We conceive must satisfy every Claim either upon our Justice or Generosity and we trust they will appear to Congress, to whom we instruct and authorize you immediately to communicate them, to pledge the public Faith of this State for the Performance of them, and thereupon to solicit the immediate Interference of Congress recommending to such of the Inhabitants of the Grants who at the Commencement of the present War were within the Jurisdiction of New York again to submit to the Government & Authority of this State, with a Proviso (should the same be deemed necessary) that such Interference shall not be construed to injure a Right of Jurisdiction existing in any other of the United States.¹

We presume it will be needless at this time particularly to recapitulate all the Reasons which induced this State to apply to Congress for a Declaration of their Sense of the Conduct of our revolted fellow subjects, as they are fully contained in the numberless Papers which we have from time to time transmitted to Congress. Respecting this matter let it suffice to mention as a principal Inducem^t that the Revolters asserted and their adherents believed that their attempts to a separation from this State were agreeable to and favored by Congress or some Members of Weight and Influence.

Every Delay on the Part of Congress explicitly to disavow and disapprove of is construed by these People as countenancing and has a manifest tho' we do not say a designed Tendency to establish and confirm the secession. Their Pretended Legislature has already confiscated and are now disposing of the Estates of Persons who have joined the Enemy and probably will soon proceed to grant the unappropriated Lands. By these means they raise moneys for the Support of their Government and obtain a great and dayly accession of Strength not only by an additional number of Settlers but every other Purchaser will be interested to maintain an authority upon which their Title depends.² These Proceedings

¹ For the formal propositions of Gov. Clinton to the inhabitants of Vermont, in his Proclamations of February and October 1778, and the Vermont view of the same, see Ethan Allen's Vindication, in Vol. I, Appendix I.

² It is obvious that Vermont might have retorted, that the most active enemies to the independence of the State were the men to whom New York had granted Vermont lands. In seeking to strengthen her cause by enlisting the interest and influence of citizens of other states, as landholders in her own, Vermont opposed them to New Yorkers who had been interested in like manner against Vermont. In March 1781, Gen. Alexander McDougall, a delegate of New York in Congress, advised Gov. Clinton to adopt the same course, using "vacant lands in the Grants" as the material in part to be used in purchasing the influence of New England officers for New York, and tempering "the leveling principles" of the yeomanry of New England. At that time Gov. Clinton was hopeful of an early decision of Congress favorable to New York, but reconalso will increase the Confusion and render the Restoration of Peace at a future day more difficult. As they bear no Share in the present public Burthen, that part of the Country is become an Asylum for all Persons who wish to avoid Military Duty or the Payments of Taxes, and Numbers are daily emigrating thither influenced merely by this Motive. They will also attempt to enforce their cruel Edict and oblige the Inhabitants of Brattleborough and the other Towns who have remained in Allegiance to this State to submit to their usurpation. These Inhabitants will resist and the Justice, Peace and Safety of the State demand that we should and we are resolved to assist and protect them. In short, for we cannot enter into particulars, Matters are bro't to a Crisis, and we must in this session determine with Decision upon the important Question of protecting our faithful Subjects and supporting the rightful Jurisdiction of the State. What the Consequences will be, we forbear to mention. They may easily be imagined and Congress can prevent them.

One principal Design of our Present Meeting was to deliberate upon this momentous Subject. We shall notwithstanding suspend all further proceedings and continue sitting till we are favored with the Sentiments of Congress which you will transmit to us by the messenger who conveys this and whom you will detain for that purpose.

Should we however be disappointed and Congress decline to interpose by an express Recommendation as above proposed, we do in such Case direct Mr. Jay, to whom we have in a special manner committed this Business, immediately to withdraw and attend us at this Place.¹

Gents.—With this you will receive a Letter in the nature of Instructions which you will observe is wrote upon a Presumption that no Proceedings relative to the Vermont Business have been had in Congress since the appointment of the Committee on the 1st of June last. Should subsequent measures however have been adopted by Congress which you may conceive equally effectual and beneficial to the State with those we have instructed you to propose, you are in such Case at Liberty to suspend the Communication of these Instructions till our further Direction and immediately inform us of the measures by a special messenger.

We are with due Respect, Gentlemen, your most obedient Servants.

IN CONGRESS, Friday, September 17, 1779.

The committee to whom was referred the petition of the committees of Cumberland county, together with instructions from the senate and ciled to almost any decision—even to the extension of Vermont to the Mason line in New Hampshire—rather than have the controversy prolonged; else, even at that late day, he might not have declined the advice given by his friend. In his reply to the general, the governor did not allude to the subject.—Clinton Papers, in N. Y. State Library, Nos. 3575 and 3616. For an extract from Gen. McDougall's letter, and Gov. Clinton's in full, see Appendix G., post.

¹Mr. JAY was chief justice of New York, and could not serve that state in Congress except on a special emergency. The controversy with Vermont was treated as such an emergency, and he was sent to Congress "in a special manner" on that subject.

assembly of the state of New-York to their delegates in Congress, and other papers accompanying the same, brought in a report.¹

IN CONGRESS, Friday, September 24, 1779.

Congress took into consideration resolutions reported from the committee of the whole, which were agreed to as follows:²

1. Whereas, on the first day of June last, Congress, by a certain resolution reciting "that whereas divers applications had been made to Congress on the part of the state of New-York, and of the state of New-Hampshire, relative to disturbances and animosities among inhabitants of a certain district known by the name of the New Hampshire Grants," praying their interference for quieting thereof, did resolve, "that a committee be appointed to repair to the New-Hampshire Grants, and enquire into the reasons why they refuse to continue citizens of the respective states which heretofore exercised jurisdiction over the said district; for that, as Congress are in duty bound, on the one hand, to preserve inviolate the rights of the several states, so, on the other, they will always be careful to provide that the justice due to the states does not interfere with the justice which may be due to individuals; that the said committee confer with the said inhabitants, and that they take every prudent measure to promote an amicable settlement of all differences, and prevent divisions and animosities so prejudicial to the United States:" and did further resolve, "that the farther consideration of this subject be postponed until the said committee shall have made report."

2. And whereas it so happened that a majority of the committee appointed in pursuance of the aforementioned resolution, did not meet in the said district, and therefore have never executed the business committed to them or made a regular report thereupon to Congress:

Ordered, That the said committee be discharged.

3. And whereas the animosities aforesaid have lately proceeded so far, and risen so high as to endanger the internal peace of the United States, which renders it indispensably necessary for Congress, to interpose for the restoration of quiet and good order:

4. And whereas one of the great objects of the union of the United States of America is the mutual protection and security of their respective rights:

5. And whereas it is of the last importance to the said union, that all causes of jealousy and discontent between the said states should be removed; and therefore that their several boundaries and jurisdictions be ascertained and settled:

6. And whereas disputes at present subsist between the states of N. Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay and N. York, on the one part, and the people of a district of country called N. Hampshire Grants, on the other, which people deny the jurisdiction of each of the said states over the said district, and each of the said states claim the said district against each other as well as against the said people, as appertaining in the whole or in part to them respectively:

² The resolutions are copied from the journals of Congress, but the preambles and resolutions are divided and numbered from the copy in the Documentary History of New York, to correspond with Mr. Jay's explanatory letter to Gov. Clinton, which follows the resolutions as amended Oct. 2 1779.

7. Resolved unanimously, That it be, and hereby is most earnestly recommended to the states of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay and New-York, forthwith to pass laws, expressly authorizing Congress to hear and determine all differences between them relative to their respective boundaries, in the mode prescribed by the articles of confederation, so that Congress may proceed thereon by the first day of February next at the farthest :

8. And further, that the said states of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay and New York, do, by express laws for the purpose, refer to the decision of Congress, all differences or disputes relative to jurisdiction, which they may respectively have with the people of the district aforesaid, so that Congress may proceed thereon on the first day of February next.

9. [And also to authorize Congress to proceed to hear and determine all disputes subsisting between the grantees of the several states aforesaid, with one another or with either of the said states, respecting title to lands lying in the said district, to be heard and determined in the mode prescribed for such cases by the articles of confederation aforesaid :]¹ and further, to provide that no advantage be taken of the non-performance of the conditions of any of the grants of the said lands, but that further reasonable time be allowed for fulfilling such conditions :

10. Resolved unanimously, That Congress will, and hereby do, pledge their faith to carry into execution and support their decisions and determinations in the premises, in favour of whichever of the parties the same may be, to the end, that permanent concord and harmony may be established between them, and all cause of uneasiness removed.

11. Resolved unanimously, That Congress will, on the said first day of February next, proceed, without delay, to hear and examine into the disputes and differences relative to jurisdiction aforesaid, between the said three states respectively, or such of them as shall pass the laws before-mentioned on the one part, and the people of the district aforesaid who claim to be a separate jurisdiction on the other ; and, after a full and fair hearing, will decide and determine the same according to equity ; and that neither of the said states shall vote on any question relative to the decision thereof. And Congress do hereby pledge their faith to execute and support their decisions and determinations in the premises.

And whereas it is essential to the interest of the whole confederacy, that all intestine dissensions be carefully avoided, and domestic peace and good order maintained :

12. Resolved unanimously, That it is the duty of the people of the district aforesaid, who deny the jurisdiction of all the aforementioned states, to abstain in the mean time from exercising any power over any of the inhabitants of the said district who profess themselves to be citizens of, or to owe allegiance to, any or either of the said states : but that none of the towns, either on the east or west side of Connecticut river, be considered as included within the said district, but such as have heretofore actually joined in denying the jurisdiction of either of the said states, and have assumed a separate jurisdiction which they call the state of Vermont. And further, that in the opinion of Congress, the said states aforesaid ought, in the mean time, to suspend executing their laws over any of the inhabitants of the said district, except such of them as shall profess allegiance to, and confess the jurisdiction of, the same respectively. And further, that Congress will consider any violences committed against the tenor, true intent and meaning of this resolution as a breach of the peace of the confederacy, which they are determined to keep and maintain. And to the end, that all such violences and breaches of the public peace may be the better avoided in the said district, it is hereby recommended to all the inhabitants thereof, to cultivate harmony and concord among themselves, to forbear vexing each other at law or otherwise, and to give as little occasion as possible to the interposition of magistrates.

13. Resolved unanimously, That in the opinion of Congress, no unappropriated lands or estates which are or may be adjudged forfeited or confiscated, lying in the said district, ought, until the final decision of Congress in the premises, to be granted or sold.

Ordered, That copies of the foregoing resolutions be sent by express to the states of New-York, New-Hampshire and Massachusetts-Bay, and to the people of the district aforesaid, and that they be respectively desired to lose no time in appointing their agent or agents and otherwise preparing for the hearings aforesaid.

The aforesaid resolutions being read over, and a question taken to agree to the whole,

Resolved, unanimously in the affirmative.¹

IN CONGRESS, Saturday, October 2, 1779.²

On motion of Mr. Gerry, seconded by Mr. Peabody, Congress came to the following resolution:

Whereas in the first resolution of Congress of the 24th of September last, relative to a district of country called "New Hampshire Grants," is the following clause, viz. [Here follows that part of clause 9 on page preceding which is enclosed in brackets:] and whereas no provision is made in the said articles of confederation for hearing and determining disputes between any State and the grantees of any other State:

Resolved unanimously, That the clause above recited be repealed.

Resolved unanimously, That it be, and hereby is recommended to the states of N. Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay and N. York, to authorize Congress to proceed to hear and determine all disputes subsisting between the grantees of the several states aforesaid, with one another, or with either of the said states, respecting title to lands lying in the said district, to be heard and determined by "commissioners or judges," to be appointed in the mode prescribed by the 9th article of the confederation aforesaid.

Ordered, That a copy of the preceding resolves be transmitted to the states of N. Hampshire, Massachusetts Bay and N. York, and also to the inhabitants of the New-Hampshire Grants.

LETTER OF JOHN JAY, *President of Congress and Delegate for New York, to Gov. Clinton of New York—explanatory of the foregoing resolutions of Congress.*³

Dear Sir,—Whether the resolutions of Congress of the 24th inst., providing for the settlement of all disputes between New-York and her neighbours, as well as revolted citizens, will please my constituents as much as they do me is uncertain. Nor am I convinced of the prudence of committing to paper all the reasons which induce me to think them (all circumstances considered) perfectly right. Some of them, however, I shall communicate. My first object on coming here was to prevail upon Congress to interpose though in the smallest degree; well knowing, that if they once interfered ever so little, they might with more ease be led to a further and more effectual interposition.

Soon after my arrival, I found the following objections to an interference with Vermont generally prevailing.

1st. That Congress, being instituted for the sole purpose of opposing the tyranny of Britain, and afterward of establishing our independence, had no authority to interfere in the particular quarrels of any State. Hence all their former resolutions on the subject were merely negative. 2d. That the confederation had not yet taken place, and that the business should be postponed till all the States had acceded; an event then daily expected. 3d. That it was an improper season to interfere, and that the attention of Congress ought not to be diverted from the general objects of the war. 4th. That harsh measures against Vermont might induce them to join the enemy and increase their force. 5th. That they possessed a strong country, were numerous, warlike, and determined; and that more force would be required to reduce them, than could be spared from the general defence.

These were some of the ostensible objections. Besides which I had reason to suspect the following private ones. 1st. That divers persons of some consequence in Congress and New-England expected to advance their fortunes by lands in Vermont. 2d. That Vermont, acquiring strength by time, would become actually independent, and afterward acknowledged to be so. 3d. That being settled by New-England people, and raised into consequence by New-England politics, it would be a fifth New-England State, and become a valuable accession of strength both in and out of Congress. 4th. That ancient animosities between New-York and New-England naturally inclining the former to side with the Middle and Southern States, the less formidable she was the better, and therefore the loss or separation of that territory was rather to be wished for than opposed. These and many other considerations of the like nature induced me to postpone bringing on the matter till I could have an opportunity of preparing the way for it by acquiring a knowledge of the characters then in Congress, &c.

It is also proper to observe that the House was for the greater part of the winter so heated by divisions on points of great general importance, that it would have been improper and improper to have called upon them to decide on this delicate business till more temperate calmness had taken place. When these began to appear the subject was introduced, and you have had a copy of the resolutions proposed by New York on that occasion.¹ Against them, all objections before mentioned operated, with this additional one, that it would be highly unjust and impolitic to determine against Vermont without previous inquiry into the merits of their claims, and giving them an opportunity of being heard. This objection, so far as it respected their claim to independence, was absurd though plausible; but it was not to be overcome, and though we might have carried a resolution against it by a slender majority, that majority would have consisted of southern members against a violent opposition from New-England and their adherents. A resolution carried under such circumstances would rather have encouraged than disheartened Vermont, and was, therefore, ineligible.

Hence I conceived it to be expedient to promote the measure of appointing a committee of inquiry; knowing that if Congress proceeded to inquire, it would be a ground for pressing them to go further and determine; especially as I was apprized that the result of these inquiries would be in our favour.

The committee, you know, never had a formal meeting; ¹ it nevertheless had its use. The individual reports of the members who composed it advanced our cause; and even Mr. Witherspoon, who was and is suspected by New-York, made representations in our favour.

Your last resolutions ² were of infinite service, by evincing the moderation, justice, and liberality, and at the same time the spirit of the State. On the other hand, the law of Vermont for whipping, cropping, and branding your magistrates made an impression greatly to their disadvantage. ³ Before these emotions should have time to subside, as well in observance of our instructions, I pressed Congress from day to day to adopt such measures as the public exigencies called for, and thereby prevent the flames of civil war from raging. It would not, I believe, have been difficult to have obtained what some among you would call very spirited and pointed resolutions, but which, in my opinion, would have been very imprudent ones; because, among other reasons, they would not have been unanimous. You will find the recitals and particular resolutions numbered in the margin of the copy herewith enclosed, from 1 to 13. I shall trouble you with a few explanatory remarks on each of them, under heads numbered in like manner.

1st and 2d. These recitals were inserted to show the reason why Congress now proceed without the report of the committee, after having resolved to postpone the further consideration of the subject till their report should be made. ⁴

3d. This recital justifies the facts set forth in your representations, and in case an appeal to the public should become necessary, may be used with advantage to New-York.

4th. This recital destroys the doctrine that the Union (independent of the articles of confederation) had no other object than security against foreign invasions.

5th. This recital is calculated to impress the people with an opinion of the reasonableness and policy of the requisition or recommendation which follows, and therefore will the more readily induce those States to adopt the measures recommended to them.

6th. You may inquire for what reason I consented to this recital, as it puts Massachusetts and New-Hampshire on a footing with New-York; whereas I well knew that New-York alone had a right to claim jurisdiction over Vermont. My reasons were these: Vermont extends over Connecticut River into the acknowledged jurisdiction of New-Hampshire:¹ as to Massachusetts, the recital admits only her claims, not her title; and it is as impossible to deny the existence of claims when made, as it is to prevent them. Their delegates pointedly asserted and insisted on the claim of Massachusetts; and it appeared to me expedient to provide for a speedy determination of all claims against us, however ill founded. You may further ask, Why Vermont is made a party? the reason is this: that by being allowed a hearing, the candour and moderation of Congress may be rescued from aspersions; and that those people, after having been fully heard, may have nothing to say or complain of, in case the decision of Congress be against them; of which I have no doubt.

7th. It is true, that by this resolution the merits of former settlements with these States will be again the subject of inquiry, discussion, and decision; and therefore it may at first sight appear improper; but these settlements will still remain strong evidence of our rights, however objectionable they may be represented to be by those States. Nor will Congress be easily prevailed upon to annul them, because in that case all their boundaries would be afloat. Besides, in my opinion, it is much better for New-York to gain a permanent peace with their neighbours by submitting to these inconveniences, than by an impolitic adherence to strict rights, and a rigid observance of the dictates of dignity and pride, remain exposed to perpetual dissensions and encroachment. Peace and established boundaries, under our circumstances, are, I think, almost inestimable.

8th. The reason of this is assigned in the last sentence under the 6th head.

9th. For the same purpose of preserving the appearance of equality in claims, whatever difference there may be in titles, the three States are mentioned in this recommendation. The object of it is a settlement of all disputes respecting interfering grants, in case Vermont should be abolished, and that district in part, or in the whole, adjudged to either of the three States.

10th. I am sure you will admit my prudence in giving your voice for this resolution.

11th. As it was not absolutely certain that New-Hampshire and Massachusetts would pass the laws in question, and as I was sure that New-York would, it appeared to me highly expedient to provide, by this resolution, that the dispute between New-York and Vermont should be determined, whether the other two States came in or no: and, lest the former guarantee contained in the 10th resolution might be construed to be contingent, and to depend on the event of all the three States adopting the measures recommended to them, it is here repeated. You will observe that neither of the three States are to vote on the decision.

12th. On the plan of hearing Vermont, this resolution, however inconvenient, became indispensable. Care, however, has been taken in it to exempt all persons from their jurisdiction who profess allegiance to either of the three States. But you will say, Why to the three States? Why not to New-York only; from whom they revolted, and under whose actual jurisdiction they last were? Because it would have clashed with the equality of claims before mentioned, and the least opposition to which would have prevented these resolutions from being unanimous; a circumstance, in my opinion, infinitely more valuable than the preservation of useless etiquette. And, further, because the district is here so described as to extend over the river and affect New-Hampshire.¹ In a word, the necessity of the resolution was so obvious that there was no avoiding it. These inconveniences will be temporary, and, if the principles laid down in it are observed, will not be very great; especially as Congress have determined a violation of it to be a breach of the peace of the confederacy, and have declared their resolution to maintain it.

13th. This resolution needs no comment, the policy and justice of it being extremely evident. Anxious to avoid a moment's delay in sending you these resolutions, I have not time by this opportunity of adding any thing further than that upon this occasion I have acted according to the best of my judgment, after having maturely considered and well weighed the force and tendency of every consideration and circumstance affecting the business in question. When I first received my special commission, I did not apprehend that this matter was in a more particular manner confided to me than to my colleagues, though some of them considered it in that light. The commission vested me with no further power than what any other of your delegates possessed; nor was any matter given more particularly in charge to me than to the others by the Legislature. Their late instructions, however, speak a different language. I am satisfied to be viewed in that light, that is, to be the responsible man; and, provided the measures I adopt are not thwarted, I am confident that I shall be able to bring all these matters to a happy conclusion. I hope, however, that this will not be considered as a hint for my being continued in the delegation; I assure you, nothing but an adherence to the resolutions and principles of action I adopted and professed at the commencement of the war would induce me to remain here at the expense of health as well as property; for though I shall always be ready to serve my country when called upon, I shall always be happy to find it consistent with my duty to remain a private citizen.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN JAY.

ACTION OF VERMONT ON THE RESOLUTIONS OF CONGRESS OF
SEPT. 24 1779.

As Mr. JAY was satisfied to stand as "the responsible man" for the resolutions of Congress of the 24th of September 1779, it is reasonable to infer that he shaped them. Certain it is, that they were skillfully adapted to bind Congress to a decision in favor of New York, and that result was confidently expected by Mr. JAY. The States of Massachusetts and New Hampshire were nominally admitted as parties with New York, adverse to Vermont; but Vermont, as a State, was studiously ignored, and so far, the question of her independence was decided against her in advance. "The people of a district of country called New Hampshire Grants" were cited to appear by their agents, but not as guests to a feast, but rather as a sacrificial offering for the occasion, the only question being whether New York should have the whole of Vermont, or whether it should be divided between New York, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts. It is very clear that Mr. JAY relied upon the adjudications of the questions of jurisdiction by Great Britain as they stood at the declaration of American Independence—that is, adverse to both New Hampshire and Massachusetts, and in favor of New York; and that he counted upon the states in Congress to affirm the jurisdiction of New York, because, otherwise, “all their boundaries would be afloat.” It is to be noted, that in case of a decision adverse to Vermont, Congress was bound to execute and support it with all the power of the confederacy. Were Vermont to consent to a trial on the issue as made up for her, she would have to submit to New York, or rebel against the confederacy. Were she to refuse to appear at all, Congress would be bound to decide the question in the succeeding February, if New York alone insisted, although Massachusetts and New Hampshire should not appear. So the danger of collision between Vermont and the confederacy was imminent, and the patriotism of the Vermonters tempted them to submission. “The influence of Congress at that time,” [October 1779,] said IRA ALLEN, “was great, being considered as the pillar of liberty; and their advice was deemed a law; the friends of New York exulted, and doubled their exertions against Vermont. When the Assembly convened, nine tenths were for suspending the sale of confiscated property, and the granting of lands till after the 1st of February, the time assigned by Congress to examine into the disputes and differences;” and Allen went on to say, that after spending fourteen days in deliberation, the Governor and Council and General Assembly unanimously resolved “to grant the whole of their unlocated lands, and sell their confiscated estates.”¹ But they did more; and first of all, they resolved to put the State before Congress on Vermont’s chosen issue, and not on New York’s—“TO SUPPORT THEIR RIGHT TO INDEPENDENCE, at Congress, and to the world, in the character of a free and independent State.” Gov. CHITTENDEN, in his speech at the opening of the October session of the General Assembly in 1779, recommended the suspension of the laws intended to have been executed on offenders against Vermont in Cumberland county, “in consequence of a letter received from his Excellency John Jay, Esquire, President of Congress, inclosing certain acts passed by that honorable board, [the resolutions of Sept. 24 1779,] relating to a final settlement of all difference subsisting between this and the adjacent States, which I now submit to you for your consideration; a subject of the greatest importance, and demands your most serious attention.”² The record in the journal of the General Assembly is as follows:

SATURDAY, October 16th 1779.

Resolved that a Committee of four be appointed to join a Committee from the Council to form the outlines of the plan to be persued by this State for defence against the neighbouring States in consequence of the late acts of Congress for that purpose. Committee chosen Gen^l E. Allen, M^r [Reuben] Jones, M^r N. [Nathan] Clark, and M^r Fassett, [John, jr., of Arlington.]¹

TUESDAY October 19th 1779.

Resolved that this Assembly join with the Governor and Council in a Committee of the whole to-morrow morning to take into consideration several acts of the honorable the Congress of the 24th Sept^r last relating to a settlement of all disputes between the States of New Hampshire, Massachusetts Bay and New York on the one part and the State of Vermont on the other.

WEDNESDAY October 20th 1779.

The Assembly with the Council according to their Resolution of yesterday resolved into a Committee of the whole to take into consideration several acts of the hon^{ble} the Congress of the 24th Sept^r last relating to a settlement of all disputes between the States of New Hampshire, Massachusetts Bay and New York on the one part and the State of Vermont on the other, &c.

The Committee of the whole being dissolved the Speaker resumed the chair and the House proceeded to business.

THURSDAY October 21 1779.

The Committee of the whole brought in the following report viz^t

"Agreeable to the order of the day his excellency the Governor, the Council and House of Representatives were resolved into a Committee of the whole, to take into consideration the letter of the 25 ult. from his excellency John Jay Esq^r late president of the Congress of the United States of America,² enclosing certain acts of Congress, for an equitable settlement of all differances subsisting between the States of New Hampshire, Massachusetts Bay and New York on one part, and this State on the other, and after some time spent thereon the Governor resumed the chair, and the following Resolutions being read several times were agreed to viz^t

"Resolved unanimously, that it is the opinion of this Committee that this State ought to support their right to independance, at Congress, and to the World, in the character of a free and independant State.

"Resolved that this Committee recommend it to the General Assembly, to make Grants of all, or any part of the unappropriated lands within their Jurisdiction, that does not interfere with any former Grants, as their wisdom may direct. Extract from the Minutes,

"JOSEPH FAY, Clerk."

¹The Governor and Council passed a similar resolution on the 15th, appointing Jonas Fay, Ira Allen, and Paul Spooner as committee on the part of the Council.

²Sept. 27 1779, Mr. JAY was appointed minister plenipotentiary to Spain, and he then resigned the chair and his seat in Congress.

On motion made, Resolved unanimously by this Assembly that they agree to the aforesaid Report.

Resolved that this Assembly in granting lands will have reference to the convenience, quality and situation of the lands, and that they will not take into consideration any petition for lands until a plan thereof be laid before this House by the Surveyor General, or such plan or plans as have been previous to their being laid before the Assembly been properly approved by the Surveyor General and duly certified.

On the same day ETHAN ALLEN was chosen an agent of the state to wait on the Council and General Court of Massachusetts;¹ and IRA ALLEN was chosen an agent to visit the states of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Maryland, and instructed to furnish the assemblies of those states with copies of Ethan Allen's "Vindication."²

FRIDAY October 22^d 1779.

Resolved, that five persons be chosen by ballot, Agents in behalf of the freemen of this State, to appear at the Congress of the United States of America, on the first day of February next; and that they, or any three of them, are hereby fully authorised and empowered by the Representatives of the Freemen aforesaid, to vindicate their right to independance at that honourable Board.

And, furthermore, our said Agents, or any three of them, are hereby amply empowered to agree upon, and fully to settle Articles of Union and Confederation in behalf of this State, with the United States, which shall be binding on us, on our constituents and our successors. And our said Agents are hereby further empowered, to transact all other political affairs of this State at Congress, as a free and independant State, and report their proceedings herein to this Assembly as soon as may be.

Agents chosen, General Ethan Allen, the honorable Jonas Fay and Paul Spooner Esquires, Stephen R. Bradley Esq^r and the honorable Moses Robinson Esq^r.

SATURDAY October 23^d 1779.

Resolved, that the Surveyor General be and he is hereby directed to advertise in the public papers for all Charters of lands that have been granted by either of the States of the Massachusetts-Bay, New-Hampshire or New-York to be recorded in his office at the expence of this State.

APPENDIX C.

THE CLAIM OF MASSACHUSETTS TO PART OF THE TERRITORY OF VERMONT.

THE first knowledge the Vermont authorities had, that Massachusetts had entered in Congress a claim to part of her territory, was in October 1779, about a month later than the resolutions of Congress of Sept. 24 1779, wherein it was "most earnestly recommended to the states of New Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, and New-York, forthwith to pass laws, expressly authorizing Congress to hear and determine all differences between them relative to their respective boundaries," &c. This claim was at the time a surprise to Vermont, and it was promptly met by a direct appeal to Massachusetts from Gov. Chittenden, which was borne by Ethan Allen, who had been appointed by the General Assembly to negotiate on the subject. It was also met and argued in Bradley's "Appeal,"¹ and Ethan Allen and Jonas Fay's "Concise Refutation,"² to which the reader is referred.¹ That the intervention of Massachusetts was friendly to Vermont in its design is now well understood, and is in fact shown by the record.

Appointment of ETHAN ALLEN as Agent to the Council and General Court of Massachusetts.

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, Oct. 21, 1779.

Resolved, that an Agent be chosen to wait on the honorable the Council, and General Court, of the State of Massachusetts-Bay, to negotiate the public business of this State.

Chose for the above purpose, by ballot, Brigadier General Ethan Allen.

Gov. Chittenden to Samuel Adams, President of the Council of Massachusetts.

MANCHESTER, October 28th, 1779.

Sir,—I am directed by my Council and the General Assembly of this state, now sitting, to signify to your honor, that his Excellency John Jay, Esq. the late President of the Congress of the United States, has, by express, communicated a letter to me, bearing date the 25th ult. enclosing certain acts of Congress, for an equitable settlement of all differences subsisting between the state of Massachusetts-Bay, New-Hampshire and New-York, on the one part, and this state, on the other; by which I obtained the first intelligence of a claim being set up and continued, by Massachusetts state, over any part of this.

The General Assembly have been pleased to appoint the bearer, Brig. Gen. Allen, to wait on your honorable Council and General Court, to learn over what part of this state you mean to extend your claim, and how far you mean to carry such pretensions into execution, in the trial at Congress, on the first day of February next, agreeable to the acts of Congress, with which, I am informed, you are served with a copy. Every necessary step shall be invariably pursued, on my part, to bring about an equitable accommodation of all differences aforesaid, agreeable to the strict rules of justice and equity; which cannot be attended to, in my opinion, without an explicit acknowledgment of the independence of this state; for

First. Can any, even the least, reason be given for this state's being put under the jurisdiction of New-York, contrary to their will? Have not the inhabitants of Vermont suffered an infinity of evils, by New York's pretending to exercise jurisdiction over them, when neglected by every friendly power on the continent, even the authority which gave them being not excepted?

Second. Have not Vermont, for many years before the late revolution took place between Great-Britain and America, been forced to the last alternative, the absolute necessity of having recourse to arms, to defend their interest, purchased at the dearest rate; and of exhibiting that same spirit of patriotism, which has, so far, brought America out of a state of threatened slavery, into the fruition of freedom and liberty?

Third. Does not that same spirit of freedom now exist among the free citizens of Vermont, which is absolutely necessary to be continued, by the United States of America, in order to carry into execution the declaration of Congress, on the 4th of July, 1776? Surely it does.

Fourth. Can such a people be draged, or flattered, into a subjection to any one of the United States, or be divided to two or more of them, merely to allow them a stretch of jurisdiction, and thereby augment their power? Surely they cannot.

If you will please to lay this before your honorable Council and General Court, and write me your answer, by the bearer, the favor shall be ever gratefully acknowledged by,

Sir, your honor's most obedient humble servant,

THOMAS CHITTENDEN.

*Samuel Adams to Thomas Chittenden.*¹

Sir,—Your letter dated Manchester, the 28th of October, [1779,] and directed to the President of the Council of this State, has been laid before the General Assembly, according to your request, and duly considered. Two questions of importance are therein proposed, viz.

¹*Life and Public Services of Samuel Adams*, by WILLIAM V. WELLS, Vol. III, pp. 144–147. The author introduced the letter as follows:

The correspondence of Mr. Adams makes occasional reference to the claims of New York, Massachusetts and New Hampshire to the territory of Vermont, which in 1777 had declared itself an independent State, and in the following year elected Thomas Chittenden Governor. As the Green Mountain Boys were determined to support their right, and the growing importance of the dispute had given the common enemy encouragement to open negotiations with Vermont, Congress, in well-grounded alarm, had essayed to effect an arrangement between the several claimants to the lands in question. A civil war seemed at one time to be impending. Mr. Adams, it was thought, had, from the first, been favorable to the independence of Vermont, and in 1776 was reported to have advised Colonel Warner to that effect.* Massachusetts was now anxious that the new State should be formed, but refused to come into the proposed Congressional conference on the subject, fearing some ulterior designs of New York and New Hampshire on the disputed territory.

Governor Chittenden, a man of great ability, and universally respected in Vermont, addressed a letter to Samuel Adams, desiring to have the position of Massachusetts defined on the subject of her particular claim to any portion of Vermont. The following draft of a reply is in the handwriting of Mr. Adams. [Here follows the letter given above.] The letter, continued Mr. Wells, is without date, but was written not long after that of Chittenden, of which the original is missing. It is a plain exponent of the position of Massachusetts in this interesting question, and a fair instance of the direct, comprehensive, and yet perfectly simple style of Samuel Adams's writings on all subjects. The letter of Chittenden was evidently penned with a careful observance of state for.nality; addressing Mr. Adams as President of the Senate, with the expectation that, in returning the courtesy, he would unguardedly acknowledge him as Governor of the State of Vermont. The habitual caution of Adams is shown in the reply, which recognizes Mr. Chittenden only as a private citizen. * * * * The matter was repeatedly before Congress, and in August of this year [1781] that body offered to recognize the independence of Vermont, and admit her into the Union upon the indispensable condition that she would relinquish her encroachment upon the lands of New Hampshire and New York, several townships from both of which States had been absorbed. New York

* I had lately some free conversation with an eminent gentleman [Dr. Franklin] whom you well know, and whom your "Portia," in one of her letters, admired for his expressive silence about a confederation; a matter which our much valued friend, Colonel W——, [Col. Seth Warner.] is very solicitous to have completed. We agreed that it must soon be brought on, and that if all the Colonies could not come into it, it had better be done by those of them that inclined to it. I told him that I would endeavor to unite the New England Colonies in confederating, if none of the rest would join in it. He approved of it, and said if I succeeded, he would cast his lot among us.—Samuel Adams to John Adams, Jan. 1776, quoted in Wells's Life and Services of Samuel Adams, Vol. II, p. 358.

The friendship of Samuel Adams to Vermont is evident, also, from the following:

'Tis reported Colonel Warner has said he was advised to petition Congress to have the Hampshire grants set off in a new State, by Mr. Adams, one of the delegates [in Congress.] The people are much divided,—some for a new State, some for joining Hampshire, others Massachusetts, many for remaining under New York. I endeavored to dissuade them from persisting in such idle and delusive schemes.—John Taylor to Pierre Van Cortlandt, dated Albany, Nov. 3, 1776, in Force's American Archives, Fifth Series, Vol. III, pp. 503–4.

“Over what part of this State (by which we suppose is to be understood Vermont) we mean to extend our claim?” and “How far we mean to carry such pretensions into execution, in the trial at Congress on the first day of February next.”

This State hath an ancient and just claim to all the territory referred to in your letter lying between the rivers Connecticut and Hudson, bounded as follows: viz. easterly by Connecticut River; westerly by the eastern line of New York; northerly by the northern boundary of Massachusetts Bay; and southerly by the northern limits of the Massachusetts jurisdiction as it was settled by the King of Great Britain in the year 1739.

This we take to be a full answer to your first question, according to its true intent, because we suppose a part of the district of Country which has been commonly called the New Hampshire grants, and is contained within the bounds above described, is a part of that territory which you call the State of Vermont. Over this tract of country we mean to extend our claim, notwithstanding the decision of the King of Great Britain aforesaid in favor of the Province of New Hampshire, in 1739, which we have ever considered to be unjust.¹ And as the General Assembly hath no authority to divest the State of any of its constitutional rights, we mean to continue, assert, and maintain the said claim, before any body competent to try and determine the same, against the protestations of any people whomsoever.

However necessary you, Sir, may judge it that an explicit acknowledgment of the independence of the State of Vermont should be made, in order to bring about an equitable accommodation of the difficulties subsisting between the States mentioned in your letter, this State cannot come into such an acknowledgment consistently with its connection with the United States of America and the engagements it has solemnly entered into with them. We have, therefore, reason to expect that such formality of state in this address to you as would be correspondent with protested against this, but the Massachusetts delegation in Congress, doubtless by instruction, voted in the affirmative. The desire of Massachusetts, in asserting its claim, probably was to secure the independence of Vermont, and prevent its partition between New York and New Hampshire. After the resolution of Congress, New York determined to prosecute her claim, proposed to assert it by force, and marched troops for the purpose, and New Hampshire threatened a similar course. A timely letter from Washington to Chittenden induced the Legislature of Vermont to establish the western bank of the Connecticut River on the one part, and a line drawn from the northwest corner of Massachusetts northward to Lake Champlain on the other, as the eastern and western boundaries of the State, relinquishing all claim of jurisdiction without those limits; and the impending danger of a civil war was thus averted.

¹ By this rejection of the king's decision in 1739, the claim of Massachusetts was extended far west of the limits of Vermont, to wit, in the words of HILAND HALL: “from the well known southern boundary of that state to a line of latitude running through a point three miles north of the source of the Merrimac river, and reached for that width west to the Pacific ocean, thus including southern Vermont and central and western New York, as well as a vast territory across the continent to the west.”—Early History, p. 301.

that which is adopted in your letter will be candidly dispensed with at this time.

In the name and by the order of the General Assembly,

I am with due respect, Sir,

Your most obedient and very humble servant,

SAMUEL ADAMS.

Thomas Chittenden, Esq., at Manchester.

Oct. 27 1777, Charles Phelps, of Marlborough, Vt., presented a memorial to the Council of Massachusetts "in behalf of the sacred rights" of that state to fifty townships in the southern part of Vermont, asserting title by virtue of a purchase, by the state, of the lands from the Indians, and that the territory so purchased had been divided into townships in the days of Gov. Belcher, but that the papers had been destroyed in the burning of the provincial court-house in Boston, in December 1747. Mr. Phelps proposed to support this claim by the then only surviving witness, Col. Israel Williams of Hatfield. The Council resolved to take the deposition of Col. W., and in 1779 the General Court declared that the State of Massachusetts had "a clear and indisputable right" to the southern part of Vermont; but when, in the year 1780, the subject was brought before Congress, the General Court decided that the claim was an "infringement on the rights of Vermont," and refused to prosecute it further.¹ The records of the General Court of Massachusetts for 1779 show, that Mr. Phelps was still urging the claim of that state, and that a committee, consisting of James Bowdoin, Samuel Adams, and John Lowell, was appointed to examine into the matter.² The declaration of 1779, referred to by B. H. HALL, was probably the result of this examination. Gov. Chittenden asserted, however, in his letter to the President of Congress, dated July 25th 1780, that Massachusetts had "not, as a legislative body, laid any claim to the territory of Vermont; nor have they enacted laws judicially authorizing Congress to take cognizance thereof." The last statement was certainly true; but it is evident, from the resolutions of Congress of Sept. 24 1779, that in some form—HILAND HALL says "officially"³—the claim of Massachusetts had been presented.

In September 1780 Congress proceeded to hear the claims of New Hampshire and New York, and on the 27th of that month postponed further consideration. Contemporaneously with this action of Congress, the legislature of Massachusetts instructed the delegates of that state in Congress to move and use their influence for a postponement of the question "till time and circumstances will admit of a full and ample discussion, and that Congress in the mean time take proper steps to pre-

STATE OF VERMONT. }

IN COUNCIL, Arlington, 12th December, 1780. }

Sir,—Enclosed I transmit your Excellency a copy of my letter to Congress of 25th of July last, which, together with this, I request may be laid before the Legislature of the State over whom you preside, for their perusal and consideration.

The arguments and representations therein exhibited are equally applicable for the consideration of the several Legislatures of the United States separately.

Many and great are the evils which Vermont labors under: Congress claiming a jurisdiction over them; three of the United States claiming their territory in whole or in part, and Vermont at the same time a frontier in part to those very States, and exposed to British invasion from Canada, who being possessed of the Lake can suddenly bring their whole force into this State, which, beyond hesitation, will be their object next campaign, unless some immediate measures be adopted to prevent it, as they have already destroyed the frontier settlements of the state of New York.² In a word, their force will undoubtedly be so great that it will be out of the power of the State to form magazines and to support a body of troops sufficient to withstand them, and the consequence must inevitably be, either that the people of this State be sacrificed; or, 2dly, be obliged to retire into the interior parts of the United States for safety; or 3dly, be under the disagreeable necessity of making the best terms with the British that may be in their power. Nearly the same would be the condition of either of the United States separately considered from their Union (as they would be unable to withstand the British power,) which may abundantly serve to evince that it is out of the power of Vermont to be further serviceable to them, unless they are admitted into Union.³

³ Agents were appointed by the Governor and Council, Nov. 1 1780, "to treat with Major Carleton," of the British force in Canada under General Haldimand, "for the purpose of settling a cartel for the exchange of prisoners." This was done pursuant to a resolution of the General Assembly of the previous day. Out of this grew the so called Haldimand Correspondence; but at the date of the above letter to Gov. Hancock, nothing had been done, the truce with Maj. Carleton for the time then being excepted. The letter of Chittenden to Congress, July 25 1780, to Gen. Washington of Jan. 5 1781, and his letters in December 1780 to the Governors of Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Rhode Island, all gave timely notice that Vermont might be forced, for the protection of her people, to make terms of some sort with the British; and the preservation of Vermont in that emergency was due to the diplomacy alone of Gov. Chittenden, Ira Allen, and their associates. No aid was given in that crisis to Vermont by either Congress or any of the neighboring states, while her own continental regiment of Green Mountain Boys, under Warner, was serving in New York.

This State are of opinion that it is high time she had better assurances from the several States now in Union, whether, at the conclusion of the present War, she may without molestation enjoy her Independence, or whether she is only struggling in a Bloody War to establish neighboring States in their Independence to overthrow or swallow up her own and deprive her citizens of their landed estates. I do, therefore, in behalf of this State, demand your Legislature that they relinquish their pretensions of a claim to jurisdiction over any and every part of this State, and request them to join in a solid Union with Vermont against the British forces which invade the American States. Such a Union for the mutual advantage of both States, I am ready to ratify and confirm on the part of this State. I have the honor to be, Sir, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

THOS. CHITTENDEN.

Resolution of the General Court of Massachusetts, March 8 1781, in response to the letter of Gov. Chittenden.

This Court having maturely and deliberately considered the same, feel themselves disposed to comply with the request of said Inhabitants, and to concede that the said territory and the Inhabitants within the same should be a sovereign independent State, in such way and manner and upon such terms as shall be agreed upon and established by the Congress of the United States of America:

Therefore Resolved that in case the territory called Vermont be recognized by Congress as a sovereign independent State and enter into the Confederation with the other American States, this Commonwealth will and do hereby relinquish their claim of jurisdiction in and over the said territory and every part and parcel thereof from the North side of the town of Northfield on the West bank of Connecticut river in the County of Hampshire to the North West corner of the town of Williamstown in the county of Berkshire, in such manner and by such other bounds as shall be established by the delegates of the United States in Congress assembled, reserving nevertheless to each and every individual within and without said territory of Vermont, their full right and title to such lands within the same as are held and enjoyed by virtue of any right or grant derived from the Province, State, or Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Approved by the Governor.

IN COUNCIL, Arlington, 10th Dec. 1779.

THE following Treatise, intitled, Vermont's Appeal to the Candid and Impartial World, containing, &c. being read and carefully perused, is approved of; and Resolved, that the same be published to the World.

By order of the Governor and Council,

¹ STEPHEN ROW BRADLEY, LL.D., was born in what is now Cheshire, [until 1780 part of Wallingford,] Conn., Feb. 20 1754. He was son of Moses Bradley and Mary Row, and grandson of Stephen Bradley of New Haven, Conn., one of several brothers who served under Oliver Cromwell, but came to America about the year 1650, a short time previous to Oliver's "crowning victory" over King Charles at Worcester. The grandson inherited the military spirit of his English progenitor. Having graduated at Yale College in July 1775, he became captain of a company of "Cheshire Volunteers" in the continental service in January 1776. In December of that year he undertook other military service with the rank of adjutant; and soon after was aide-de-camp to Gen. David Wooster, and was present when that general was slain at Danbury in April 1777. In 1778 he served as commissary, and in the summer of 1779 as major at New Haven, Conn.* In the mean time he had pursued

* So stated in B. H. HALL'S biographical chapter in Eastern Vermont. Mr. Bradley's service as major could not have exacted much of his time, since it is evident his investigation of the Vermont question must have been made in the summer of 1779.

INTRODUCTION.

THE reader doubtless will wish to see a fair stating of the claims, of Massachusetts-Bay, New-Hampshire, and New-York; before he enters on the important subject of the independence of Vermont. On the eighth day of October last past, his Excellency Governor Chittenden, the study of the law under Tapping Reeve, the distinguished instructor at Litchfield, Conn. His first appearance in Vermont was at Westminster, May 26 1779, when he was admitted to the bar of the superior court of this State, and was appointed its clerk. His attention must have been turned at once to the controversy of Vermont with the three adjoining states, since he was appointed on the 22d of Oct. as one of the agents to present the case to Congress, and his "Appeal" was written previous to the 10th of December of the same year. In February 1780 he attended upon Congress in his capacity as Agent, but the case was deferred. In June 1780 he was appointed State's attorney for Cumberland county; and in September he again attended Congress in behalf of Vermont and united with Ira Allen in making a vigorous remonstrance at that time against the course taken with Vermont.--See Appendix G. From his first settlement in the state in 1779 until he retired from the United States Senate in 1813—a period of thirty-four years—Mr. Bradley was almost constantly employed in public service, and for about half of that time in offices that interfered with his professional business. He represented Westminster in the General Assembly in 1780, 1781, 1784, 1785, 1788, 1790 and 1800. He was Clerk of the House in 1779, and in 1785 its Speaker. From Dec. 1781 to March 1791 he was register of probate for Windham county; in 1783 a judge of the county court; and in 1788 a judge of the supreme court. He was one of the commissioners appointed in Oct. 1789 to settle the controversy with New York, and a delegate in the state convention of 1791 which adopted the constitution of the United States. On the admission of Vermont to the Union in 1791, Mr. Bradley was elected the first U. S. Senator for the eastern side of the state, holding that office until March 1795. He was again and still again elected to the same office, holding it from March 1801 to March 1813. His early services to the state, in the controversy for its independence, were eminently useful and entitle him to lasting and grateful remembrance, but he most highly honored it by his ability and reputation as a Senator. He received five elections as President of the Senate; the third office in the government highest in rank. He was President of the convention of Republican members of Congress, and as such, Jan. 19, 1808, he summoned the convention of members which met and nominated Mr. Madison as President. He did this apparently on his own responsibility, and hence offence was taken by many members—notably by the New York delegation, only one of whom attended. Nevertheless the nomination thus made was confirmed by the country. Mr. Bradley was at that time the leading Republican Senator from New received by express from John Jay Esq; late President of Congress; a copy of an act of Congress of the 24th of September last, informing, that each of said states, claimed the state of Vermont against each other, as well as against the inhabitants, as appertaining in the whole or in England, but he was opposed to a war with Great Britain and "earnestly counselled Madison against it." "So dissatisfied," said B. H. HALL,—doubtless on the authority of the late Hon. WM. C. BRADLEY—"did Mr. Bradley become with the national policy of this period, that, on the 4th of March, 1813, at the close of his congressional labors, he withdrew altogether from public life, determined, since he was unable to prevent a needless war, not to continue in any position where he would be subjected to the calumnies and odium of a majority from whom he dissented." In two biographical notices which the writer has read, Mr. Bradley is described as "an erratic man." That phrase is often the penalty affixed for originality and independence, and in this case, knowing many of the admirable peculiarities of WILLIAM C. BRADLEY the son, it is deemed most just to count it as a compliment to the father. Certain it is that Senator Bradley has been described by those who knew him well, as "a lawyer of distinguished abilities, and a good orator." "Few men have more companionable talents, a greater share of social cheerfulness, a more inexhaustible flow of wit, or a larger portion of unaffected urbanity."* A much later writer, a son-in-law of Mr. Bradley, said: "he was distinguished for political sagacity, a ready wit, boundless stores of anecdote, a large acquaintance with mankind, and an extensive range of historical knowledge."†

It is evident, not only from the honors conferred upon Mr. Bradley by the Senate, but also from the part he took in the business and debates of that body, that he ranked among its active and influential members. The journals of the Senate show that he was placed on committees to which the most important and delicate questions were referred: for examples,—on the special message of President Jefferson, Jan. 13 1806, transmitting the claim of Hamet Caramelli, ex-bashaw of Tripoli, which involved the then late war with the ruling bashaw, and Mr. Bradley made the report, including a bill for Hamet's relief, and a resolution of thanks to Gen. William Eaton ‡ and his American associates, for their

‡ Gen. WILLIAM EATON, as a citizen of Vermont for some years, deserves more than this reference. He was born in Woodstock, Conn., Feb. 23 1764, entered the continental army at sixteen, and came out in 1783 with the rank of sergeant. Entering Dartmouth college, he graduated in 1790, having spent his vacations in Vermont as a school-teacher from 1788 to 1790, and also the subsequent year. From 1791 till 1793 he was clerk of the Vermont house of representatives, but in 1792 he obtained a commission as captain in the U. S. army, which he held until July 11 1797, when he was appointed consul to Tunis, where he arrived in March 1799. He concerted with Hamet Caramelli, the lawful chief of Tripoli, then in exile, an expedition against the usurping chief, which was done on the authority of the United States, whose fleet was to co-operate. In fifty days he crossed the Lybian desert with an army of five hundred men, and encamped before Derne, the capital of the richest province of Tripoli, April 26, 1805. This town contained a population of 16,000, and was defended by a port, batteries, and a strong garrison. Eaton increased his force to part to them respectively; together with a resolution of Congress, to eminently brave and successful services in Hamet's behalf; on the confidential message of President Jefferson, Dec. 18 1807, proposing an embargo; and on the confidential message of President Madison, Jan. 3 1811, suggesting that the United States take possession for the time then being of East Florida, and publish "a declaration that the United States could not see, without serious inquietude, any part of a neighboring territory, in which they have, in different respects, so deep and so just a concern, pass from the hands of Spain into those of any other foreign power." This was aimed against Great Britain, though the terms were general, and thus in fact contained the germ of the famous "Monroe doctrine" of 1823. The committee, by Henry Clay, its chairman, reported a bill and declaration accordingly. A still more important service was rendered by Mr. Bradley in 1803, as a member of the committee on a proposal of amendment to the constitution as to the mode of electing President and Vice President, he having been the author of that part of the existing constitution which requires that the Vice President, like the President, shall be chosen by a majority of the electoral votes.

Mr. Bradley resided in Westminster until 1818, when he removed to the neighboring village of Walpole, N. H., "where he lived in ease, independence and honour, until he took his willing and not painful departure, with the cheerful expression of a mind at peace with itself, with the world, and with heaven." He died on the 9th of December, 1830. The dates of his birth and death—stated otherwise in different sketches—are taken, with nearly all other facts, from the biographical chapter by B. H. HALL in Eastern Vermont, pp. 593-601, to which, and to the portrait there given, the reader is referred. Mr. HALL's account is undoubtedly more complete and accurate than any previously published, he having had the assistance of the late Hon. WILLIAM C. BRADLEY.

2,500, by the addition of Arabs, and, with the co-operation of three U. S. frigates, captured the place in two hours. Twice he was attacked by a superior force, and twice he repulsed the assailants and so completely on the 10th of June that his way was open to the gates of Tripoli, with a fair prospect of re-Installing the rightful ruler and accomplishing the original design of the U. S. government. At this crisis he learned that a peace had been made by Tobias Lear, the American consul, which put an end to further proceedings. On his return to the United States, he was complimented by the President, and special thanks were proposed in both houses of Congress, which seem to have failed on disagreements as to form—as by a sword, or medal, or a simple resolution of thanks. The Secretary of State, however, was empowered to settle his accounts upon just and equitable principles. The king of Denmark, more generous if not more just, presented General Eaton with an elegant acknowledgment in a gold box, for rescuing captured Danes; and the State of Massachusetts, for like relief to her citizens in captivity, gave him a thousand acres of land. This grant was located in the north-eastern corner of Malne, and probably the General never derived any benefit from it personally. He was greatly disappointed that the national government did not better repay his services, and as a consequence fell into the habit of intemperance. Aaron Burr endeavored, ineffectually to enlist him in his conspiracy, and on the trial of the conspirator, Eaton was a witness against him. The General died at Brimfield, Mass., June 1, 1811.—See The Life of General Eaton, by Charles Prentiss, published in 1813, with a portrait; Memoir by C. C. Felton in Sparks's American Biography; Blake's Biographical Dictionary; and Drake's Dictionary of American Biography.

judge and determine the cause on the first day of February next. But as the inhabitants of this state, view themselves intitled with the rest of the world, to that liberty which heaven bequeathed to Adam, and equally to all his posterity: we cannot think it worth our while, to show the absurdities, and clashing inconsistencies, of various grants made by the British crown, from the time of King James the first, A. D. 1606, down to the present Æra. We do not expect to stand upon any derived power from an arbitrary king; we cannot conceive human nature fallen so low, as to be dependant on a crowned head for liberty to exist; we expect to stand justified to the world, upon that great principle of reason, that we were created with equal privileges in the scale of human beings, among which is that essential right of making our own laws, and chusing our own form of government; and that we, nor our fathers, have never given up that right to any kingdom, colony, province, or state, but retain it now among ourselves as sacred as our natural existence.

AND here the reader is desired to observe, that the claims are not for property only, but they claim a right to jurisdiction, a power of governing us as a people, and pretend to derive that right from the British crown: when the crown of Great Britain, never had any right, but the mere consent of the people, and of course that right died when the people assumed government.

Tis very curious to see how many shapes, Massachusetts-Bay, New-Hampshire, and New-York, are able to make his most sacred Majesty appear in; he certainly according to the vulgar notion, much exceeds the devil.

WHILE his adjudications were in their favour he had the immutability of a God, but when against them, the design of a villain.

THE claims of Massachusetts-Bay and New-Hampshire, especially at this period of time are very extraordinary in their nature, and unaccountable upon any other principle, unless they think by putting in so many frightful claims, they scare us to surrender to some one, rather than to run our chance of being devoured by the whole. It is now upwards of forty years, since Massachusetts-Bay and New-Hampshire came to a full settlement of boundaries; there had for a long time before, disputes and controversies subsisted, between them: And for settling the same his Majesty was pleased, by his order in Council, dated the 22d of January 1735, to direct, that Commissioners should be appointed to mark out the dividing line, between the said provinces, and on the 9th day of February 1736, a commission was accordingly issued out; with liberty to either party who should think themselves aggrieved by the determination of the said Commissioners, to appeal therefrom to his Majesty in Council, which said Commissioners did make their report, too tedious to insert here. The cause was appealed to his Majesty in Council, for a final determination, and the following is an authentic copy of what then [March 1740] passed.

“AND whereas appeals from the determination of the said Commissioners, have been laid before his Majesty by the agents for the respective provinces, of the Massachusetts-Bay, and New-Hampshire, which said appeals have been heard before the Committee of Council for hearing appeals from the plantations, who after having considered the whole matter, and heard all parties concerned therein, did report unto his Majesty as their opinion, that the northern boundary of the said province of the Massachusetts-Bay, are and be a similar curve line, pursuing the course of Merrimack river, at three miles distance on the north side thereof, beginning at the atlantic ocean, and ending at a point due north of a place (in a plan returned by the said commission“ers) called Pantucket [Patucket] falls: and a straight line drawn from thence due west cross the said river, till it meets with his Majesty’s other governments; and that the rest of the commissioners said report, or determination, be affirmed by his Majesty. Which said report of the committee of council, his Majesty hath been pleased with the advice of his privy council to approve, and to declare, adjudge, and order, that the northern boundary of the said province of the Massachusetts-Bay, are, and be a similar curve line, pursuing the course of Merrimack river, at three miles distance on the north side thereof, beginning at the atlantic, and ending at a point due north of a place in the plan returned by the said Commissioners, called Pantucket falls, and a straight line, drawn from thence due west cross the said river, till it meets with his Majesty’s other governments; and to affirm the rest of the Commissioners report or determination Whereof the governor or commander in chief of his Majesty’s said provinces for the time being, as also his Majesty’s respective councils and assemblies thereof, and all others whom it may concern are to take notice.”

THIS boundary line as then established by his Majesty in Council, Massachusetts-Bay did fully acquiesce in, and hath now for above forty years observed it as sacred, and acted accordingly. We find in the year 1744, William Shirley, Esq; then Governor of the province of Massachusetts-Bay, complained of New-Hampshire to the Duke of New-Castle, one of his Majesty’s principal Secretaries of State, for neglecting to take possession of, and to provide for a fort, called Fort Dummer; which had been built by the Massachusetts government, about twenty years before, but by the above recited line, fell within the limits of New-Hampshire, in which complaint are these words: “Not thinking ourselves obliged to provide for a fort which no longer belongs to us.”

WHICH complaint, being laid before the king and council on the 6th day of Sept. 1744; his Majesty was pleased to order, that as said fort was within the province of New-Hampshire, they must support and maintain the same; “or his Majesty will find himself under the necessity of restoring that fort, with a proper district contiguous thereto, to the province of the Massachusetts-Bay, who cannot with justice be required, to maintain a fort no longer within their boundaries.”

THIS Fort Dummer was several miles north of Massachusetts line, as then established, and west of Connecticut river. All which shews that Massachusetts-Bay ever since, conceived that line to be their northern boundary, and fully agreed to it. So late as the 3d of October 1767, the commissaries [commissioners] on the part of the Massachusetts-Bay, among which was Thomas Hutchinson, their great historian; dont doubt to treat that line as sacred; they say in their proposals to New-York, to establish a boundary line between the two governments, in the following words, viz.

“THAT a line being extended due north from the north corner of the colony of Conecticut, until it comes to the distance of twelve miles from Hudson’s River, and another line being extended due west, upon the north boundary of the Massachusetts province, according to the settlement thereof with New-Hampshire, until such line comes to the like distance, &c.”

WHICH evidently proves, that there was a fair tryal before the king and council, and a boundary line established between Massachusetts Bay and New Hampshire; which has ever since been agreed too, and deemed as sacred on all sides above forty years, and is now the fixed line between the Massachusetts-Bay and Vermont. And for Massachusetts Bay to claim over that line a part of this state, by virtue of a right derived from the crown of Great-Britain, when by that, they are expressly bounded to that line; is very surprising, after their own tacit consent so long. They and all the world must acknowledge, that had we not bravely defended our rights against the state of New-York; but had tamely submitted to that government, Massachusetts-Bay, would not at this time of day have laid in a claim.

WE shall trouble the reader no further with the Massachusetts claim, being persuaded he must see the principle on which it stands, and how frivolous it is in itself.

THE states of America, cannot now judge of the propriety and fitness, by which the crown of Great-Britain established the various lines on the continent. This undoubtedly should be observed as an invariable rule; that wherever the parties have mutually agreed for a succession of years, and acted accordingly down to the late revolution, those lines, and adjudications, ought to be held as unalterable and sacred.

THE claim of New-Hampshire, stands on nearly the same principles as the former. Every unprejudiced mind will acknowledge, that after the beforementioned line was established, down to the year 1764, New-Hampshire had an exclusive right to all this territory. This appears from the before recited adjudication, and especially in the instance of Fort Dummer; as well as from the various Commissions, sent the Governors of New-Hampshire, empowering them to sell and dispose of all this territory; in which period of time the inhabitants of Vermont, purchased all the territory they are now in actual possession of; excepting some small remnants; of the Governor of New-Hampshire, and gave a valuable consideration to the benefit of the crown. After this there arising a dispute respecting boundaries; the government of New-York, by very unfair means, obtained an adjudication in the following words to wit.

“At the Court at St. James’s, the 20th day of July 1764.

“PRESENT,

“THE KING’S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

“ Lord Steward.	Earl of Hillsborough.
“ Earl of Sandwich.	Mr. Vice Chamberlain.
“ Earl of Halifax.	Gilbert Elliot, Esq.
“ Earl of Powis.	James Oswald, Esq.
“ Earl of Harcourt.

“WHEREAS there was, this day, read at the board, a report made by “the Right Honorable the Lords of the Committee of Council for “plantation affairs, dated the 17th of this instant, upon considering a “representation from the Lords Commissioners for trade and planta- “tions, relative to the disputes that have, some years, subsisted between “the Provinces of New-Hampshire and New-York, concerning the “boundary line between those Provinces:—His Majesty, taking the “same into consideration, was pleased, with the advice of his privy “council, to approve of what is therein proposed, and doth accordingly, “hereby order and declare the western banks of the river Connecticut, “from where it enters the Province of the Massachusetts-Bay, as far “north as the forty fifth degree of northern latitude, to be the boundary “line between the said two Provinces of New-Hampshire and New-York. Wherefore, the respective Governors and Commanders in Chief “of his Majesty’s said Provinces of New-Hampshire and New-York, for “the time being, and all others whom it may concern, are to take notice “of his Majesty’s pleasure, hereby signified, and govern themselves “accordingly.”

W. BLAIR.”

WHICH royal mandate, was most fully agreed too by the province of New-Hampshire, and they governed themselves accordingly down to the late revolution; and cast the people of the Grants, now the inhabitants of Vermont, out of their government, and refused any connection with them, published a proclamation, ordering the said people to conduct accordingly, which they have done, and by their own valour, under God, have maintained their liberties; and now New-Hampshire in their fit of frenzy, are claiming us back again; like a peevish child, flings away its play-thing, and then roars for it.

THE governor of New-Hampshire wrote to governor Tryon, on the 19th day of October 1771 in these words: "That he had invariably recommended implicit obedience to the laws of New-York, and upon all occasions positively disavowed any connection with those people." By the same reason that New-Hampshire disavowed any connection with us when in distress, we now positively disavow any connection with that government, and mean to govern ourselves accordingly. We could mention many public acts of their legislature; one so late as the 8th day of January 1772, viz.

"At a Council held at Portsmouth by his Excellency's summons on Thursday the 8th day of January, 1772.

"PRESENT,

"His Excellency John Wentworth, Esq; Governor, and

"Theodore Atkinson,

"Daniel Warner,

"Peter Levis, [Livius,]

"Jonathan Warner,

"Daniel Rindge,

"Daniel Pierce,

"George Jeffrey, [Jaffrey,]

"Daniel Rogers,

"Peter Gilman,

"Thomas W. Waldron.

"The premises being read, it is considered, that by his Majesty's order in Council 20th July 1764, the western banks of Connecticut river was then commanded to be the west bounds of this province, and that "this government has been and is entirely obedient thereto." Which shews that New-Hampshire did fully agree to, and acquiesce in that royal mandate. We might further observe that the State of New-Hampshire, by the writings of their supreme legislature, since the revolution, have implicitly acknowledged the State of Vermont,* and given encouragement to our agents, sent there from time to time, that we think it very ungenerous for New-Hampshire to claim us now, after they have publickly disavowed any connection with us more than fifteen years; and ordered us to govern ourselves accordingly. That we shall forever dismiss the claim of Massachusetts-Bay and New-Hampshire, after reminding them, that 'tis very similar to the claim the Pretender has to the Crown of Great-Britain. And it is more probable he will govern the British nation, than either of those States will Vermont.

"EXETER, July 19, 1777.

SIR,—I was favoured with yours of the 15th instant yesterday by Express, and laid the same before our General Court, who are sitting. We had previous thereto determined to send assistance to your State: They have now determined that a quarter part of the militia of twelve regiments shall be immediately drafted, formed into three battalions, under the command of Brigadier General John Stark, and forthwith sent into your State, to oppose the ravages and coming forward of the enemy; and orders are now issuing and will go out in a few hours to the several Colonels for that purpose. Dependence is made that they will be supplied with provisions in your State, and I am to desire your Convention will send some proper person or persons to No. 4, by Thursday next, to meet General Stark there, and advise with him relative to the rout and disposition of our troops, and to give him such information as you may then have, relative to the manœuvres of the enemy.

In behalf of the Council and Assembly, I am, Sir, your most obedient humble Servant,

MESHECH WEARE, President.

Ira Allen, Esq; Secretary of the State of Vermont."

WE now pass on to the old dispute, New-York against Vermont. In the first place we absolutely deny, and we believe the candid world will join with us, that New-York ever had the least pretended right to this territory, before the adjudication of the King and Council A. D. 1764; though they pretend the Dutch first discovered the continent, and took up all the land west of Connecticut river, to Delaware bay. No person of sense will ever believe that, for they were ever considered by the English as intruders, and no historian that ever wrote, has been able to give any charter of the government of New-York, or bounds to its territory.*

THEY have likewise made much noise about a grant to James Duke of York, afterward King of England, but after all they prove too much, for if that proves any thing, it will give them a right to all the lands west of Connecticut river, which will take a great part of Connecticut and Massachusetts-Bay, and a large tract from the province of Quebec. And further it is very evident from what passed by the King and Council 1744, that the territory of Vermont was then considered and adjudged to be within the province of New-Hampshire, for the adjudication was expressly, "That Fort Dummer was within the province of New-Hampshire." And Fort Dummer was west of Connecticut river, and most clearly within the territory of Vermont, now claimed by New-York. Hence we say that the territory of Vermont, never did belong to the Dutch, and was never considered as appertaining to New-York government before the royal mandate passed in 1764; on the other hand they could not claim by any authority but a few miles east of Hudson's river.

AND thus stood the case on the 20th day of July 1764: New-Hampshire relinquished all their claim to this territory, and New-York obtained a royal command affixing it to their government, over which before they could not have the least pretended right.

AND upon this point turns the whole dispute, between New-York and Vermont, without going one step back from the year 1764; either that royal mandate is absolutely unavoidable in its nature, and binds all beings within its limits equal to the moral law, or if it is voidable unquestionably Vermont is entitled to freedom and independence. For never, no never, did a people take more pains to avoid the operation of an oppressive act, than the people of Vermont have done. Our greatest enemies cannot say we ever associated with the government of New-York, or ever admitted their jurisdiction further than compelled by force. But on the contrary, we have ever since 1764, opposed them with all our might and strength even to blood.

*Says Mr. Trumbull [Rev. Benjamin,] an able historian, in a treatise upon the ancient charters:

But is it not very strange indeed if there ever were any grants made to the Dutch of this country, that they never were obtained, and exhibited in the controversy between the Dutch and English, which subsisted for more than twenty years? Equally strange is it also, that all the historians who have written concerning them have given no account of the country which they described, or of any limits or boundaries whatsoever expressed in them. The authorities and vouchers which have been now recited give abundant evidence, that the Dutch claim to New-England, or to any part of North America, was without any legal foundation: and that their title to any part of the country, was never, at any period, allowed in England. The court of England ever disowned it, and treated them as usurpers. They were not the first discoverers of the country and therefore could not claim it on that footing. They had no grant of it, specifying any particular boundaries, first or last, which any historians have ever been able to certify. A grant for an exclusive trade on Hudson's river in 1614, and a grant to the West-India Company in 1621, without any description of the country granted, without the least mention of boundaries, is all that their ablest historians pretend. A grant to the West-India company, observe, not to any corporation, or body of men, in New-Netherlands, or in New-England. Nay, this grant was so far from warranting the Dutch to settle on the lands at New-Netherlands, now New-York, and exercise jurisdiction there, distinct from the government of England, that even the States General, who, it is pretended, made the grant, disowned their ever having given orders for any thing of this nature.

FURTHER, it appears that the English, of the united colonies, ever considered the right of the Dutch, as confined entirely to the lands which they had purchased and settled, AND NO MORE. In a word, governor Hutchinson has said, on the best ground, that the suffering the Dutch to extend so far as Greenwich, 20 miles east of Hudson's river, was mere favor and indulgence to these intruders. The New-England patents and the derivative grants, had a western extension to the south sea, included the whole province of New-York, and made an ample conveyance of all that part of it, which had not been settled prior to them.

THE cause must then stand upon these two points, in view of every unprejudiced mind, first had King George the III on the 20th of July 1764, any right to grant the fee of the land, now called the State of Vermont, to the government of New-York? and secondly had the King of Great-Britain, ever a right by his royal mandate to abridge the Americans of that great privilege, of making their own laws, and chusing their own form of government?

To the first we answer, that 'twas always a maxim in the English nation, that "the King is not above the law" and that "The law cannot do wrong." Now, as we had before purchased this territory, and given a valuable consideration to the Governor of New-Hampshire, who was authorized by the King of Great-Britain to sell it, and acted as an agent under him when he gave grants of this very territory, 'twas the same, and as binding on his Majesty, in the eye of all law and reason, as if the king had sold it himself. If then the king had once sold this territory, and taken a valuable consideration, had he any right the second time to convey it away? and if he could the second time, might he not as well twenty or a hundred, and so on ad infinitum? and consequently there could be no security from a king. The voice of reason and common sense tell us, that he could not convey it away but once, and as we had before purchased it, 'twas out of the king's power to convey it to New-York, therefore that royal mandate which New-York obtained A. D. 1764, was null and void in itself, as conveying any fee of the land.

To the second question we answer as every true American whig ought to do, that 'tis not a king, nor any other beings, under God, that have a right to abridge mankind of their natural liberties without their consent. What right ever had king George delegated to him to frame government for us, and to bind us in all cases whatsoever? None; he had in the nature of things as good a right on the 20th of July 1764, to have subjected the Angels of God, to the government of New-York, as he had the people of Vermont. For if he could abridge twenty thousand, he could one hundred thousand, and equally three millions of their liberties. And if Vermont had not a right to resist that act of oppression, America has now no right to resist, but ought to submit to all the usurpations of the British crown.

So that, view that royal command in what light soever, as either granting the fee of the land, or the right of jurisdiction; it can be of no validity longer than George stands with an iron rod of tyranny to support it; but is now as dead, as all other of his arbitrary acts, committed heretofore in America, against the peace and dignity of human nature. Will any one pretend to say that his royal mandate respecting the Quebec bill is now to be observed as sacred? Certainly not. And yet the Quebec bill much exceeds in point of authority. The truth is, those sovereign acts of oppression and tyranny, went out, and died, when the king in the declaration of independence, was removed to his Britannic regions of despair; and they who now seek to revive them, are as great enemies to the civil liberties of mankind as George III.

HENCE then we are imbolden[ed] to say that Vermont must live over the claims of all her enemies. Massachusetts-Bay, and New-Hampshire, by their dereliction, or utter forsaking, have lost all their pretended right; or in the words of the Mosaic Law they have given Vermont a bill of divorce, and have sent her away, and now she may not in any wise return to them again.

AND let New-York ground their claim upon what principle they please, when reduced to a scale of reason, it must like self-righteousness fail, and leave New-York without hope.

THUS we have briefly stated the controversy to the world, [and] we now proceed to treat of the independence of Vermont.

VERMONT'S APPEAL, &c.

WERE it possible for rational men to entertain so mean an idea of the Great Author of our existence, as to believe he intended a part of the human race should hold an absolute unbounded power over others, destined by his Sovereign will and pleasure to wear out a servile life, as vassals and tenants, to cruel lords and masters; in that case Vermont might demand of New-York, and all others who pretend to that power, some evidence of their having such a dreadful commission from Heaven; for condemned criminals are not obliged to submit to the awful sentence till the executioner has shewn his warrant.

BUT reason and common sense must convince all those who reflect upon the subject one moment, that all the claims made to this State, are founded on principles of the greatest injustice, cruelty and oppression, subversive of the rights of mankind, tending to destroy those great revolution principles upon which the United States are built up, and do in the end point an insult to the divine author of our existence. They need only a candid stating to receive a compleat refutation, for with as great propriety in the fitness of things might Vermont claim the territory of New-York, and demand their right to independence, as New-York can Vermont's. In which case we make bold to say, Vermont would get no other answer than Britain has frequently got from the mouths of cannon in asking the same question. "Yet knowing to what violent resentment, and incurable animosities, civil discords are apt to exasperate and influence the contending parties; we think ourselves required by indispensable obligations to Almighty God, to our fellow countrymen, and to ourselves, immediately to use all the means in our power" not incompatible with our independence, for stopping the effusion of human blood, and to make known to the impartial world the justice of our cause.

BUT before we enter thereupon, must beg leave to inform the world, of the unfair means that have been used to deprive Vermont of her unalienable and inestimable rights. For the truth of which, we can appeal to many worthy characters, and to the august council of Congress, whether New-York has not in the darkest hours of the present conflict with Great-Britain, when our united wisdom and strength were requisite to oppose the common enemy, made the greatest struggles at Congress, and even by threats, has attempted to obtain a decree exparte against the State of Vermont, from no other view but because she thought her own political importance in the scale of America was vastly superior to that of Vermont's; and that Congress would rather crush Vermont than loose the friendship of New-York; when not only New-York, but every person, who has taken the least pains to inform himself, knows that they never had any other right of jurisdiction over the territory of Vermont, but what they obtained by their own wicked craft and British tyranny; and that the inhabitants of Vermont, as a people, have never submitted to the jurisdiction of New-York, no not from the very earliest period. For the proof of which we can now appeal to the marks on the backs of their then civil Magistrates (if any there be who have not joined the common enemy) who came from time to time, to execute cruel laws, such that the Satarp [satrap] of an eastern Despot would blush at; made on purpose to ruin the inhabitants of Vermont, which will be an eternal disgrace to the records of New-York so long as it has a political existence; for particulars of which the reader is referred to General Allen's "brief narrative of the proceedings of the government of New-York."— [Published in 1774.]

BUT finding Congress possessed of too much wisdom and integrity to carry their vile purposes into execution, they have left no stone unturned, whereby they might ruin Vermont. And to gain their point, to the great detriment of the United States, have imbraced, and nourished in the bowels of this State, sworn enemies to the liberties of America, and endeavoured to screen them from contributing their might, toward the salvation of their country in times of the greatest danger; and that too, when called upon by officers under commissions from the American Congress; for no other reason, but because those persons were avowed enemies to Vermont.

THEY have secretly conferred commissions on the sculking neutrals, who leaving to others the heat and burden of the day, have used all their diabolical schemes, to dishearten and divide the freeborn sons of Vermont.

THEY have received private persons, stealing away from this State, into their legislature, under pretence of their being representatives from certain towns, contrary to the very letter and spirit of their own constitution.

IN a word, they have tried all means in their power, to extirpate and destroy the State of Vermont; altho' we have in all our public writings assured New-York of our readiness to settle all controversies, respecting lands in dispute, in some equitable way, when the great cause of America would permit.

AND now diffident of our own opinion, we leave the candid world to determine, how far New-York might have their own influence in view, by strenuously urging, and insisting, that Congress should determine such an important cause, at a period of time, when they think their State from many circumstances, is become the great key of the continent and to affront them must be very detrimental to the confederacy; but let New-York remember, that we have a northern as well as they a southern key,¹ and are determined to maintain and support our independence and freedom, or take refuge in that blessed State; *where the small and great are, and the servant is free from his master.*²

THE independence of Vermont, will be argued under the following heads, viz.

- I. The right the State of Vermont has to independence.
- II. Her interest and advantage in being independant.
- III. The necessity she is under of supporting her independence.
- III. The advantage that has and will accrue to the other States of America from the independency of Vermont.

¹This was written several months before the Haldimand correspondence was commenced, but clearly foreshadowed it. Six months later, July 25 1780, Gov. Chittenden stated to Congress the thought expressed above in more emphatic language—that, to their protection, if necessary, the people were “at liberty to offer, or accept, terms of cessation of hostilities with Great Britain.” In May 1781, Dr. George Smith, who was one of the British commissioners to treat with Vermont, wrote to Gen. Haldimand that he heard Col. Allen declare “that there was a north pole and a south pole, and should a thunder-gust come from the south, [Congress,] they would shut the door opposite that point and open the door facing the north,” [Canada.]—See Vt. Hist. Soc. Coll., Vol. II, p. 132.

² Job III, 19.

UNDER the first of these heads, we can support the right the State of Vermont has to independence, upon the same scale of reason, that all kingdoms and States maintain theirs. In a state of nature man knows no ruler, every one (under God) is his own legislator, judge, and avenger, and absolute lord of his property. Had man continued, pure and holy through time, as he came from his Creator at first, there would doubtless have been no need of government; his wants would have naturally created society, but wickedness would never have produced government. Obeying the dictates of a pure conscience, man would have needed no other law-giver; and jurisdiction, that necessary evil at best, would never had its name. But conscience, nature's great foundation of legislation, being corrupted by the introduction of sin, necessity absolutely required man to be under some further regulation, than the mere impulse of a depraved conscience; which we find soon after the fall, excited the perpetration of most horrid crimes in the children of disobedience, and would fill the world, with the greatest horror and misery unless restrained. From hence government took its rise, to prevent and punish wickedness, or in other words, negatively, to promote the happiness of society by restraining vice.

FROM whence it most evidently follows, that the very end and design of government, is security of life, liberty, and property, to every member of society; and the form that best answers that end, is of all others the most preferable.

THE human race being in the order of creation, all equal, that there is neither high or low, rich or poor, bond or free, for they are all one; until that equality be destroyed by some subsequent circumstance, they are all intitled to equal privileges of society; and have each one a sacred indefesible right, to choose that form of government, that shall best secure life, liberty, and property.

OR to give a more clear representation of the case, let us suppose a number of persons to move and settle within the polar circle, unconnected with any other part of the world. At their first arrival, they would form into society; and while each one remained strictly honest and just, they would need no further regulations; their views would be the reciprocal good of each other. But so soon as vice, that pest of society, began to creep in among them, they would then find the necessity of establishing some form of government to make each other honest: In framing of which, every person ought to have an equal share, in the legislative, judicial, and vindictive powers; and would have an indisputable right, to adopt such a mode of government, as to them shall seem best, and ought to enjoy the benefits thereof, unmolested, equal with any other kingdom, or State under Heaven; and for any foreign power to exercise jurisdiction, and enforce laws upon that people, would be the essence of tyranny.

WE'LL suppose still further, that as soon as our new emigrants are formed into a state of society, before they have established any form of government, an eastern monarch should pass that way with a large host of the dogs of war and sons of tyranny the disgrace of human nature, and discover this little honest feeble band, whereupon he should make a formal declaration, "that he had full power and authority, to make laws "and statutes, of sufficient validity, to bind this society in all cases "whatsoever." And should order and decree that these new settlers in the wilderness, should be abridged of all their natural rights, and be bound to New-York, and subjected to the laws, ordinances and jurisdiction of the same, upon pain of having his dogs of war let loose to destroy them. And notwithstanding frequent petitions, remonstrances, and asserting their just rights, were nevertheless compelled to remain in this condition, for ten long years, at which period of time, they arrive to that degree of strength, with the assistance of some honest neighbors, that they rise and cut in two that power, which was of sufficient validity, to bind themselves in all cases whatsoever, and thereby git loose from the cords of bondage. We ask in the name of reason, whether the world ought to assist in splicing that power, to bind them again to New-York; or whether they ought not in equity, and the eternal rules of right, immediately to be put in full possession of that inestimable privilege, which they have so long been unjustly deprived of, that of making their own laws, and choosing their own form of government.

SIMILAR is the State of Vermont; whose inhabitants, at the expence of their fortunes, and hazard of their lives, without the least charge to any Colony, Province, or State, from which they removed, by hard labour and unconquerable spirit, they have procured settlements, in the wilderness of Vermont; have faced death and danger; undergone unspeakable hardships, in perils by savages, in perils by wild beasts of prey, in cold, in nakedness, in hunger, and in want. That above all have they suffered, from the cruelty of Great Britain and her emissaries. Nevertheless, from the first day of their entering into said wilderness, they never adopted, or choose any kind of government, any further than compelled by the murdering sword, nor did they ever form into a State of society, with any other Colony, Province, or State, but kept a well regulated association among themselves, for the protection of life, and property, until the 15th of January 1777, when by the united voice of the people, they declared themselves a free and independant State. For the truth of these things we can appeal to many undeniable facts; so late as March 1774, [1775,] previous to the battle of Lexington, the judges of New-York, were led in fetters of iron, within the gates of their own city, for shedding innocent blood at Westminster, in murderously attempting to enforce the laws of that province, upon the people of Vermont. And as the territory of Vermont did not originally appertain to New-York, and seeing the inhabitants never did associate with that province, it is manifest they have as good a natural right to independence, to make and execute their own laws, as any body of people on this continent.

AGAIN, the State of Vermont has an undoubted right to independence, from the situation and extent of it's territory.

As we have before shewn, the government that best answers the ends of society, is of all others the most preferable, being instituted to promote happiness, and not increase misery: Now whenever government fails in answering the ends of it's institution; or in other words creates more evils than it prevents, it becomes a burden, and ought in the course of things to be dismissed; hence it is, when the reason of parental government ceases, the government of course ceases. And by the same reason that the other American States have assumed government, Vermont is of age to act for herself. And to suppose the territory of Vermont, which is 160 miles in length, and 60 miles in breadth, with near thirty thousand souls, at this time of day, after 3 years independence, under as good regulation, and code of laws as any State on the continent, ought to be affixed to the government of New-York, whose morals, manners, and interests are diametrically opposite, is as absurd, as to suppose the American States ought to be re-affixed to Great Britain. Add further, that if Vermont was affixed to the jurisdiction of New-York, many individuals must travel 400 miles to the seat of government; which would render it an intolerable burden, and pervert the very ends for which government was instituted.

AGAIN, we might observe, that Great-Britain, previous to the declaration of independence, had made a distinct government of this territory, and had granted a commission accordingly. But as matters are now situate, Vermont cannot obtain a copy of those writings. And that may be one great reason why New-York has wearied Congress to obtain an immediate decisive adjudication, before that evidence can possibly be obtained, least otherwise they should be self-condemned upon their own stating.¹

AGAIN, the State of Vermont has merited an indisputable right to independence, in the esteem of every true whig; by her brave and noble conduct, in the gloomy struggle of America with Great-Britain. First in America were the Green Mountain Boys, (to their immortal honor be it written) that commenced an offensive war against British tyranny. Under every disadvantage in being a frontier, they nevertheless with their lives in their hands, took Ticonderoga, and other important garrisons in the north; so early that New-York, as a government, was considered as a dead weight in the continental scale. And like men determined to obtain liberty or death, they pursued the war into Canada; there they fought, bled, and died, not counting their lives dear, that they might obtain the prize at the race end. Many heroes can Vermont boast in the territory of Canada, who fell fighting in the glorious cause of American liberty and freedom. Let the brave immortal Gates, and deathless Stark, tell posterity, that in the year 1777, assisted by the militia of the State of Vermont, they humbled the long boasted pride of Great-Britain, and brought the towering General Burgoyne, with his chosen legions, to ask mercy at their feet. In a word, Vermont, by her blood and treasure, at the point of the sword; has fairly merited liberty; and by the eternal rule of reason, has a right to independence, from every consideration; she has received it from God, as being created with equal liberties in the scale of human beings; from nature in the formation of her territory; and from her own victorious struggles with Great-Britain.

II. THE interest and advantage of the State of Vermont in being independant is very certain. This territory has been one continued scene of legislative confusion, and contention, since the royal mandate passed A. D. 1764, till the late revolution, which gave Vermont an opportunity to take the staff of government into her own hands. And this contention, being unavoidably founded in the natural opposition of interests, between the State of New-York, and that of Vermont; that were they to be under one and the same jurisdiction, 'twould render the whole State an eternal theatre of contention, bloodshed and misery. That taking every circumstance into consideration, the greatness and situation of its territory; the strength to which it has already arisen, with the rapid progress of its future settlement; the difference of the morals, and manners of its inhabitants from those of New-York, the clashing interests, together with that bitter jealousy, not to say hatred that would forever exist, were they to be affixt to New-York, must oblige every impartial man to say that it would be greatly for the interest of Vermont to be independent.

III. VERMONT is under a necessity of supporting her independence. Freedom is the gift of the beneficent Creator, to all his subjects; Slavery only appertains to the devil and his followers. All rational beings have a right to expect that from their natural parents which God bequeathed to them, and left in trust to be handed down unimpaired, to the last child to be born of the human race.

THE State of Vermont, we have now clearly shewn, has a natural right to independence; honor, justice and humanity forbid us tamely to surrender that freedom which our innocent posterity have a right to demand and receive from their ancestors. Full well may they hereafter rise up in judgment against us, if, like profane Esau, we mortgage away their birth rights, and leave them at the expence of their lives, to obtain freedom. The righteous blood, already spilt in Westminster court-house, calls louder than thunder for an everlasting separation from New-York.

FURTHER, the State of Vermont, is under an absolute necessity of supporting her independence, or incurring, as a people, the greatest guilt in the eye of heaven. They have declared to the world that they are, and of right ought to be, a free independent State; have appointed officers civil and military, who have discharged their various befrustments, punished offenders, ratified and dissolved the most solemn contracts in nature, joined man and wife, have in some instances granted bills of divorce, strictly forbidding the parties ever to cohabit together, have pronounced sentence of death, when twelve men of the vicinage, under the oath of God have declared life was forfeited by the law of the land, and have issued a warrant to take away the same; that should they now give up independence, and thereby confess that they had no right to found government: they would acknowledge themselves guilty of the crying sins of murder, adultery, fornication, robbery, &c. and deserving of that curse pronounced by God on those who part man and wife.

AGAIN, we are under a necessity of supporting our independence, arising from our plighted faith to individuals: Upon the declaration of independence of the State of Vermont, many persons of fortune, admiring its constitution, sold all that they had in neighbouring states, moved in and purchased large interests of the government, laid out all their effects, taking the plighted faith of the freemen of the State of Vermont for their security; and now to give up our independence, would be destroying all their security, and reducing them by our perfidy, from a state of affluence, to a wretched condition of beggary and want; that could it be possible, every virtuous person would stigmatize the inhabitants of Vermont, to the latest posterity.

III. WE are now to point out the advantage that has and will accrue to the other States of America from the independence of Vermont.

OMITTING a few  whom New-York, by their bribery and corruption, have prevented from doing much in the common cause; we venture to assert that no one of the fourteen states¹ now at war with Great-Britain, according to their numbers, have done more for the interest of the whole, than Vermont. During the first stages of the war, not one State, excepting Connecticut, (a free government,) excelled the Green Mountain Boys for vigor, spirit and resolution. We will appeal to those Generals who have had the northern command, whether by applying to the Governor and Council of Vermont, in times of the most pressing danger, they did not receive much speedier, and as effectual help as by applying to New-York. That all the world must confess who have had the least knowledge of the war in the northern district, that the State of Vermont has been of great advantage to America, and much more so than if that territory had belonged to any other State.

AGAIN, many advantages must hereafter accrue to the other States of America, from the independency of Vermont; for we cannot expect those States who are ambitiously grasping at territories to which they have not the least shadow of right, will use the wealth arising therefrom to any better purpose than to oppress their less wealthy and less powerful neighbors. It never will be for the interest of the United States, to have some great, overgrown, unwieldy States. New-York is now large enough; and 'tis very probable that if New-York should obtain this territory, and the Green Mountain Boys submit to their aristocratical form of government; she would in time, by the same spirit, overrun and ruin many of the United States.¹

VERMONT'S APPEAL

To the General CONGRESS of the United States.

CALLED upon as we are to address your honorable board, on matters of the last importance to the State of Vermont; and probably to the thirteen United States, over which you preside: we wish most earnestly to perform this office with the utmost decency, reverence, and respect; trusting, that should necessity, which knows no law on so uncommon an occasion, oblige us to deviate from that delicate line of honor observed by courts, your candour will impute it to a just attention, due to our own preservation, against those artful and designing States, who abuse your confidence and authority, for the purpose of effecting our destruction; rather than disrespect to your august body.

WE glory in being allied to your government, in being connected by the strongest ties of nature, gratitude, and friendship, to those illustrious personages, who by their valour and wisdom, have extricated America from ruin, and by securing happiness to others, have erected the most noble and durable monuments to their own fame. We solemnly assure you, that we most ardently wish a permanent union and confederation might be established between this and the United States, upon so firm a basis, as to transmit its blessings to posterity uninterrupted by any future dissensions. Under a full expectation, of reaping equal blessings at the end of the conflict with Great-Britain; the inhabitants of this State have ever stood forth with their lives, and fortunes, to assert and maintain the rights and interests of America.

BUT to our unspeakable grief, we find neighboring States, usurping a more tyrannic power, if it were possible, than ever Great-Britain grasped after, wallowing in luxury, and wanting provinces to drain of wealth, like the debauched Romans, to defray their extravagancies, are using the wisdom of serpents, and the intrigue of courtiers, to make the inhabitants of Vermont dupes, and slaves, to their unbounded lust of domination and prey.

AND to our great astonishment, we find some so base, as to be willing their countrymen should be made tributary to such birds of prey; if they might have a small pittance for gathering the tax, even on condition it were demanded at the point of the bayonet.

THE petty tyrants of every country always wish to have the people dependant on such a power, for under colour of authority from that power, they can carry on their oppressions, vexations, and depredations, and sin without controul.

¹This appeal to the small states was effective. In 1782 Mr. Madison named New Jersey, Delaware, and Rhode Island as favoring Vermont in Congress with a view "of strengthening the interests of the little states." Connecticut and Maryland, of the comparatively small states, were also for Vermont at that time, and Massachusetts and Pennsylvania of the large states.—See Vt. Hist. Soc. Coll., Vol. II, pp. 268, 312.

THAT could any thing add to our grief and surprise, it must be to find your act of the 24th of September last, containing the following Resolutions, viz. [For these resolutions, see ante, Appendix B, pp. 183-185.]

As Americans, as freemen, or as men of common sense, we cannot view ourselves holden, in the sight of God or man, to submit to the execution of a plan, which we have reason to believe, was commenced by neighbouring States without policy; and must be prosecuted by means incompatible with the fundamental principles of liberty; which appears, not only big with injustice and impiety, but carries immediate ruin to ourselves and posterity, as soon as they become human beings. We have examined it minutely, we have viewed it in every point of light in which we were able to place it; and with pain and grief, we sincerely declare we cannot close with the terms of those resolutions, for these reasons.

1. BECAUSE, all the liberties and privileges of the State of Vermont, by said resolutions, are to be suspended, upon the arbitrament and final determination of Congress; when in our opinion, they are things too sacred ever to be arbitrated upon: and that we cannot stand acquitted to our own conscience, to the world, or posterity, to give them up, by reason of the adjudication of any man or body of men, but must hold ourselves under the most sacred obligations to posterity, to defend them at every risk.

2. BECAUSE, the Congress of the United States has no right to meddle with the internal police, and support of civil government in this State; for us, not for Congress. has government been instituted here, and we cannot conceive that any other legislature has a right to prescribe modes to determine our fate, or abolish our own internal institutions. We most cheerfully at the same time will accede to any propositions made by Congress for the equitable settlement of all disputes relative to property, when admitted to union with the other States.

3. BECAUSE, we conceive this State to exist independant of any of the thirteen United States, and not accountable to them, or their representatives, for liberty, the gift of the beneficent Creator; having existed as an intire corporation, or body politic, before the union or confederation of the other States: the first association, and oldest body politic on the continent, upon the late revolution establishment; and therefore cannot belong to the confederacy.

4. BECAUSE, the State of Vermont is not represented in Congress, we cannot submit to resolutions passed without our consent, or even knowledge, which put every thing near and dear at stake. We esteem it an essential unalterable principle of liberty, the source and security of all constitutional rights, that no State or people can be bound by the acts of any legislature without being represented. "It is with the deepest concern that we have seen the sacred security of representation, that great bulwark of liberty, silently passed over," and acts, rendering the liberty, and lives of the inhabitants of Vermont precarious, passed unanimously. We have carefully weighed the matter, and can see no material difference, in being dragged to Philadelphia or Great-Britain; and there, untried and unheard, obliged to deliver ourselves up as victims to court pleasure. Let the prejudiced amuse the world, and confound the ignorant with their jargon; freedom and dependence on a power, over which we have no influence nor controul, is slavery, or we are yet ignorant of the word.

5. BECAUSE, there appears a manifest inequality, not to say predetermination by said resolutions, in that Congress should request of their own constituents, power to judge and determine in the cause, and never ask the consent of thousands whose all are at stake, which evidently purports one of these two things: either that the rest of the world are not intitled to equal privileges with their constituents, and that Congress have a right to make laws to bind them in all cases whatsoever, without their consent or even knowledge: or, that Congress already have predetermined us to belong to the thirteen United States and of course have a delegated right to judge in the cause; either of which, as freemen, it is our indispensable duty by all lawful means to oppose.

6. BECAUSE, said resolutions are either inconsistent in themselves, or incompatible with the liberties of free States; in that Congress implicitly acknowledge, that as Congress, they have no right to take up the matter, by requesting of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, and New-York special laws to authorize them to judge of the cause; and then go on to pledge the faith of Congress, to execute and support their decisions, and determinations, in the premises, if only one State, to wit, New-York should pass the law, which amounts to this: that New-York can give Congress power to pledge the faith of the United States; and even of those States who refuse to submit the cause to Congress.

THESE are our sentiments upon this important subject, and least they should be misconstrued, or misunderstood, we again declare to you, sirs, and to the world, that we are not contending for lucre or filthy gain, we are willing to agree with any equitable proposals, made for the settlement of all differences relative to the fee of lands in dispute; and are not anxious of being judges in our own cause. We further most solemnly assure you, that we are, and ever have been willing, to bear our proportion of the burden and expense of the present war with Great-Britain, from its first commencement, whenever admitted to union with the other States: Esteeming it just, that those who equally participate of the blessings of liberty, should bare equally the burdens of the war in obtaining it. At the same time, we cannot be so lost to all sense, and honor, or do that violence to our feelings, as freemen, and as Americans, that after four years war with Great-Britain, in which we have expended so much blood and treasure, we should now give up every thing worth fighting for, the right of making our own laws and choosing our own form of government, to the arbitrament, and determination of any man or body of men under heaven.

VERMONT'S APPEAL

To the Inhabitants of the UNITED STATES of AMERICA.

COUNTRYMEN, FELLOW CITIZENS, & BRETHREN.

UNDER the strongest ties of friendship, as men who have equally suffered together, from the iron rod of tyranny, in the late cruel measures of Great-Britain; and have gone hand in hand, and stood by each other, in times when threatened with ruin, tyranny, and death; we beg your most serious attention by our address to this very important subject. And whilst like the Dove in the fable, you bend the branch, to save the poor Bee struggling for life; remember it may be in our power to sting the fowler so severely, when drawing the net to ensnare the Dove, as may hereafter procure your liberation. We can never believe that the present inhabitants of the United States are so lost to all feelings of humanity, benevolence, and religion, that while they extend their right hands to Heaven, and weary unbounded grace, in praying to be delivered from British tyranny and oppression; they should with their left hands, be forming shackles of slavery for their American brethren. It gives us pain and grief, to mention the intrigues, and artifices, used by wicked and designing men, to destroy the inestimable liberties, and privileges of the State of Vermont; and that too by those ungrateful ones, who have been preserved from Indian cruelty, by our brave and strenuous exertions during the present war.

WE need not inform you, that all those despotic claims of jurisdiction, over this State, made by any powers of the neighbouring States, originate from the same seeds of corruption and tyranny, that raised the war between Britain and America, to wit the power of taking from us our property without our consent; or in other words, to reduce us to a state of abject tenantry, binding us down as tenants, and then domineering over us as Lords.

WE need not warn you of the dangers that threaten you in our destruction; those who have once feasted on the spoils of their countrymen, and tasted the sweet of living upon the labor and sweat of tenants, like the voracious wolf, will never leave till they have devoured the whole flock of American yeomanry. We have seen the liberties of Poland, and Sweeden, swept away in the course of one year, by treachery and usurpation; the free towns in Germany, like dying sparks are quenched one after another in the destructive greatness of their neighbours.

WE beg leave to recall your attention to the present most critical situation of the inhabitants of the State of Vermont; many of us were soldiers in the provincial army during the last war, between France and Great-Britain, and suffered inconceivable hardships, in successive campaigns, in striving to support the honor of the British nation, and to conquer and defend this territory of land from Indians, Canadians, and French, at which time 'twas that we discovered the excellency of the country, and determined if ever circumstances would permit to settle the same.

AT the close of the war, Canada being ceded to the British crown, and a general peace prevailing in North-America, gave us an opportunity to begin settlements on the Green Mountains, then a wilderness, filled with savages, scorpions and beasts of prey; and notwithstanding all our fatigue in assisting to conquer said territory, that we might not give offence, we applied to the governor of New-Hampshire, at that time an agent or factor, to sell extra-provincial or crown lands in America, for the king of Great Britain; and purchased all the territory of Vermont at a very high price, excepting a small tract in the northern part of this state, and continued making settlements in the wilderness, [and] by an invincible fortitude, surmounted every obstacle. In this situation, in the midst of a howling wilderness, we had very little to do with any other colony, or province, never sending abroad to obtain legislation, but kept a very good regulation among ourselves; acknowledging New-Hampshire to be our parent State, because we had purchased our land there, and expected to have it warranted and defended by them, but never associated with them as a people in a state of society; for we never had a single voice in their house of representatives, and consequently were not contained within the jurisdiction of their laws. In this situation the king of Great-Britain, starting the idea of raising a revenue from the American colonies, and considering the New-England colonies too popular to begin with, and entertain any prospect of success, he therefore adds all the territory north of Massachusetts line, and west of Connecticut river, (which we had before purchased) by an arbitrary command, to the jurisdiction of New-York; thinking as part of that province was held by tenure, he could carry on his plans with greater ease, by adding greater power to the servants of the crown, decreasing the number of freemen, and consequently increasing the number of slaves: We think the greatest reason will justify this assertion, for no sooner had the governor of New-York obtained jurisdiction, but he patented out all the territory we were in possession of, to a few of his nobility and lords, who were favorites of administration, and ordered us to pay the annual rents usual for servile tenants, or quit our possessions immediately; and that "we should not tarry to reap the crops then growing." We replied in the most humble, but positive terms, "That we had purchased our lands of the crown at a dear rate, and had suffered infinite hardships in gaining settlements, and now to give them up, or acknowledge ourselves tenants to any lord, was what we would not at the risk of our lives." And from thence sprung the long dispute; we, on our part, refusing to submit to their government, and they striving to dispossess us of our lands and tenements; in the course of which time, we frequently petitioned New-Hampshire most earnestly, that they would take us under their protection, and prevent our being devoured by those who sought our ruin; and had as often the misfortune to find them deaf to all our intreaties, and at last the bitter mortification to see a proclamation, issued by the Governor and Council of New-Hampshire, wherein they relinquished all right to the jurisdiction of said territory; put us out from under their protection, and directed us to govern ourselves accordingly. We then found ourselves reduced, to the melancholy necessity of quitting all, and from a state of affluence to commence beggars; to submit as servile tenants to haughty lords; or as freemen, to face death and danger and support our rights; we determined upon the latter, and choose rather to die with honor than live with shame. In this condition, detachments of their militia were frequently sent to dispossess us, whom we opposed even to blood. It ought to be observed, that as soon as New-Hampshire refused us any relief, and relinquished their claim, we sent immediately agents after agents to Great-Britain, with petitions in their hands, to lay at the foot of the throne, praying for relief, who at first were received very coolly, but after the plan of the stamp-act failed in America, the crown listened to our cries, and gave a decree, in part suspending that jurisdictional power in New-York, until his Majesty's further will and pleasure should be known; afterwards we obtained one or two reports of the Board of Trade in our favour, but remained very much in that situation, until the eve of the present war, when we understood that king George, to answer some other tyrannic views, had given Governor Skeen a commission to preside as governor over most of this territory, who came once to visit us, but finding the inhabitants no better disposed toward him, than toward New-York, soon made his exit and left us to govern ourselves.¹

"WE shall decline the ungrateful task, of describing the irksome variety of artifices, the acts of oppression, the fruitless terrors, and unavailing severities," that for the course of twelve years were dealt out by the legislature of New-York, in their endeavours to execute their unreasonable and cruel measures. And not to wound humanity, leave untold those black acts of outlawry and death, passed against Englishmen, and freemen, and that too by a legislature, wherein they could have no representation, placing them as common marks for the arrow, wherein they not only proffered absolution to any person that should kill them, but even offered rewards, to those who would imbrue their hands in their blood, for no other crime but defending their just rights and privileges. Driven as we were by fatal necessity, while we remained in that condition, to submit either to ruin, slavery and death; or declare ourselves a free and independent State; we determined upon the latter, being assured, that our struggle would be glorious, since in death we could obtain that freedom, which in life we were forbid to enjoy.

WE have now existed as a free independent State almost four years, have fought Britains, Canadians, Hessians, Waldeckers, Dutchmen, Indians, Tories and all, and have waded in blood to maintain and support our independence. We beg leave to appeal to your own memories, with what resolution we have fought by your sides, and what wounds we have received fighting in the grand American cause; and let your own recollection tell what Vermont has done and suffered in the cause of civil liberty and the rights of mankind. And must we now tamely give up all worth fighting for? No, sirs, while we wear the name of Americans, we never will surrender those glorious privileges for which so many have fought, bled and died; we appeal to your own feelings as men of like sufferings, whether you would submit your freedom and independence, to the arbitrament of any court or referees under heaven? if you would, after wasting so much blood and treasure, you are unworthy the name of Americans; if you would not, condemn not others in what you allow yourselves. To you we appeal as the dernier resort under God; your approbation, or disapprobation, must determine the fate of thousands. It is not the intriguing courtier, the eloquent lawyer, or the learned judge that we fear; we tremble least posterity should read, that the arms of the glorious Americans, after working wonders in the cause of liberty, were tarnished and disgraced, and vilely used as instruments to deprive their brethren of their inestimable rights and privileges.

OUR enemies give us opprobrious names, they call us insurgents and rebels. We have stated the matter clearly before you in the course of this pamphlet; you see wherein our rebellion consists, and if that can be called rebellion, shew us a period in the history of the present war, in which you have not been equally rebellious. We conjure you by that friendship which has so long subsisted between us, by the blood and sufferings we have exhibited in your cause, by your own honor, and liberties which are at stake, to rise and crush that spirit of oppression, now exercised in seeking our destruction. Be assured that if you suffer us tamely to be devoured by those greedy powers who have laid plans for our ruin, that spirit will not sleep long, before you must fare the same fate; for we conceive the liberties of the whole, to be absolutely connected with every part of an empire, founded on the common rights of mankind. We have coveted no man's estate, we have at all times been ready to submit all differences relative to the fee of lands in dispute to impartial judges, and now solemnly declare to all the world that we are contending only for liberty, the gift of the Creator to all his subjects, the right of making our own laws, and choosing our own form of government, and will God be pleased to dispose the hearts of our countrymen to save the inhabitants of the State of Vermont from tyranny and oppression, to grant them their liberties in peace, and to see the things which belong to their political salvation, before they are hidden from their eyes.

To the Commonalty of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay and New-York.

WE conclude this address to you, in short, to remind you that your liberties are challenged as well as ours; you are now engaged in a bloody war in defence of the same; remember, the measure you meet out to others, heaven will measure back to you again. Can you stand before the throne of God and seek to be protected and defended in your cause, while you are striving to overthrow and destroy the liberties of the State of Vermont, which stands on as large a scale of reason for independence as any other State on the Continent.

AGAIN we request you seriously to consider, whether the object is worth the pursuit before you rush head-long like the horse into the battle. Force is seldom employed with success to change the opinions, or convince the minds of freemen. But admitting that you should conquer us and affix us to any of your governments. Will that enrich you? Certainly not: Will it make us better neighbours? it cannot. Will our destruction secure your liberties? By no means. What then will you obtain finally, for all your trouble and expense, not to say bloodshed. Nothing but a conquered depopulated territory, where every single inhabitant, will be so embittered against you, that you will be necessitated to keep a standing army perpetually, to keep them in subjection, and support government. And that very army in time, being accustomed to trample upon the liberties of mankind, will, with the assistance of the disaffected, like the worm at the root of Jonah's gourd, eat up and devour the whole of your liberties, and thus the righteous Judge of the universe will give that people that deprive Vermont of her rights, slavery to drink for they will be worthy.

THE END.

APPENDIX E.

A CONCISE REFUTATION OF THE CLAIMS OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE AND MASSACHUSETTS-BAY TO THE TERRITORY OF VERMONT; WITH OCCASIONAL REMARKS ON THE LONG DISPUTED CLAIM OF NEW-YORK TO THE SAME. Written by ETHAN ALLEN and JONAS FAY Esq^{rs}. Published by order of the Governor & Council of Vermont.

BENNINGTON the first day of January 1780.

JOSEPH FAY, Sec^{ry}.

HARTFORD: Printed by HUDSON & GOODWIN.¹

THIS Government, astonished at the late extraordinary claims of New-Hampshire and Massachusetts-Bay to the territory of Vermont and the following remarks having been omitted in any piece heretofore published on the subject, laid themselves under the disagreeable necessity of publicly exposing the imbecility and depravity of those governments, whose candour on the very first attempts should have suggested to them that in prosecuting such claims they would unavoidably become accomplices with the government of New-York in their many aggravated and long continued oppressions of the people of this State. This Government, sensible of the devices of certain leading gentlemen of the government of New-York against them, and being apprised that they had some time since proposed to certain leading gentlemen in the States of New-Hampshire and Massachusetts-Bay to divide this State among the three States aforesaid which are now actually claiming it severally,² and sensible likewise of our danger from the frontier situation to the Province of Quebec, and of the influence which the government of New-York (especially if corroborated by those of New-Hampshire and Massachusetts-Bay) might have in the Congress of the United States in which we have [are] not represented—These apprehensions excited this Government to remonstrate at the General Courts of New-Hampshire and Massachusetts-Bay against their making and prosecuting such claims which in their nature and tendency are cruel, unjustifiable, and without any reasonable foundation for their support:—And having received several acts of Congress of the 24th of September last, among which is contained a recommendation to the several States of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay and New-York, to pass laws expressly authorizing the Grand Council of America to hear and determine the differences which have subsisted between them on one part and the inhabitants of a district of country called the New-Hampshire Grants (as they are pleased to term them) on the other, on the first day of February next; and a citation (only) to the inhabitants of the latter to choose Agents and otherwise prepare for the hearing aforesaid, [this Government] have therefore thought it expedient to exhibit to the world, and to the honorable Congress as a very respectable part of it, the apparent impropriety of those claims.

nicated this letter by message to the Assembly. Feb. 22, the message and letter were referred to a joint committee of both houses, of which Micah Townshend of Brattleboro' was chairman on the part of the House. March 8, Mr. Townshend reported an answer to their delegates in Congress, which declared it "ineligible at present to attempt an accommodation with New Hampshire in the mode you have proposed;" but declared that "at a future day possibly the measure may appear not only expedient but necessary."* April 10 1780, Mr. Townshend wrote from Brattleboro' to Gov. Clinton as follows: "By what I can learn the legislature of New Hampshire or at least some of their members, and their partizans west of Connecticut river, entertain an opinion that the western boundary of that state will be fixed at the Green Mountains."† Under date of Jan. 16, 1783, at Philadelphia, John Taylor Gilman, delegate to Congress from New Hampshire, wrote to President Weare for instructions, saying: "The Legislature of New York are now in session, and from some information which I have had this Day think it is probable they will Repeal their Act by which the Decision of this matter was Submitted to Congress, if it should be proposed in the present state of this matter and without Deciding on the Question of their Independence, that it be Recommended to New York and New Hampshire to adjust this matter between themselves Reserving to Massachusetts the Right of Claiming, and a trial upon the principles of Confederation, and that Congress pledge themselves for carrying into effect their agreement."‡ For other memoranda on the same subject see H. And first we shall consider the pretensions of Massachusetts-Bay.¹ It is admitted that previous to the adjudication of the boundary line in 1739 between New-Hampshire and Massachusetts-Bay the latter had claimed a considerable part of the present jurisdiction of New-Hampshire, from the Atlantic Ocean on the east part (which claim did equally interfere with the territory now in dispute) and in longitude through the main land to the South Sea, on the west part, as described in the charter of the Colony of Massachusetts-Bay. This antiquated claim of Massachusetts-Bay was referred to the King and Council by an appeal from a Court of Commissioners previously authorized by the same authority to determine, and mark out the boundaries between the said two provinces, as may appear from the following extract of the settlement of that line viz.

“And whereas appeals from the determination of the said Commissioners have been laid before his Majesty by the Agents for the respective Provinces of the Massachusetts-Bay and New-Hampshire; which said appeals have been before the Committee of Council for hearing appeals from the plantations, who after having considered the whole matter and heard all parties concerned therein did report unto his Majesty as their opinion that the northern boundary of the said Province of Massachusetts-Bay are and be a similar curve line, pursuing the course of Merrimack river at three miles distance of [on] the north side thereof beginning at the Atlantic Ocean and ending at a point due north of a place on a plan returned by said Commissioners called Pantucket [Patucket] Falls and a strait line drawn from thence due west cross the said river till it meets with his Majesty’s other governments, which said report of the Committee of Council, his Majesty hath been pleased with the advice of his Privy Council to approve, and to declare, adjudge and order that the northern boundary of the said Province of Massachusetts-Bay are and be a similar curve line, pursuing the Course of the Merrimack River at three miles distance on the north side thereof beginning at the Atlantic Ocean and ending at a point due north of a place on the plan returned by the said Commissioners called Pantucket Falls and a strait line drawn from thence due west cross the said river till it meets his Majesty’s other governments.”

This adjudication was made in 1739² which was forty years ago and the government of the Massachusetts-Bay have regulated their jurisdiction accordingly ever since which is too notorious to be disputed and may be further illustrated by a variety of acts of their own as well as of the British government. One of them respects Fort Dummer which was built by the Massachusetts-Bay Province in 1724, and garrisoned at their expence a number of years, but upon its being excluded from their jurisdiction by the settlement of the boundary line aforesaid, the Bay Province represented to the government at home that the said district of land claimed as aforesaid and Fort Dummer having been determined to be the property of New-Hampshire they were no longer obliged to garrison and maintain it, and praying that as it was necessary for the defence of that part of the country that New-Hampshire might be directed to support it: In consequence of which an order passed the King and Council in 1744 as follows viz. “That the Governor and Commander in Chief of New-Hampshire should forthwith move the Assembly in his Majesty’s name to make a provision for that service;” and at the same time informing them "that in case they refused to comply with so reasonable and necessary a proposal, his Majesty would find himself under the necessity of restoring that fort with a proper district of land contiguous to it, to the Province of Massachusetts-Bay, who cannot with justice be required to maintain a fort no longer within their boundary." In consequence of this requisition New-Hampshire did actually maintain Fort Dummer and paid a demand of arrears for its previous support to Massachusetts-Bay and the receipt thereof remains in the Secretary's office of New-Hampshire to this day.

² The date of the decision is March 5 1740, in Belknap’s History of New-Hampshire, Vol. II, p. 132.

After these solemn governmental transactions, and actual compliance of Massachusetts-Bay to the said royal adjudication, their pretensions to the jurisdiction of Vermont appear to be not only impertinent but arbitrary, and should such a precedent take place would make an end to all jurisdictional limitations through the United States as well as those of Vermont, as in this case no ancient settlement of boundary lines respecting them could be valid, and consequently the greatest confusions and disorders would necessarily ensue. Furthermore, if there be any thing in those pretensions of Massachusetts-Bay they equally effect [affect] the actual jurisdiction of New-Hampshire to the eastward of Connecticut River, over which eastern part when Massachusetts-Bay shall exercise their jurisdiction, it will be early enough for them to do the same over an equal width of the jurisdiction of Vermont. After all provided there be any reality in those pretensions there is a great deal in them as they are founded on a charter right, and consequently challenge the right of soil: This the principal gentlemen of their Court gave our Agent to understand that they demanded with jurisdiction, which opens another scene of expence to the inhabitants (provided their pretended claim takes place.) This will undoubtedly be displeasing to the present occupants, their lands having been (the greater part of them) already granted by New-Hampshire and New-York, but [as] there is no probability of satisfying the many unwarrantable and avaricious claims of the several contending governments, the citizens of Vermont therefore judge it reasonable to eject them.

This Government have such a sacred regard to the occupancy of land within their jurisdiction that they would not wish to have the possessors and occupants disturbed in their possessions, notwithstanding such lands may have been appropriated by either of the contending governments (New-York not excepted.)

We come now to the consideration of the pretensions of New-Hampshire to the jurisdiction of Vermont by introducing the settlement of the boundary line between them in [and] New-York as follows viz:

"At a Court of St. James the 20th day of July 1764.

Vice Chamberlain in Slade's State Papers, p. 19, and Mr. Vice Chamberlain in Bradley's Appeal. The Lord Chancellor and Lord Chamberlain both seem to have been members of the Council, and probably the Vice Chancellor and Vice Chamberlain sat in the absence of their principals.

“Whereas there was this day read at the Board, a report made by the

 “from the Lords Commissioners for trade and Plantations relative to the “disputes that have some years subsisted between the Provinces of “New-Hampshire and New-York concerning the boundary line between “those Provinces: His Majesty, taking the same into consideration, was “pleased, with the advice of his Privy Council, to approve of what is “herein [therein] proposed and doth accordingly hereby order and de“clare the west bank [western banks] of the river Connecticut, from “where it enters the Province of Massachusetts-Bay, as far north as the “forty-fifth degree of northern latitude, to be the boundary line between “the said two Provinces of New-Hampshire and New-York, wherefore
 “the respective Governors and Commanders in Chief of his Majesty’s “said Provinces of New-Hampshire and New-York, for the time being,
 “and all others whom it may concern, are to take notice of his Majesty’s “pleasure hereby signified and govern themselves accordingly.

“WILLIAM BLAIR.”

Probably the advocates for the pretensions of the claim of New-Hampshire to this territory, will advert to the 47th and 48th pages¹ of our Vindication of the right of the inhabitants of Vermont to form into an independent State, where we show the nullity of the said adjudicated line of 1764, in consequence of the declaration of independence of the United States and the annihilation of the British government in America, asserting, that in consequence of our arguments alluded to as aforesaid they open a door for the claim of New-Hampshire to take place by making void that line in order to defeat the claim of New-York. The attention of the reader is requested very particularly to the following observations viz. The territory of Vermont, until the people’s declaration of independence, was extra-provincial land and the governments of New-Hampshire and New-York claimed the jurisdiction of it by turns, merely from the sovereign will and pleasure of the King as neither of these governments were possessed of any charter-right as a body politic which they could call their own or challenge in their own right. Had New-Hampshire been possessed of such a charter-right their claim would have been more respectable and permanent and would have operated against the adjudication of 1764 aforesaid provided such boundaries had been previously ascertained. But this disputed territory being in those times crown lands and without the limits of any of the (then) colonies or plantations, the King’s authority over it was therefore absolute and while this power remained in being, the last royal decree was valid and binding, which was that of 1764 aforesaid, which extended the jurisdiction of New-York over the said territory at which time the claim of New-Hampshire to the premises became extinct and finished, nor is it in their power to renew their claim to this government, being wholly destitute of any charter right thereto, and having lost it by the same arbitrary power by which they acquired it, and ought therefore to be finally silent about it, as well on account of their own relinquishing of such claim, and not affording the inhabitants any protection or jurisdictional support for a succession of years but since the declaration of the independence of this State have not only relinquished their said claim by their governmental transactions explicitly acknowledging the independence of this State. The proper credentials of this last fact will be exhibited in the following sheets with some further illustrations, being at present impatient to observe, that as the claim of New-Hampshire to this territory was nullified, and became extinct in consequence of the royal decree of 1764 aforesaid, and as before argued, and as the claim of New-York to this territory was as equally deficient as that of New-Hampshire to any charter right as a body politic or inherent constitutional jurisdiction; the claim of New-York therefore only survived that of New-Hampshire from the arbitrary decree of 1764 to the glorious æra of AMERICAN LIBERTY and INDEPENDENCE which was declared the fourth day of July 1776 and then expired also, to the inexpressible joy of the free citizens of Vermont, who in consequence thereof reverted to a state of nature, and have since formed government on the true principles of liberty.

This royal arbitrary line in the time of the kingly power was in the nature of it incompatible with the rights of a free people as they were thereby divested of the inestimable priviledge of choosing their own form of government, and of electing their chief magistrates, nor were they in such circumstances in any condition to know what form or alteration of government might next take place, as the King and his creatures were the sole arbitrators of it. In fine this people have suffered every indignity and oppression that prodigal and lucrative governors, and their swarm of hungry dependents could invent, and carry into execution, and it is surprising, that any persons that live in these days of liberty still entertain any idea that the said boundary line should operate in favour of the claim of New-York. From this short review of the claims of Massachusetts-Bay and New-Hampshire, they cannot affect the claim of Vermont to independence, which may be further illustrated by a two fold argument viz. provided those adjudicated boundary line of 1739 and 1764 aforesaid be deemed authentic and valid, their claims to Vermont must be considered as nugatory and abortive, but on the other hand if those adjudicated lines be considered as null and void, in this case the claim of Vermont, to the jurisdiction of this territory, would be much better grounded than those of Massachusetts-Bay or New-Hampshire, inasmuch as their government hath for a long time been formed by the authority of the people at large, or their legal representatives, who under God have a natural and indisputable right to form their own governments, so that the claims of Massachusetts-Bay and New-Hampshire to this territory are bar'd either by the aforesaid adjudication or in consequence of the legal establishment of the government of Vermont, nor is it possible for any one or both of those governments to set up a third principle whereby they can deduce a legal or just claim to any part of this government, for if their claims are not founded on the lines formerly ascertained by the British government [or] on the free consent and mutual association of the people of this territory, their pretensions are frivolous or tyrannical. This two fold argument is not viewed as being absolutely necessary in order to defeat the claims of those governments to the said premises but was introduced by way of supererogation. Sufficient it is in order to vindicate the claim of independence of the Statē of Vermont against those of Massachusetts-Bay and New-Hampshire, that these governments have for a series of years conformed to those settlements of 1739 and 1764 in their legislature [legislative] and executive capacities, and acted uniformly agreeable to those limitations until within a few months last past. Sundry years before the commencement of the present British war with the colonies, the people of this territory solicited both of those governments, at different times to extend their governmental protection to them, and prevent the ruin with which they were threatened by the oppressive iron rod of the government of New-York but could obtain none. But it appears by their late claim that they have since altered their minds although their motives herein (it is presumed) are far from being honourable—for it is a great fundamental and universal principle in all free governments, that government and protection are inseparably connected together, so that without protection or at least an attempt to extend it when earnestly solicited as aforesaid, government naturally and necessarily ceases to be, or in other words, such a refusal of protection implicitly disavows any right of jurisdiction or forfeits any supposed right either by neglecting such claims or refusing such protection. From whence we may infer that all pretenders to government which have not ultimately the good of the governed in view and do not afford, or endeavour to afford protection to those over whom they pretended such claims, should instead of the respects due to legislatures, courts and the like, be esteemed and treated as enemies to society and the rights of mankind. Thus it appears from the great and most universally received maxims in all free governments that the citizens of Vermont are and ought to be independent of the three governments which lay claim to them; and that every of their said pretensions are daring usurpations and insults on the liberty of an independent, brave and free people, who have never received any governmental protection or benefit from either of them, but instead thereof have every thing to apprehend from their venality and usurpation. Had New York succeeded in their various and insidious attempts to subjugate the people of Vermont, the recent claims of those other governments would never have been mentioned and the jurisdiction of New-York over this territory would at this day have been indisputable, so that Massachusetts-Bay and New-Hampshire have taken advantage of the controversy between New-York and Vermont, and even of the bravery of the latter in defending their natural rights and liberties, as the only possible ground of laying their frivolous claims. They have furthermore taken the advantage of the bravery of the United States in general and Vermont likewise, in bringing about the present revolution by which means they dare extend their pretended claims which it is presumed they would not have had the hardiness to endure [against] the British government over the head of those royal adjudications of 1739 and 1764 aforesaid, and it is worthy a remark that these claims have been started about three years since the declaration of the independence of the United States. Still the people of Vermont, legally speaking, remained under the British Government (over which Governor Philip Skeene was commissioned chief magistrate and next to this Government has the best claim to the jurisdiction of Vermont) from the 4th day of July 1776 to the 15th day of January next following and then in a solemn manner disavowed the British government and rejected the pretensions of Mr. Skeene, and all other pretenders to the jurisdiction of this territory, and declared themselves a free and Independent State; and have as they humbly conceive, in their various struggles for liberty, fairly merited the enjoyment of it.¹ This they consider as the ultimate reason of their many expences, labours, toils, battles, victories and hazards, and for the attainment of which they have cheerfully suffered such an uncommon series of concomitant evils.

The following exhibits will set the pretensions of the claim of New-Hampshire in a true light. Not long after the settlement of the jurisdictional line in 1764 between New-York and New-Hampshire, Governor Benning Wentworth, who then presided over the latter, issued his proclamation, the principal import of which is, "That whereas it was the King's pleasure that this territory should be under the jurisdiction of New-York—That New-Hampshire paid a ready obedience—further“more advertising such persons as held either civil or military commissions (in this district) under the authority of New-Hampshire to sur-

 “the inhabitants to conform to the government of New-York.” We

 Hampshire to Governor Tryon, [of New York,] of the 19th of October
 1771 viz. “That he had invariably recommended” to those inhabitants “implicit obedience to the law of the province of New-York and upon

MINUTES OF COUNCIL

Relative to the Governor of New Hampshire’s letter touching the riotous behaviour of the New Hampshire grantees.

IN COUNCIL November 13th 1771.

His Excellency was pleased to communicate a Letter of the 19th day of October last, from Benning [John] Wentworth Esq* Governor of the Province of New Hampshire, in Answer to a Letter from his Excellency the Governor of this province, complaining of an Exparte Survey of the River Connecticut lately made by the Government of New Hampshire, also informing Governor Wentworth of the Riotous Behaviour of Persons within this province claiming Lands under Grants of New Hampshire, and that the Riotous Spirit of those people seems to be greatly owing to the assurances they pretend to have received from Governor Wentworth that the Line will be altered so as to include the said claimants within the Jurisdiction of his Government —in which Letter Governor Wentworth utterly disclaims any such or the like Assurances, and declares that he had invariably recommended implicit obedience to the Laws, and upon all occasions positively disavowed any connections with those people, and observes that he thought it unnecessary to consult this Government previous to the late Survey of Connecticut River, as that River is comprehended within the Limits of his own Government.

The Board Taking into Consideration the dangerous Tendency of the Disturbances at present prevailing in that part of the Country, and that

* Note by the Editor.—This is a remarkable error. Benning Wentworth was allowed “opportunity to resign,” to escape removal; and John, a nephew, was commissioned as his successor Aug. 11, 1766.—See Belknap’s New-Hampshire, Vol. 11, pp. 260, 261.

“—The premises being read, it is considered that by his Majesty’s order
 “in Council of the 20th of July 1764, the western banks of Connecticut “River was then commanded to be the west bounds of this Province and “that this Government has been and is entirely obedient thereto. There“fore the said proclamation relating wholly to matters and things with“out the boundaries of this province, it is advised that the publication “thereof, by the authority of this province, is extra-provincial, and there“fore in our opinion his Excellency is further advised not to issue any “proclamation relating to the premises. Secondly, that it is not expedi“ent for the government in any wise to interfere with, or concern in “running the lines between his Majesty’s province of New York and “Canada, which by his Excellency Governor Tryon’s letter of the 23^d “December 1771 is already begun, by Commissioners appointed for that “service agreeable to his Majesty’s instructions, wherein it does not ap“pear that this province is referred to or mentioned.

“A True Copy from the Minutes of the Council,

“Attest, GEORGE KING, Deputy Secretary.”

The following is a copy of a letter from the President of the Council of New Hampshire to the (then) Secretary of this State, viz.

[Here was inserted a copy of the letter of Meshech Weare of July 19 1777, addressed to “Ira Allen Esq. Secretary of the State of Vermont”—for which see ante, Appendix D, p. 207. Next followed the letter of President Weare of Aug. 22 1778, on the first union of New Hampshire towns, addressed to the honorable Thomas Chittenden—all but the first paragraph; for which letter see Vol. I, p. 414.]

The foregoing letter was laid before the General Assembly of this State at their session in October 1778 agreeable to President Weare’s request, and a joint Committee was thereupon appointed from the Council and Assembly and the said Union was dissolved and President Weare’s demands fully and amply adjusted and settled at the then next

Governor Wentworth had not thought proper by public act of his Government to disavow the assurances, the Rioters pretend to have received from him, humbly advise his Excellency, and it is accordingly ordered by his Excellency the Governor with the Advice of his Council, that a proclamation be prepared notifying the declaration of Governor Wentworth on this subject contained in his Letter above mentioned—Stating the claim of this Province to the Lands Westward of Connecticut River—Strictly injoining the Inhabitants of those Lands to yield Obedience to the Laws within this Government: And directing the Magistrates and other Civil Officers to be vigilant in their Duty and attentive to the Preservation of the public Peace; and to transmit the Names of all offenders herein, that such measures may be taken for their punishment, as the Nature of their Crimes shall require—And that the Draft of such proclamation when prepared be laid before his Excellency for the approbation of this Board.

Gov. Tryon issued a proclamation accordingly, dated Dec. 11 1771, a copy of which was sent to Gov. Wentworth Jan. 8 1772. Wentworth acknowledged the receipt of the proclamation and renewedly disavowed any connection with the “violence & illegal opposition to Government” of the New Hampshire grantees.—For Tryon’s letter to Wentworth, Oct. 2 1771, see Doc. History of New York Vol. 4, pp. 445-6; and for Tryon’s proclamation see the same, pp. 456-459.

adjourned session of Assembly held at Bennington on the 12th day of February 1779 as will appear by the following extract of the report of said Committee and the Resolution of the Assembly thereon, viz.

[Here followed the report and resolution, certified by "M. LYON, Clerk;" for which, Lyon's certificate excepted, see Vol. I, pp. 430, 431.]

It is presumed that from the settlement of the boundary line between New York and New Hampshire in 1764, to the date of President Weare's letter of the 22^d August aforesaid, which is more than fourteen years, that New Hampshire, (during this period) had given up in the most explicit and public manner, all pretensions to the jurisdiction of any and every part of the lands comprehended in this State. Governor Benning Wentworth's proclamation aforesaid sets this matter in a clear light, soon after the alteration of jurisdiction, directing the settlers under New-Hampshire to conform to the laws of New York.¹ The letter from the Governor of New Hampshire [John Wentworth] to Governor Tryon, of the 19th of October 1771, speaks the same language, viz. "That he had "invariably recommended implicit obedience to the laws" of New York, "and upon all occasions positively disavowed any connection with "those people." The Governor and Council of New Hampshire the 8th of January 1772 wholly renounced their claim to the premises: "It is "considered that by his Majesty's order in Council of the 20th July 1764 "the western banks of Connecticut river was then commanded to [be] "the west bounds of this province; and that this government has been "entirely obedient thereto." President Weare's letter to Ira Allen Esq. proceeds still further, and positively concedes to the independence of this State. It appears that the Court of the State of New Hampshire, by their President, address him in his official character, viz. as "Secretary of the State of Vermont;" and in the contents of the letter when writing to the Secretary of this State, not less than three times gives it the appellation or stile of "your State;" and observes in the finishing clause of the letter, "in behalf of the Council and Assembly I am," &c. From all which it appears that the said letter has the authority of the General Court of that State for its support, and which in the most express terms, acknowledgeth the independence of this State which is of itself a final bar to the claim of New Hampshire. For if Governments can relinquish their claim of jurisdiction when they please and assume it again at pleasure, the whole notion of governmental jurisdiction is reduced to a mere romance and nothing permanent, obligatory or binding in it, and therefore such a precedent is inadmissible, as it would, if admitted to become general, destroy all order and decorum in the universe.

It should be acknowledged that the Court of New-Hampshire, through the channel of their President's letter to Governor Chittenden, before inserted,² offered a number of reasons relative to the impropriety of this State's taking into union sixteen towns east of Connecticut river, which reasons are equally conclusive against the claim of New-Hampshire to the westward of the same river. Says Mr. Weare, their President: "Is ¹ The proclamation of Benning Wentworth, surrendering the jurisdiction of the territory of Vermont to New York, seems to have been issued immediately after the order of the king of July 1764 was received, and before the proclamation of the Governor of New York of April 10 1765.—See Ira Allen's History of Vermont, in Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. I, p. 341; and Hiland Hall's Early History, p. 478.

“there any ascertaining the boundaries between any of the United States of America but by the lines formerly established by the authority of Great Britain? I am sure there is not.” This being admitted, we are equally sure New-Hampshire has no right to any territorial jurisdiction to the westward of said river. Notwithstanding, it appears that the Court of New-Hampshire, in the first place, plead the settlement of the line in 1764, as the main ground of their title to those sixteen towns aforesaid, (west of the Mason line) by which means they are included in their jurisdiction, and in a few months afterward break over the said line of 1764 and lay claim to the State of Vermont, when at the same time nothing can be more apparent than that the same arguments by which they establish their claim to those said sixteen towns east of the river effectually bars their claim to the westward of the same river, and leaves the contested territory to be disputed between New-York and Vermont. “I am surprized,” says the President, that “they,” speaking of the inhabitants of this State, “should supply their enemies with arguments against them, by their connecting themselves with people (having reference to those sixteen towns) whose circumstances are totally different from their own, and who are actually members of the State of New-Hampshire.” This last clause, affirming that the inhabitants of those sixteen towns were actually members of the State of New-Hampshire, at the same time implicitly affirms that the inhabitants on the west side of the said river were not, which is fully explained in the preceding part of the same paragraph, viz. “whose circumstances are wholly different from their own,” that is, the members of the State of Vermont, which is still further explained from another paragraph of the same letter, when, after stating the facts relative to the aforesaid union with those sixteen towns before frequently mentioned, says, “on which I am directed to represent to you, and to desire it may be laid before the representatives of your people.” As this was addressed to the Governor of Vermont from the Court of New-Hampshire to be laid before the representative body or General Assembly in which the claim of New-Hampshire is clearly set up, and their right vindicated to a number of towns over which Vermont on a mistaken and wrong representation had encroached, upon the representation whereof, the General Court of the State of Vermont dissolved the Union as aforesaid and agreeable to the claim and request of the Court of the State of New-Hampshire relinquished every connection, as a political body, with those sixteen towns east of Connecticut river. And thus the respective governments of New-Hampshire and Vermont having mutually settled their boundary line on the west banks of Connecticut river agreeable to the adjudication thereof in 1764 between New-York and New-Hampshire cannot fail of operating as a final bar against any subsequent claim of New-Hampshire to any part of the State of Vermont. For New-Hampshire made their claim and Vermont very readily closed with them and gave them their whole demands in which the minds of both governments met and the dispute naturally and necessarily ended, and it is but children’s play for New-Hampshire to make a second demand on the State of Vermont; for if one settlement is not decisive and binding, neither would a second be, a third, and so on ad infinitum.

Previous to the Claims of Massachusetts-Bay and New-Hampshire to Vermont the simplicity of the inhabitants of this Government and their veneration for Congress was so great, that it is highly probable that they would have very frankly submitted the long controversy between them and New-York, to the final decision of the Congress of the United States, though at the same time they were far from an opinion that Congress had any legal inherent or constitutional right (exclusive of their own consent and approbation) so to do : But the recent claims of Massachusetts-Bay and New-Hampshire in concert with New-York, and it is suspected in confederacy with each other to divide this State among those three governments has excited their apprehensions for though it may not prove a triple league as is imagined, it is at least a strong combination of interests which will undoubtedly agree in the ruin of this State, whatever disputes may happen between themselves relative to the jurisdiction thereof. And as to the States of Virginia, N. Carolina, and S. Carolina, whose territory's are immensely large, and whose interest it is to maintain their respective sovereignties over their extensive claims, which may in natural probability influence their delegates in Congress to oppose the independence of Vermont as it may in future operate as a precedent to divide those large territories into different States, (not that it is apprehended by us that there is any similarity in the circumstances of this tract of country to any other part of America,) and thus from views of their own particular interests be very partial and biased judges of the right of Vermont to independence, and instead of judging on the principles of justice and equity which respects Vermont as opposed to the claims of Massachusetts-Bay, New-Hampshire and New-York, may rather determine the matters agreeable to their own ambition and interest, so that were Vermont to calmly submit their indubitable claim of independence to Congress, though they are as respectable a body as the world ever produced, it would be by no means certain that Vermont could have an impartial trial ; as there may be many connections of interests very prejudicial to them which at present we cannot conceive of and which is out of our power to come at the knowledge of as this State is not represented in Congress.

These things being premised and as the freemen of this State have never had any voice in electing, forming or creating Congress, as a political body, or had any representation therein; but have rather been misrepresented: And whereas this State held their charter of liberty from Heaven and not "of man or the will of man," [they] have upon a full and candid examination and consideration determined not to submit HEAVEN BORN FREEDOM to the arbitrament of any tribunal below the stars, which through infirmity might deprive them of it: But as they have closely embraced it in the most critical and hazardous times, are determined to hold it fast, except it be torn from them by the hand of power; which resolution we trust will be justified by the Court of Heaven, and commended by all true friends to the liberty and happiness of mankind.

The following is an extract from the proceedings of the General Assembly of Vermont at their session in October last, viz.

Here followed the proceedings of the General Assembly of Vermont of Oct. 20 and 21 1779, on the resolutions of Congress of Sept. 24 1779, for which see ante, Appendix B, pp. 191, 192.

APPENDIX F.

MISSION OF IRA ALLEN TO NEW JERSEY, PENNSYLVANIA, DELAWARE, AND MARYLAND.

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF VERMONT, Oct. 21, 1779.

Resolved that an Agent be chosen to wait on the General Assemblies of the States of New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, the lower Counties on the Delaware, [now Delaware,] and Maryland, and to transmit to them the pamphlets entitled "a vindication of the [opposition of the] inhabitants of Vermont to the Government of New-York, &c." and to transact any other business with either of the said Assemblies as may be found necessary (in behalf of this State) and report to this Assembly.

Chose for the above purpose the honorable Ira Allen Esq^r.

The letter of Ira Allen to the Council of Pennsylvania undoubtedly embraces substantially the representations made to the other states named in his commission, but it is deemed best to prefix, by way of introduction and further explanation of that letter, Allen's account of his mission given in his history of Vermont, which was as follows :¹

To discover the several interests and dispositions of each State south of New-York, respecting the interest and independence of Vermont, and to shew the consequence of that State heretofore in the common cause, as well as to demonstrate the natural and divine right the people have to form a government for themselves, the General Assembly appointed Ira Allen, Esq. to attend the Legislatures of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, and other states, if time permitted, before the first of February, 1780, and on that day to be at Philadelphia, and join Jonas Fay, Moses Robinson, and Stephen R. Bradley, as a committee, by the Assembly of Vermont appointed to wait on Congress, and shew the just claim the State had to be independent, and to hold the lands under New Hampshire Grants.

Mr. Allen, according to his appointment, attended the Legislatures of the fore-named States, and distributed sundry pamphlets written in vindication of the claims and doings of Vermont. Many questions arose respecting the local interest of Vermont, by a junction with the other States, and their views, touching the unlocated lands, and the confiscated property of the royalists. It is to be observed, that a question subsisted in Congress, respecting the unappropriated lands, and the property of the loyalists, who had joined the enemy against the independence of the United States. These four States were of opinion that all property wrested from the king of Great Britain and his adherents, by the efforts of the people of the United States, ought to be disposed of for defraying the expences of the war, and not for the emolument of any one State in which it was situated or was claimed. These States (Pennsylvania excepted) had no claims of consequence in the west; neither had Vermont; therefore upon a similar interest, and on the assurance of Mr. Allen, that if Vermont was admitted to a seat in Congress, she would adhere to those principles, they seemed to wish to favour the interest of Vermont. Mr. Allen urged, that an account of the lands granted and confiscated in Vermont, should be accounted for as a small part of their unlocated lands and confiscated estates throughout the United States; that as partners in common and new beginners, it was necessary to make use of a part of their share for the common good, being very much exposed to the common enemy, from an extensive frontier contiguous to Champlain and Canada, and from whence eruptions might easily be made into the State of New York, and the New England States, in case of rendering Vermont of no importance in the union; further, that the disposal of such lands and property furnished money to defray the expences in part of the war, helped to alleviate, in a considerable degree, the burthens of the people, and to strengthen the frontiers against the common enemy. These reasons, with the political consequence of Vermont in the capture of Ticondaroga, Crown Point, &c. and the cutting off the first wing of General Burgoyne's army, operated in a two-fold degree, and had a salutary effect on Congress. On the first of February, 1780, the Commissioners from Vermont met at Philadelphia, but nothing conclusive was done, and the agents returned home, after having made official offers in behalf of the State, to bear full and just proportion of the expences of the war, on their being admitted to a seat in Congress.

From February 1780, when it was supposed the Vermont question was to be decided, until Oct. 29 1782, contemporaneously with the prosecution of her claim to Vermont, New York labored persistently, skillfully and successfully, to deprive Vermont of the favor which Allen had gained in several of the states by means of the land question. Though New York failed at last in the controversy with Vermont, she gained the honor of making the first cession of western lands to the United States, and of forcing Virginia to follow her example, which settled the question in the other five land-claiming states.—See The Constitution, by W. HICKEY, sixth edition, pp. 414-422; and HILAND HALL'S Early History, pp. 316, 403-414.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan^y 20th, 1780.

Honored Sirs,—I doubt not but your Excellency, & most, if not all your Honors have heard more or less of the Controversy subsisting between the State of New York on the one, & the State of Vermont on the other Part; and as it is thought by some to endanger the Internal Peace of America, I beg leave to make a few observations thereon; and first, said Controversy was occasioned by the undue influence of Governor Colden and his adhearance [adherents] at the Rotten Court of Britain, in 1764, by obtaining jurisdiction over that Part of the then Province of New Hampshire, situate to the west of Connecticut River, and by the undue Exercise of the same, in laying subsequent Pattens [patents] on those antisedantly derived from New Hampshire, in Prejudice to the first Grantees & Settlers, and by the undue Exercise of law to bring about their vile and mercenary Purposes, by which means the Contending Parties were greatly Exasperated towards each other, and had appealed to arms before the Present Revolution.

At which time the Inhabitants of the now State of Vermont took an active Part with their Country, thinking to swallow up their old Quarrel with New York, in their General Conflict for Liberty.

Since which time said Inhabitants have assumed to themselves (amongst the Powers of the Earth) that inestimable Blessing of Heaven, sivil Government (on the same Grand, Original, Basis, or Great Rule, of Eternal Right, that the other free States of America did, and on which a number of the Present Powers of Europe revolted from the Kingdoms to which they paid allegiance), and have Governed their Internal and External Police by the same more than three years.

Yet the uneasy, and never-to-be-contented Citizens of New York, have Indeavour'd to surprise Congress into a Determination of that Important Controversy in their favour, and as they would have it Exparta (Thereby to carry into Execution the reduction of Vermont, an Enterprise they attempted some years ago, and could not Effect, and which their own Militia seem not inclined to undertake,) which has Occasioned the Governor and Council of Vermont to Publish a Vindication of the Opposition of said Inhabitants to the Government of New York, and their right to assume Government, and exhibit some of said Vindications [the pamphlet of that title] to Congress, and to the Legislature of each of those States, and to the Principal Officers of the Continental Army, for their Consideration.

The Citizens of Vermont view themselves virtually in Union with the other free States of America, ever since they took Ticondaroga, Crown Point, &c., in favour of the United States, and have from the beginning of this War, and are still willing, to furnish their Quota of men in the field, and have offered to Congress to Pay their full Proportion of the Expence of the War, when the Policy of America will admit them [to] a seat in Congress.

It is to be observed that this Controversy was not Occasioned by the Present Revolution, But subsisted many years before, Consequently it doth not Equally Effect Congress to settle it, as tho. their own measures had given rise to it. The Citizens of Vermont will cheerfully submit to all the Disadvantages that doth, or may, attend them, by not having a seat in Congress, untill the Present troubles shall subside; Rather than to Crowde for it, while it might be thought Prejudicial to the Common weale of the American Empire; yet they consieve themselves justly intitled to a seat in Congress, and will not sell their Birth rite for a mess of Potage, as Profane Esau did.

I am with due Respect, Your Excellencies & Honors most obedient Humb'le serv't,

IRA ALLEN.

N. B. In the vindication I herewith Exhibit, there is no mention made of the clames of the States of the Massachusetts Bay, or New Hampshire, as they were not announsed to Vermont on the 23d of August last, when said Vindication was Published, But will be shortly done, and Published in a similar manner.

I. A.

Directed,

To his Excellency Joseph Reed, Esqr., & Hon'ble Council.

Indorsement,

From Ira Allen, of the State of Vermont. Read in Council, January 25.

ACTION OF CONGRESS IN REFERENCE TO VERMONT, FEB. 7 TO OCT. 6 1780, AND LEGISLATIVE PROCEEDINGS AND DOCUMENTS CONNECTED THEREWITH.

Feb. 1 1780 was the day assigned by Congress, by the resolution of Sept. 24 1779, for action on the claims of New York, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts to the jurisdiction of Vermont. On that day no action was had upon the subject, (in fact there is no record of any proceedings on that day in the journal,) but the agents of Vermont transmitted the following letter to the President of that body.¹

Agents of Vermont to the President of Congress.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb^y. 1, 1780.

Sir:—Inclosed your Excellency will receive a copy of an act of the Legislature of the State of Vermont, appointing and empowering Agents to appear and transact their political affairs at the Congress of the United States as a free and independent State.² Herewith likewise will be communicated to you “A Vindication of the opposition of the inhabitants of Vermont to the government of New York,”³ and “Vermont’s Appeal to the candid and impartial World,”⁴ published by order of the supreme executive authority thereof, the last of which contains some of the principal reasons upon which the inhabitants of Vermont acted, and their right in assuming government, with an address to the honorable American Congress in answer to their act of the 24th of September last, together with a book containing a constitution and code of laws as established by the freemen of said State, and have only to add that we are now in this town, and are ready with full powers on the part of the State of Vermont to close an equitable union with the other independent States of America, and to pledge the faith of our constituents to pay a just proportion of the expence of the present war with Great Britain whenever a constitutional requisition therefor shall be made.

¹In the Clinton Papers, No. 2714, covering this letter, it is stated that it was read in Congress Feb. 7 1780. The journal of Congress of that date, (Folwell’s edition of 1800, Vol. VI, pp. 15, 16,) show that other papers on the subject were presented and read, but this letter is not mentioned. Probably the omission was an error of the transcriber or printer.

Nevertheless we are not authorized, neither does the State whom we have the honor to represent view themselves holden to close with the terms of the resolutions of the 24th of September aforesaid, for the reasons published in the Appeal referred to. But could the Honorable Congress pass over those reasons and determine that they have an uncontrollable right and power to compel Vermont to abide their determination in the premises, yet they cannot conceive it to be just and equitable that such an important cause, in which not only property, but even liberty for which we have been so long contending, [are involved,] ought to be tried, and a final decision so hastily had thereon, on a footing so unequal as it must inevitably be, on the part of Vermont, if done at this time.

All the evidence that can possibly be exhibited, as the case is now unfortunately placed, must be ex parte, and that evidence which must finally prove the claim of New York and all others groundless upon their own stating, is at present out of our power, for if we are allowed proper time to prove that in consequence of our remonstrating and petitioning the court of Great Britain, that power had made a distinct government of the tract now comprehending the State of Vermont, and appointed Governor Skene to preside over the same, previous to America's denying its supremacy, it would silence all our enemies, and oblige every man, even those interested, to acknowledge that the State of Vermont had an equal right with the other American states to assume an independent government.

And until we are allowed sufficient time to collect and publish our evidence, the freemen of Vermont can never voluntarily surrender those liberties which God and nature has vested them with, by reason of any partial adjudication, for if the claims of the one side are founded on arbitrary adjudications of the crown, of course a subsequent adjudication of the same power, respecting the premises, must render the former adjudication null and void.¹ If they are built on a right of purchase they must fail, for we possess that in exclusion of all others, being of a prior date and for a valuable consideration, which no other party can pretend to. If on a right of conquest, they fail. If on a right of settlement and occupancy, in this likewise, as well as on every principle of the law of nature and nations, they certainly fail.

We sincerely lament that neighboring states, from local prejudices, or otherwise, should raise internal animosities during the severe contest with Great Britain, and thereby give fresh reasons to our common enemy to procrastinate the war, and unnecessarily continue the effusion of human blood. And are, sir, your matter was less cautiously stated, though there it was admitted that Vermont had no proof. The truth was probably given in Ira Allen's History of Vermont. This was written and printed in London in 1798, and it is not presuming too much to say, that Allen would have procured a copy of Skene's charter if one had ever been granted. He did say, that the approaching revolutionary war [in 1774-5,] "put an end to the proposed negotiation." His account was as follows:

Hence, in the year 1774, to get rid of the colony of New York, a plan was formed by Col. [Ethan] Allen, Mr. Amos Bird, and other principal characters among the people, in conjunction with Colonel Philip Skene, to have established a new royal colony, which was to contain the grants of New Hampshire, west of Connecticut River, and the country north of the Mohawk River, to latitude 45° north, and bounded west by Iroquois River and Lake Ontario.

Colonel Skene had been an officer in his Majesty's service, and had retired on a large patent of land lying at the south end of Lake Champlain, which was called Skenesboro', [Whitehall,] a proper scite for the capital of the new colony, of which he was proposed to be Governor.

The honor and lucrative prospects thus presented to Colonel Skene, stimulated him to go to London at his own expence, to solicit the accomplishment of an important object to individuals, and to the public: for had he succeeded, the people who had settled under the royal grants of New Hampshire would have been quiet, and relieved from the oppressive conduct of the Governor and Council of the colony of New York.

Colonel Skene's first object, after his arrival in London, was to get himself appointed Governor of the garrisons of Ticonderoga and Crown Point, which being effected, his friends advised him that, to obtain the grand object in view, he should bring forward a petition from the people on the premises to the King and Privy Council, stating, that in order to restore harmony in the said district, and for the convenience of administering justice in a department very remote and extensive, his Majesty would be pleased to establish the territory aforesaid, with colonial privileges, and appoint Colonel Philip Skene Governor thereof.

Information of these matters was transmitted from London to the people of the said district; but the calamity of an approaching war in America put an end to the proposed negotiation for a royal colony, that was to surround that important water LAKE CHAMPLAIN.—See Vi. Historical Society Collections, Vol. 1, pp. 360, 361.

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

MONDAY, February 7, 1780.¹

Mr. Samuel Livermore, a delegate from New Hampshire, attended and produced the credentials of his appointment, which were read.

The delegates of Massachusetts-Bay laid before Congress their Commission and instructions, which were read.

A representation from Peter Alcot [Olcott,] and Bezaleel Woodward, stiling themselves agents from the greater part of the towns in the northern district of the New Hampshire grants, on both sides of Connecticut river, and between the heights of land on the two sides, accompanied with a paper, signed "Joseph Marsh, Chairman of said Convention," purporting to be powers granted them by a convention of members from the towns aforesaid, were read.

An act of the legislature of the state of New Hampshire was laid before Congress, and read, as follows: [Here followed the act, which submitted the claim of New Hampshire to the territory of Vermont to the decision of Congress.]

The two documents referred to in the journal of Congress of Feb. 7 1780 are as follows. To these the editor has added other documents which were presented to Congress but are not named in the printed journal.

*Credentials of Peter Olcott and Bezaleel Woodward.*²

To Peter Olcott and Bezaleel Woodward, Esquires, Gentlemen:

Pursuant to a Vote of a Convention of Members from the towns in the northern parts of the New Hampshire Grants on both sides of Connecticut river, being part of the district known by the name of the State of Vermont, on the seventh day of december last,—You are authorized and empowered jointly or individually to appear as Agents for the people in this part of the Grants at the hearing proposed by certain resolutions of the honorable Continental Congress of the 24th of Sept. last to be had before them on the first day of Feb^y next respecting the disputes and differences relative to jurisdiction betwixt the States of New Hampshire, Massachusetts Bay and New York on the one part and the people of the said New Hampshire Grants who claim to be a separate jurisdiction on the other part. You are to act for the people in this part in all matters relative to said Grants which shall come under the consideration of Congress, or any court to be appointed agreeable to said resolves, and therein to pursue the objects which have heretofore been pointed out to Congress by said Convention and by the people in this part of the Grants so far as the state of matters at the trial shall in your opinion admit.³

*Representation of Peter Olcott and Beza. Woodward to Congress.*¹

To his Excellency the President and the honorable Members of the Congress of the United States of North America:

Peter Olcott and Bezaleel Woodward Agents for the greater part of the towns in the northern district of the New Hampshire Grants on both sides of Connecticut River, and between the heights of land on the two sides, Humbly beg leave to represent

That our Constituents by their Agent in the month of August last laid before a Committee of Congress sundry papers relative to the political situation, to which we beg leave to refer in the hearing relative to said Grants; the great object of which is to communicate the earnest desire of the Inhabitants in the northern district from Connecticut river to the highlands on each side that they may not be subjected to separate jurisdiction, and that in case Congress shall see fit to approve an establishment of a new State on the Grants, that the whole so far as the highlands east of the river may be included in it—otherwise that the whole of the Grants be annexed to New Hampshire—as they conceive a divisional line at the river will be injurious not only to the interest of the inhabitants but also to the public weal.

For the following reasons—

1. The inhabitants on both sides of the river received grants of their lands and charters of incorporation from New Hampshire, which they apprehended gave them good reason to expect to be continued subjects of one and the same State, as they were by their incorporations entitled to the same privileges, which could not (after being granted) be justly taken from them without their consent. The decree in the year one thousand seven hundred and sixty four by which the inhabitants on the two sides of the river were subjected to separate jurisdictions, viz: one part to New York while the other part was continued subject to New Hampshire, was passed without any previous notice to the inhabitants who were most immediately interested in the matter, to whom it was both grievous and injurious, and who never acquiesced therein—and as it was rendered efficacious only by that arbitrary power which has in vain attempted to enslave the United States, the inhabitants conceive that the operation of it cannot be fairly construed to continue since the declaration of independence.

2. The situation of the country in respect to means of communication is such as renders a division at the river greatly injurious to the inhabitants. The range of mountains on the west side and highlands on the east side, at the distance of about twenty miles, extend through the Grants from north to south near one hundred and fifty miles, the valley betwixt which heights is at the river, which will ever occasion the principal communication and traffic of that part of the country to center at the river—therefore a line at the river will bring the center of that business to the extreme parts of the two states; which must ever be inconvenient in a country situated as that is.

3. To have a line at the river will throw each part into a very incommodious situation in respect to government. In that case the State must be about one hundred and fifty miles in length from north to south and not more than from forty to fifty miles in width east and west through the longest extent of which from north to south is a range of mountains which will bring the body of inhabitants on the two extreme parts, render a management of their political affairs very inconvenient and ever have a tendency to create divisions and parties among them.

Again if a State be formed west of the river only, county business in that and New Hampshire must center either at the extremities of the States, or on the heights of land remote from the principal part of inhabitants.

4. The coincident sentiments of the people on the Grants on both sides of the river in respect to government and their desires to be united point out the inexpediency of a division at the river.

We think ourselves warranted to assure Congress that for the foregoing and other reasons a large majority of inhabitants on either side of the river are desirous of an establishment of an union of the whole and that no division be made at the river.

Our Constituents rejoice at the interposition of Congress in the affair, and their assurance of a speedy issue of the contest, by the continuance of which they have been involved in innumerable difficulties; and mean to govern themselves according to the resolutions of Congress on the premises.

We entreat a decision on the subject as soon as Congress in their wisdom can judge expedient, as every delay is productive of new confusions and animosities among the people.

And as in duty bound shall ever pray.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb^y 5th 1780.

Sir,—In pursuance of our appointment from the State of Vermont, we have, in discharge of our trustment, waited on the Grand Council of the United States of America; have delivered to them a Copy of our Credentials, empowering us to close a Union and Confederation with the other States &c. And are now about to take our leave of this city to meet the Assembly of the State we represent, which are shortly to convene to adopt measures for protecting our infant frontiers, and vigorously prosecuting the War against our common enemy.

We are assured that nothing on our part shall deter us, from spiritedly opposing the Savages of the Wilderness or the power of G. Britain. And have full confidence that neither States or individuals, that are attached to the American cause, can wish to divert us from our fixed purpose. And shall ever stand ready to acquiesce in any requisition made by Congress, not incompatible with our own internal police.

*Representation of inhabitants of Hartford, Norwich, Sharon, Royalton, Fairlee, Newbury, and Barnet, presented by PETER OLCOTT to Congress in August 1779, and again presented Feb. 8 1780.*¹

To the honorable the Congress of the United American States:

The inhabitants of the under mentioned Towns on the New Hampshire Grants west of Connecticut River and east of the Green Mountains so called, Humbly beg leave to represent

That about the time of the declaration of independence of the united States, sundry persons from the western part of the said Grants made known to us that the inhabitants west of the Green Mountains were very desirous of having a new State formed on the said New Hampshire Grants—that many among us expressed our willingness for such an event in case the Grants east of Connecticut river might join us in pursuing that object, as we have ever thought their circumstances in almost every respect similar to ours—they having received the grant of their landed property in the same channel, their manners and habits the same, and the local situation of the country such as makes it very inconvenient for us to be divided from them &c.—That we were by an arbitrary decree of the King unjustly deprived of that union with the Grants east of the river, and that we are well assured the Grants in general have ever been desirous of having it restored and influenced principally by a prospect of such union a considerable number of towns from among us did unite with the inhabitants west of the green mountains in forming a constitution for a State.—That the towns on the Grants east of Connecticut River were about the same time invited to join in pursuing that object and in conformity to said invitation a number of towns east of the river were in the month of June last received into union with said new State (then known by the name of Vermont) by a resolve of the Assembly, the members thereof being previously instructed so to do. That said Assembly have since in violation of their faith and honor, deprived the towns east of the river of their protection and actually extinguished the union with them. In consequence whereof a large number of the members of the council and Assembly have withdrawn their connection with that Assembly, to the very general approbation of their constituents. That the said Assembly have ordered a confiscation of the estates of those persons called tories, and have actually disposed of lands in that way to a very great amount, and have sold many estates for but little more than half their real value, of which they have given deeds in the name and behalf of the freemen of said State and appropriated the avails to many frivolous and unnecessary purposes, instead of depositing them in continental loan offices agreeable to a resolve of Congress. Since the withdraw of those members they have resolved to dispose of more than one hundred thousand acres gratis to particular favorites without any advantage accruing thereby to the good people in general.² That from an apprehension of danger to the liberties of the people from designing and ambitious men and for other important reasons a considerable number of towns east of the said green mountains and west of the river have ever from the first refused to unite with said State or own allegiance thereto—So that for the reasons foregoing and others too numerous to mention, the towns which had united with said State having withdrawn their connection with it, there now remain but very few towns east of said mountains which continue connected with said State or own any allegiance thereto.

Notwithstanding all which we are assured that the members who continue to act in assembly have last month appointed a Committee to apply to Congress for an establishment of a State on the said Grants west of Connecticut river, which in the present situation of affairs we beg leave to represent that we utterly refuse our compliance with.

We therefore humbly pray that Congress will be pleased to do nothing relative thereto which may in the least encourage the establishment of a State under those disagreeable circumstances, but on the contrary that they will in some way express their disapprobation of it, and grant such relief to their injured petitioners as in their wisdom may seem fit. And that previous to a determination relative to said State we may have proper notice and opportunity more fully to show our reasons why a new State under present circumstances ought not to be established.

And your petitioners as in duty bound shall ever pray.

Resolved, That Tuesday next be assigned for taking into consideration the disputes and differences relative to the jurisdiction of the states of New-York, Massachusetts-Bay, and New-Hampshire, or such of them as have passed laws agreeable to a recommendation of Congress of the 24th of September last, on one part, and the people of a certain district of country called the New-Hampshire Grants, who claim to be a separate jurisdiction, on the other part.

Massachusetts had passed no act under the resolution of Sept. 24 1779. The question should have been taken up by Congress on the 7th of March, but it was not considered until the 21st, when it was postponed necessarily, as appears from the following:

IN CONGRESS, TUESDAY, March 21, 1780.²

On motion to proceed to the order of the day for taking into consideration the disputes and differences relative to the jurisdiction of the states of New-York, Massachusetts-Bay and New-Hampshire, or such of them as have passed laws, agreeably to a recommendation of Congress of the 24th of September last, on the one part, and the people of a certain tract of country called the New-Hampshire Grants, who claim to be a separate jurisdiction, on the other part:

Ordered, That the same be postponed, nine states, exclusive of those who are parties to the question, not being represented in Congress.

April 17 1780, Mr. Folsom, a delegate in Congress for New Hampshire, writing to Josiah Bartlett, said: "As to Vermont, there were several violent attempts by the delegates of New-York and New-Hampshire to bring the matter before Congress, but without the least appearance of success. Resolutions of Congress adopted June 2, 1780.

FRIDAY, June 2, 1780.³

Congress resumed the consideration of the report of the committee on sundry papers respecting the New-Hampshire Grants, and thereupon came to the following resolutions:

Whereas it is represented to Congress, and by authentic evidence laid before them it appears, that the people inhabiting the district of country, commonly known by the name of the New-Hampshire Grants, and claiming' to be an independent state, have, notwithstanding the resolutions of Congress of the 24th of September, and 2d of October, proceeded as a separate government to make grants of lands and sales of estates by them declared forfeited and confiscated; and have also in divers instances, exercised civil and military authority over the persons and effects of sundry inhabitants within the said district, who profess themselves to be citizens of and to owe allegiance to the state of New-York:

Resolved, That the acts and proceedings of the people inhabiting the said district, and claiming to be an independent state as aforesaid, in contravening the good intentions of said resolutions of the 24th of September and the 2d of October last, are highly unwarrantable, and subversive of the peace and welfare of the United States.

That the people inhabiting the said district, and claiming to be an independent state as aforesaid, be and they hereby are strictly required to forbear and abstain from all acts of authority, civil or military, over the inhabitants of any town or district who hold themselves to be subjects of and to owe allegiance to any of the states claiming jurisdiction of the said territory, in whole or in part, until the decisions and determinations in the resolution aforementioned shall be made.

And whereas the states of New-Hampshire and New-York have complied with the said resolutions of the 24th of September and the 2d of October last, and by their agents and delegates in Congress declared themselves ready to proceed in supporting their respective rights to the jurisdiction of the district aforesaid, in whole or in part, according to their several claims, and in the mode prescribed in the said resolutions: and whereas Congress, by their order of the 21st of March last, did postpone the consideration of the subject of the said resolutions, nine states exclusive of those who were parties to the question not being represented; and by their order of the 17th of May last¹ have directed that letters be written to the states not represented, requesting them immediately to send forward a representation:

Resolved, That Congress will, as soon as nine States exclusive of those who are parties to the controversy shall be represented, proceed to hear and examine into and finally determine the disputes and differences relative to jurisdiction between the three states of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay and New-York, respectively, or such of them as shall have passed such laws as are mentioned in the said resolutions of the 24th of September and the 2d of October last, on the one part, and the people of the district aforesaid, who claim to be a separate jurisdiction, on the other, in the mode prescribed in and by the said resolutions.

NEW HAMPSHIRE GRANTS, DRESDEN, 12 Apr. 1780.

Sir,—May it please your Excellency:

A continuation of the unsettled and unhappy state of affairs in the New Hampshire Grants on Connecticut River induces us to trouble Congress with this on the subject.

The people on said Grants in consequence of the resolves of Congress of the 24th Sept. last flattered themselves with the prospect of being soon happy in the enjoyment of civil government;—the want of which at present so greatly threatens their prosperity and tranquility.

By the positive determination and assurance in said resolves of Congress the people were confident that a final settlement would soon take place and are not a little distressed that the affair is still postponed—as they with reason greatly fear the unhappy consequences of our broken situation.

There being such a variety of parties in the country in favor of the different claims of jurisdiction renders it impracticable to conduct the concerns of civil society with any tolerable regularity—but what is of still greater moment and concern is that should this quarter (which is principally a frontier) be attacked by y^e enemy from Canada our disunion is such that devastation and ruin would in all probability be the consequence, whereas were these difficulties adjusted by Congress and we assured of what jurisdiction we ought to submit to we might contribute considerable force against the common enemy.

Perhaps Congress are not availed of the dangerous and alarming steps taken by the Assembly of that territory called Vermont—we say dangerous and alarming as we apprehend a foundation is laying not only for private but general disturbances. At their last session charters of several townships were granted—some to officers of the army & others to gentlemen of different States. These measures we apprehend are big with consequences which may be extensively detrimental. We take the liberty of repeating our earnest desire that the difficulties above hinted at may be under the wise direction of Congress settled as speedily as possible.

I write this in behalf of the general committee in the northern district of the New Hampshire Grants contiguous to Connecticut River—and have the honor to be with the highest sentiments of duty and esteem

IN CONGRESS, FRIDAY, June 9, 1780.¹

Nine states represented, exclusive of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay and New-York.

A motion was made by Mr. Livingston, seconded by Mr. Scott, [both of New York,] agreeably to the resolution of the 2d instant, to proceed to hear and examine into and finally determine the disputes and differences relative to jurisdiction between the three states of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay and New-York, respectively, or such of them as shall have passed such laws as are mentioned in the resolutions of the 24th of September and 2d of October last, on the one part, and the people of the district commonly known by the name of the New-Hampshire Grants, who claim to be a separate jurisdiction, on the other, in the mode prescribed in and by the said resolution.

But it being represented on the part of New-Hampshire, that the agent specially appointed for that business, is not now present, and, from the great distance, cannot soon attend Congress,

DRESDEN ON THE NEW HAMPSHIRE GRANTS, }
July 20, A. D. 1780. }

Sir,—May it please your Excellency:

We are sensible Congress have reason to expect their resolves of the first of June last would have such influence that the people on these grants might wait patiently their decisions respecting them; but such is the disposition of those who have assumed an independent jurisdiction that not only their measures but professions are in direct opposition to those resolves. They have ever since their sessions in March been assiduous to obtain surveys of the ungranted lands and have now sundry parties of men out for that purpose, who instead of resting matters are hastened on account of the late resolves of Congress with a view to obtain surveys of the whole before the sessions of their assembly in October next, and we understand are determined at that time to make grants of the whole to such persons as they shall apprehend will be most useful to assist in an establishment of a new State, and thereby at one stroke prevent an occasion for any further prohibition of Congress, purchase advocates in adjacent States and procure supplies of money to accomplish their purposes. They are also taking like speedy measures in confiscating estates of persons whom they are pleased to call tories; in respect to which it ought to be noted that their virulence is most poignant against those friends to order who oppose their rash procedures.

Vast numbers are continually making application for lands, and become advocates for their establishment in order to obtain them. Agents are at the same time employed to impress the minds of the people with an apprehension that Congress are conscious they have no right to decide the question in respect to their being an independent state and mean to postpone it from time to time, that they may establish it themselves, and construe every delay in that light. And experience shows that such suggestions however ill-grounded have too much influence.

In short no measures are omitted which may tend to weaken the authority of Congress in the minds of the people and destroy the salutary influence of their late resolves, which they say were passed only to quiet New York, till they can establish their state.

New Hampshire continue to call on those towns east of the river (who have connected themselves with those west) for men money and provisions, but as there is no authority to which they can consistently own allegiance, till Congress decide the dispute, and as they know not any right which New Hampshire (rather than the Massachusetts or New York) have to call on them consistent with the resolves of Congress on the subject in Sep'r last, they do not comply with their orders in respect to paying taxes, and think it unreasonable that a proposition¹ be allotted to them, till they are put in a condition to perform it, which can be done only by the decision of Congress; they are [as] zealously affected in the contest with Great Britain as any part of America—have ever had their quota of men as full as any part, and are now exerting themselves to raise their quota of recruits, from a sense of the importance of the cause; but cannot act with that vigor as though the dispute respecting the grants was decided.

The people in these parts mean to abide the decision of Congress and abhor the sentiments of those who deny their right.—They will cheerfully acquiesce in any thing Congress may judge proper, but ardently wish a union of the two sides of the river. New Hampshire will be their choice, if a new state be not admitted, which they have generally done expecting.

We entreat a speedy decision in respect to a new state, and in case one is not admitted, that commissioners may come into the territory to decide the claim of the other States, as we apprehend the future happiness of the inhabitants who are most nearly interested ought to be consulted, inasmuch as they will be principally affected by that decision.

We add nothing in respect to the merits of the case, as we have already laid our own submission and representation of the matter before Congress last winter; which we trust will be considered in its place.

A decision to be published on the Grants before a new election of officers in Vermont (in the beginning of Sep'r) is greatly desired, and in our view absolutely necessary before a meeting of their Assembly (the beginning of Oct'r) in order to prevent their involving hundreds of people in inextricable difficulties, by purchasing their grants of land.

More than thirty thousand people on these grants must be involved in difficulties while the matter is delayed, and the eyes of the greater part are to Congress for relief; and unless it can be speedily obtained we are undone.

We write in behalf of the inhabitants in the northern part on both sides of Connecticut river; and have the honor to be with the highest sentiments of duty and esteem, Sir,

[By order of a Convention holden at Dresden Aug. 30 1780.]

To His Excellency the President and the Honorable Members of the Congress of the United States of North America—Humbly sheweth

The petition of the principle inhabitants on Connecticut river on both sides and northward of Charlestown, met in a convention at Dresden on the New Hampshire Grants August 30th 1780—

That the union of Canada with the united States is in our opinion of the greatest importance to them for the following reasons viz: there is but one seaport in that country which we shall ever have need to defend, yet good water carriage for near two thousand miles, stretching itself in a circular manner round the thirteen united States, through an excellent country of land, great part of which is inhabited by savages, whose furr and skin trade produces to our enemies an annual profit which is immense.

The annual produce of wheat in that country for exportation is very great, by which the British armies in America receive essential advantage. The capture of that country will be a leading step towards securing to the united States the profit of the fish, oil &c. produced at and near the St^e Lawrence, which would be a greatly beneficial acquisition. While they hold possession of Canada, our frontier must be very extensive, and the savages at their command, and we had almost said the enemy destroy and take yearly from the frontiers bordering on Canada as much in value as the cost of reducing and holding that country. We are sure the defence of our frontiers costs more.

The securing that country in our favor will be the only effectual means to enable us to secure those of Ohio and Missisipi both on account of obtaining in that way the interest of the savages in our favor and as the conveyance for the enemy (while they hold possession of Canada) of men, ammunition and provisions to those parts is not only as easy but more expeditious and safe by the waters St. Lawrence than by the Gulf of Mexico. And in our opinion those countries cannot otherwise be effectually secured. By obtaining Canada we add to our force thirty thousand fighting men and destroy the efficacy of the bill passed in the British parliament in the year 1774 for extending the province of Quebec which includes the province of Main and great part of New Hampshire, these Grants &c, the establishment of which is without doubt the main object of the enemy in taking & holding possession at Penobscot, and within the extent of which the united States have not a single fortress to cover their claim in opposition to that of the British. In short that bill is so extensive that should it be established the united States would have little or nothing left worth contending for, and we see not how it can be effectually destroyed but by a union of Canada with them.

The body of inhabitants in that country are desirous of such union and unless it can be bro't about speedily by sending a force into Canada they will be under necessity to take an active part against us, which they have hitherto avoided.

The whole force of Britain now in arms in Canada at all their posts from Quebec to Detroit including one thousand five hundred Tories and Indians (who are continually roving and destroying our frontiers) does not exceed five thousand men, one thousand are stationed in the district of Montreal, and six hundred of the rovers have that district for their head quarters.

The communication from the settlements on this river to St. Charles on Chamblee river is easy—the road already opened more than half the way, the rest may be opened at very little expence, and the whole will be very good—the distance about one hundred miles.

A good commander with few continental troops in addition to such volunteers as may be raised for that purpose on these Grants and in the New England States, with a suitable quantity of arms and ammunition to furnish those Canadians who are now eager for such an expedition and will at once join us on arrival of an army there, will easily take possession of and keep the district of Montreal, and that being secured, the country above even to and beyond the Western lakes must soon submit to the united states.

Your petitioners are confident that fifteen hundred men from these Grants will turn out (if called for) to assist in taking possession of that country. They can and will cheerfully furnish five hundred horses, one hundred teams and ten thousand bushels of wheat, and more if necessary, also such other grain as may be wanted on the credit of the continent, from the district of country between the heights on the two sides of Connecticut river and north of the Massachusetts Bay, the inhabitants of which (more than five thousand families) are now chiefly obliged to hold the sword in one hand and tools for husbandry in the other, and probably must continue so to do till that country is reduced, unless we have a large continental force continually supported here to defend us from their ravages, as our frontier is very extensive.

We therefore humbly pray that Congress will be pleased to order an expedition into Canada by the middle of September next, or as soon as possible and publish a recommendation to the people on the Grants and to the New England States for volunteers to join such continental forces as shall be sent on the expedition and that we make ready necessary provisions which your petitioners will cheerfully comply with to the utmost of their power.

And as in duty bound shall ever pray &c.

Per order of the Convention,

DRESDEN ON THE NEW HAMPSHIRE GRANTS, }
August 31st 1780. }

May it please your Excellency.—Col. Olcott [is] again appointed agent in behalf of the people on both sides Connecticut river from Charleston upward in the dispute betwixt the claiming States and the N. Hampshire Grants.²—We entreat that a determination of the question “Whether a new State be allowed on the Grants” may be deferred no longer, as every confusion is taking place among the people and will continue while that point is unsettled, of which he can give particular information and to whom we beg leave to refer Congress.

We trust our petition by our agents last winter and the committees letter of the 20th ult. will be brought to the view of Congress when the trial comes on. There is no one point in which the people can agree so well as in an union with N. Hampshire in case the whole on both sides of the river shall not be permitted to unite in a new State which the body of the people have now done expecting [two or three words erased.] We would however entreat that after the determination that a new State be not admitted the people may be called upon to show which of the States they wish to be united with, as the happiness and prosperity of the inhabitants will greatly depend on their being gratified in that respect; such a measure also will have the most effectual tendency to procure an universal acquiescence in the resolves of Congress respecting the matter, as it will evidence a tender concern in Congress for their well-fare.

Great numbers think they have an undoubted right to demand a union with New Hampshire, by virtue of the compact made with them by the King in the grants he made of the lands by the governor of New Hampshire.

It has been suggested that the people will take arms and claim protection of Canada under the Quebec bill in opposition to any resolve Congress may pass against a new State, which we can assure them is without foundation in respect to the body of the people who are waiting with earnest expectation the decision of Congress on the subject and mean to conform their conduct to it—there are very few but what will readily acquiesce—none of any consequence on this side the green mountains and few on the other, however some of their leaders may desire to raise a tumult in opposition to them.

Col. Olcott is vested with all the power which our people can confer while in our present distracted situation, and we hope his measures in the matter conformable to this and other papers from this quarter may be considered as the voice of the people.

I write this by order and in behalf of the general committee in the northern district of the grants and have the honor to be with highest sentiments of respect, Sir,

*Governor Chittenden to the President of Congress, in reply to the resolutions of that body of June 2 and 9, 1780.*²

BENNINGTON, July 25th, 1780.

SIR,

Your Excellency's letter of the 10th ult. enclosing several acts of Congress, of the 2d and 9th of the same month, I accidentally received, the 6th inst. have laid them before my Council, and taken their advice thereon, and now beg your Excellency's indulgence, while I treat on a subject of such moment in its nature, and which so nearly concerns the citizens of this state.

However Congress may view those resolutions, they are considered by the people of this state, as being, in their nature, subversive of the natural rights, which they have to liberty and independence, as well as incompatible with the principles on which Congress ground their own right to independence; and have a natural, and direct tendency to endanger the liberties of America, which have, hitherto, been defended at great expence, both of blood and treasure.

¹ New Hampshire Grants, Vol. 1, No. 40, p. 357, in the Archives of the State Department, Washington.

² From a copy in Slade's State Papers, furnished by Hon. STEPHEN R. BRADLEY, who made thereon the following memorandum: "Delivered Congress Sept. 12, 1780, and read, eodem die." In this, as in other instances, the journal of Congress contains no notice. The probable reason is that the Vermont papers, not noticed in the journal, were read in committee of the whole.

Vermont's right to independence has been sufficiently argued, and the good consequences resulting to the United States, from its first assuming government, clearly vindicated, in sundry pamphlets, which have been, officially, laid before Congress. I beg leave to refer your Excellency to "Vermont's appeal," &c. particularly from the thirty second to the forty second page;¹ in which, among other things, is contained a particular answer to the resolutions of the 24th of September, referred to in the resolves of the 2d of June last; and a denial of the authority of Congress over this state, so far as relates to their existence as a free and independent government.

I find, notwithstanding, by a resolution of the 9th ult. that Congress have assigned the second Tuesday of September next, to judge, absolutely, of the independence of Vermont, as a separate jurisdiction. Can Congress suppose this government are so void of reason, as not to discern that the resolves of the 2d and 9th of June aforesaid, so far as the authority of Congress may be supposed to extend to this state, are leveled directly against thier independence?

Vermont, as before mentioned, being a free and independent state, have denied the authority of Congress to judge of their jurisdiction. Over the head of all this, it appears that Congress, by their resolutions of the 9th ult. have determined that they have power to judge the cause; which has, already, determined the essence of the dispute; for, if Vermont does not belong to some one of the United States, Congress could have no such power, without their consent; so that, consequently, determining they have such a power, has determined that Vermont have no right to independence; for it is utterly incompatible with the rights and prerogatives of an independent state, to be under the control or arbitrament of any other power. Vermont have, therefore, no alternative; they must either submit to the unwarrantable decree of Congress, or continue their appeal to heaven and to arms.

There may, in future, be a trial at Congress, which of the United States shall possess this territory, or how it shall be divided among them; but this does not concern Vermont. And it is altogether probable that there have been proposals for dividing it between the state of New-Hampshire and New-York, the same as the King of Prussia, the Empress of Russia, and the Empress of Hungary divided Poland between those three powers; with this difference only, that the former are not in possession of Vermont.

The cloud that has hovered over Vermont, since the ungenerous claims of New-Hampshire and Massachusetts-Bay, has been seen, and its motions carefully observed by this government; who expected that Congress would have averted the storm: but, disappointed in this, and unjustly treated as the people, over whom I preside, on the most serious and candid deliberation, conceive themselves to be, in this affair, yet, blessed by heaven, with constancy of mind, and connexions abroad, as an honest, valiant and brave people, are necessitated to declare to your Excellency, to Congress, and to the world, that, as life, liberty and the rights of the people, intrusted them by God, are inseparable, so they do not expect to be justified in the eye of Heaven, or that posterity would call them blessed, if they should, tamely, surrender any part.

Without doubt, Congress have, previous to this, been acquainted, that this state has maintained several posts on its frontiers, at its own expence; which are well known to be the only security, to this quarter, of the frontier inhabitants of the states of the Massachusetts-Bay and New-Hampshire; and it is highly probable that Albany, and such parts of the state of New-York, as lie to the northward of that, would, before this time, have been ravaged by the common enemy, had it not been for the indefatigable exertions of this state, and the fears, which the enemy have been, and are still possessed of, that their retreat would be interrupted by the troops from those posts and the militia of this state.

Thus, by guarding the frontiers, has this state secured the friendship of part of the private gentlemen and yeomanry, even of those states, whose representatives, it seems, are seeking its destruction. And having the general approbation of disinterested states, this people are, undoubtedly, in a condition to maintain government; but should they be deceived in such connexions, yet as they are not included in the thirteen United States, but conceive themselves to be a separate body, they would still have in their power, other advantages; for they are, if necessitated to it, at liberty to offer, or accept, terms of cessation of hostilities with Great-Britain, without the approbation of any other man or body of men: for, on proviso that neither Congress, nor the Legislatures of those states, which they represent, will support Vermont in her independence, but devote her to the usurped government of any other power, she has not the most distant motive to continue hostilities with Great-Britain, and maintain an important frontier for the benefit of the United States, and for no other reward than the ungrateful one of being enslaved by them. True, Vermont have taken an active part in the war, subsisting between the United States and Great-Britain, under an expectation of securing her liberties; considering the claim of Great-Britain to make laws to bind the colonists, in all cases whatsoever, without their consent, to be an abridgment of the natural rights of mankind: and it appears that the said resolves of the 2d and 9th of June, are equally arbitrary, and that they furnish equal motives to the citizens of Vermont, to resist the one as the other; for, if the United States have departed from the virtuous principles upon which they first commenced the war with Great-Britain, and have assumed to themselves the power of usurping the rights of Vermont, it is time, high time, for her seriously to consider what she is fighting for, and to what purpose she has been, more than five years last part, spilling the blood of her bravest sons.

This government have dealt with severity, towards the tories, confiscated some of their estates, imprisoned some, banished some, and hanged some, &c. and kept the remainder in as good subjection, as any state belonging to the union. And they have, likewise, granted unto worthy whigs, in the neighboring states, some part of their unappropriated lands; the inconsiderable avails of which, have been faithfully appropriated for the defence of the northern frontiers; which, eventually, terminates in the support of the interest, and securing the independence and sovereignty of the United States: and, after having faithfully executed all this, have the mortification to meet with the resentment of Congress, circulated in hand-bills and the New-York publick papers, representing their conduct, "in contravening the good intention of Congress, as being highly unwarrantable, and subversive of the peace and welfare of the United States." Those resolves serve only to raise the expiring hopes and expectations, and to revive a languishing flame, of a few tories and scismaticks, in this state, who have never been instrumental in promoting the common cause of America.

With regard to the state of the Massachusetts-Bay, they have not, as a legislative body, laid any claim to the territory of Vermont; nor have they enacted laws, judicially authorizing Congress to take cognizance thereof, agreeable to the before mentioned resolves; a majority of their legislative body considering such pretensions to be an infringement on the rights of Vermont; and, therefore, the state of the Massachusetts-Bay cannot be considered as a party in this controversy.

As to the state of New-Hampshire, although they have judicially authorized Congress to make a final adjudication of their late started and very extraordinary claim to the territory of Vermont, yet, by recurring back to the original proceedings between the two states, it appears, the General Court of New-Hampshire had, previous to laying the said claims, settled their boundary line with the state of Vermont, and established Connecticut river as the boundary between the respective governments; and, as far as the approbation of the government of New-Hampshire can go, have, previously, conceded to the independence of Vermont; the particulars of which are too prolix to be given in this letter, but are exhibited, at large, in a pamphlet, entitled "A concise refutation of the claims of New-Hampshire and Massachusetts-Bay to the territory of Vermont," and which is herewith transmitted as a bar against the right of New-Hampshire to a trial for any part of Vermont.

The government of New-Hampshire, ever since the royal adjudication of the boundary line between them and the government of New-York, in 1764, have cast the inhabitants of the contested territory, out of their protection, and abandoned them to the tyranny of New-York: and have very lately, over the head of the settlement aforesaid, laid claim to the said territory, and enacted laws as aforesaid, to enable Congress to judicially determine the merit of said claim. How glaringly illegal, absurd and inconsistent, must their conduct as a legislative body, appear, in this respect. Such irregularity among individuals, arises from the ill government of the human passions; but when that takes place in publick bodies, it is unpardonable, as its influence is more extensive and injurious to society.

Hence it appears, legally speaking, neither the states of New-Hampshire or Massachusetts-Bay, can be, with propriety, considered as parties in the controversy; and, consequently, New-York is left alone, a competitor with Vermont, even admitting Congress are possessed of sufficient authority to determine those disputes, agreeable to their resolutions; which, by this government, is, by no means, admissible.

Notwithstanding the usurpation and injustice of neighboring governments towards Vermont, and the late resolutions of Congress, this government, from a principle of virtue and close attachment to the cause of liberty, as well as a thorough examination of their own policy, are induced, once more, to offer union with the United States of America, of which Congress are the legal representative body. Should that be denied, this state will propose the same to the Legislatures of the United States, separately, and take such other measures as self-preservation may justify. In behalf of the Council, I am, Sir,

Your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

THOMAS CHITTENDEN.

In the letter of introduction to Gov. Clinton, furnished by the Cumberland County committee, Mr. K. was described as a gentleman of "penetration and probity."¹ LUKE KNOULTON (so written by Mr. K., says Hon. JAMES H. PHELPS,) was born in Shrewsbury, Mass., in 1737, and died in Newfane, Dec. 12 1810, aged seventy-three years. He was a resident of Newfane in 1772, and with John Taylor proprietor of that town, under a New York grant, from May 12 1772, and he received $249.53 of the $30,000 paid to New York by Vermont to settle the controversy between those states. May 17 1774, on the organization of the town, he was chosen town clerk, and he held that office sixteen years. April 14 1772 he was appointed by New York one of the justices of the peace for Cumberland county. June 1776 to June 1777 he was a member of the Cumberland county Committee of Safety. He next appeared as above in September 1780, as agent for Cumberland county against Vermont in Congress, in which service he had a recommendation from Gov. Clinton. It is pretty certain that, from knowledge then gained, Mr. Knoulton changed his opinion on the Vermont question. Writing of the period when Knoulton and Ira Allen were at Philadelphia on this business, the latter said: "A plan was then laid between two persons at Philadelphia, to unite all parties in Vermont, in a way that would be honourable to those who had been in favour of New York,"² &c., stating that it was to call a convention of delegates of all parties interested, including those residing east of Connecticut river, to meet at Walpole, N. H., Nov. 15 1780. Mr. Knoulton is the first named of several Cumberland county gentlemen who, Oct. 31 1780, initiated measures to bring about this proposed convention at Walpole,³ which met and called another to meet at Charlestown, N. H., Jan. 16 1781.⁴ Of the last convention Mr. Knoulton was an active member, and doubtless he acted in concurrence with Allen, who was present and very influential, according to his own account, though he did not present his credentials as a delegate. This convention resulted, first, in the union with Vermont of thirty-five New Hampshire towns, and, consequent upon that, a like addition of that part of New York lying east of Hudson river and extending from north latitude 45° to the north line of Massachusetts. In 1782, Mr. Knoulton and Samuel Wells of Brattleboro' assisted in exchanging letters between the British commander in Canada, Gen. Haldimand, and British agents in New York city, of which a complaint was made to Gen. Washington, and through him to Congress, which resulted in resolutions directing the arrest of Knoulton and Wells, and information to the executives of New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut and New York "of the treasonable practices with which some of their subjects are charged."¹ Jan. 27 1783, Gen. Washington transmitted to Congress Lieut. Israel Smith's report of Knoulton's and Wells's escape, which was charged to information given by Jonathan Arnold, a delegate in Congress from Rhode Island.² It is certain that Wells's escape was aided by Ethan and Ira Allen,³ and it is not unreasonable to presume that Knoulton was favored by them or their associates. The fact is that Vermont was then carrying on a correspondence with Gen. Haldimand, who had to consult the British commander and his agents in New York city, and hence this exchange of letters through the agency of Knoulton and Wells was but an incident of the Vermont policy at that time. That Wells was so much of a loyalist as to be rewarded by Great Britain is true, but Knoulton received no such recognition, and there is no evidence impeaching his patriotism beyond the fact that on this occasion he aided the work in which Chittenden, the Allens, and other leading Vermonters were engaged for the purpose of preserving the independence of the state and protecting its people from the ravages of war. Nov. 16 1783, a party of a dozen adherents to New York, two of them of Newfane, arrested Mr. Knoulton, ostensibly on account of the order of Congress of the preceding year. They contented themselves, however, with taking him over the Vermont line into Massachusetts, leaving him there. Gen. Fletcher raised a force for a rescue; but Knoulton returned, and the Yorkers dispersed, so the military force was disbanded. Mr. Knoulton represented Newfane in the General Assembly in 1784-6, and 1788-9, five years; was a member of the Council from Oct. 1790 to Oct. 1801, eleven years; a member of the Convention of 1793; judge of Windham County Court from 1787 to Dec. 1794, and in 1802, fifteen years; and judge of the Supreme Court in 1786.—See Deming's Catalogue. In Graham's Descriptive Sketch Mr. Knoulton is represented as "a leading character, and a man of great ambition and enterprize, of few words, but possessed of the keenest perception, and an almost intuitive knowledge of human nature, of which he is a perfect judge. This gentleman, owing to the particular method in which he has transacted business, has obtained the appellation of Saint Luke."—See B. H. HALL'S Eastern Vermont, pp. 503-4, 675-6, 720-723.

Resolved, That the order of the day, to proceed to hear and examine into and finally determine the disputes and differences relative to jurisdiction, between the three states of New Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay and New-York, respectively, or such of them as shall have passed such laws as are mentioned in the resolutions of the 24th of September and the 2d of October last, on the one part, and the people of the district commonly known by the name of the New Hampshire Grants, who claim to be a separate jurisdiction, on the other, in the mode prescribed in and by the said resolutions, be postponed till Thursday [Tuesday] next, and that the members in town be notified to attend the house at 10 o'clock in the morning of that day.

Resolved, That the order of the day, to proceed to hear and examine into and finally determine the disputes and differences relative to jurisdiction between the three states of New Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay and New York, respectively, or such of them as have passed such laws as are mentioned in the resolutions of the 24th of September and the 2d of October last, on the one part, and the people of the district commonly known by the name of New Hampshire Grants, who claim to be a separate jurisdiction, on the other, be postponed till six o'clock.

On motion of the delegates of New-York,

Ordered, That the Secretary notify Messrs. Ira Allen, Stephen R. Bradley, Luke Knoulton, and colonel Olcott, to attend this afternoon, on the hearing of the question respecting the jurisdiction of the tract of country commonly called the New Hampshire Grants.

Six o'clock P. M.

Congress met according to adjournment, and proceeded to hear, &c. the persons notified attending, when the following papers were read:

The act of the state of New-York, passed Oct. 21st, 1779, and the act of the state of New-Hampshire, of Nov. 1779, both passed pursuant to the resolutions of Congress of September 24th and October 2d:

Joseph Marsh, chairman of the said convention, and dated New-Hampshire Grants, January 1, 1780.¹

The delegates of New-York, as agents for the state, delivered in sundry papers, which were read, with an intent to prove that the land known by the name of the New-Hampshire Grants, on the west side of Connecticut river, is within the limits of the state of New-York; that the state of New-Hampshire have acknowledged this, and that the people on the said tract have been represented in the legislature of New-York, since the year 1764.

WEDNESDAY, September 20, 1780.²

Congress proceeded to the order of the day, the parties being present as yesterday, except the delegate for the state of New-Hampshire, who was absent through sickness; when the state of New-York, by its delegates, proceeded in stating evidence to prove that the inhabitants of the tract of country known by the name of the New-Hampshire Grants, west of Connecticut river, as part of the state or colony of New-York, were duly represented in and submitted to the authority, jurisdiction and government of the Congress and Convention of the said state, till late in the year 1777; and that, therefore, the people inhabiting the said tract of country have no right to a separate and independent jurisdiction.

Sept. 22 1780, the Vermont Agents remonstrated against the proceedings of Congress; and this, probably, influenced to some extent the postponement, which was ordered as follows:

WEDNESDAY, September 27, 1780.³

Congress proceeded in the order of the day respecting the jurisdiction of the tract of country commonly called the New-Hampshire Grants, all the parties being present except Ira Allen and Stephen R. Bradley, who being duly notified, declined to attend, when the agent for the state of New-Hampshire proceeded to state evidence tending to prove, that the tract of country known by the name of the New-Hampshire Grants, was within the state of New-Hampshire, and that therefore the people inhabiting the said tract of country, have no right to a separate and independent jurisdiction. The gentlemen appearing in behalf of sundry inhabitants of the said Grants having nothing to add, and pressing Congress to come to a determination, withdrew.

Resolved, That the farther consideration of the subject be postponed.

FRIDAY, October 6, 1780.⁴

Congress proceeded to the consideration of the subject relative to the jurisdiction of the tract of country commonly called the New-Hampshire Grants, when a letter of the 2d, from Ira Allen and Stephen R. Bradley was read.

This letter was as follows:

prosecuting the war in conjunction with the thirteen united States & for regulating their own internal police. We are assured the General Court of the State of Vermont will make every effort in their power to establish the sovereignty and independence of America and could wish that principle might be invariably observed by every man in authority throughout the American States.

The dispute concerning the State of Vermont is of such great concern it appears to us of the highest importance Congress should be rightly acquainted with the dispute before they interpose on either side, which at present they cannot while America is in her present Situation. We can further observe that we have many papers more authentic than those that have been exhibited to Congress that will shew our right to sovereignty over the claims of all our adversaries; which we have not here at present.

For these and for many other reasons we must request Congress to postpone a further inquiry into the premises til a future day.

And have the honor to be your Excellency's

Most Obedient Humble Servants,

IRA ALLEN,

STEPHEN R. BRADLEY.

SEPTEMBER 1780.²

In August, 1780, Ira Allen and Stephen [R.] Bradley Esquires attended Congress, as agents from Vermont, in order to be prepared for the second Tuesday in September (to which time Congress had referred the determination of the cause of Vermont.) The people in the south-east part of the State who professed allegiance to the state of New York, sent their agent, Luke Knowlton, Esq; to attend Congress; and the people in the north-east part of the State, who were, in opinion and politics, with the revolting members of the Legislature of Vermont in 1778, also sent their agent, Peter Olcott, Esq; to Congress; thus, to that body, all parties appeared to be represented. The agents of Vermont had frequent interviews with the members of Congress, in particular those from New York, with whom they spent several evenings in the most sociable manner. Very different views and objects seemed to be pursued by all parties; indeed, all parties seemed determined to carry their point. Therefore, to gain as great an advantage as possible, the agents of Vermont requested in writing, that when any debates came before Congress which might affect the rights, the sovereignty, or independence of the State of Vermont, they might be present. On this request, the opponents to Vermont took courage, supposing that by getting the agents to attend in Congress, they would make some remarks on the evidence adduced against the independence of Vermont, or, in some way, put it in the power of that body to consider the cause to them submitted by the agents of Vermont.

On the 19th of September, 1780, they received a notification to attend Congress, to hear the question respecting the jurisdiction of the New Hampshire Grants. The claims of New Hampshire and New York were put in, and both of these States plead that Vermont had no pretensions to independence, but belonged to them. The agents of Vermont, though present, were not considered or treated by Congress as the agents or representatives of any State or people invested with legislative authority. Part of two days were spent in hearing the evidence exhibited by New York, to shew that the people on the New Hampshire Grants belonged to, and of right were under the authority and jurisdiction of New York, and therefore had no right to a separate independent jurisdiction, a day being assigned to hear the claim and evidence of New Hampshire. During this time the agents of Vermont retained minutes of the proceedings of Congress, and of the evidence exhibited by the Agents of New York, that they might the better be prepared to remonstrate against them, as they had no idea of submitting the independence of Vermont to the arbitrament of Congress, or even of speaking on the matter in Congress, or of objecting in any way to the evidence adduced against Vermont, however irregular or provoking. The principles upon which the Agents of Vermont went, were to remain quiet, let the business be conducted as it would: the worse, the more advantage they would have in remonstrating; they concluded it not advisable to attend and hear the claim and evidence of New Hampshire when it was taken up by Congress, therefore sent in their remonstrance to that body, and declined attending. Mr. Thompson, Secretary, (of Congress) called on and urged them to attend, which they refused; he then requested to know what report he should return to Congress; when he received for answer, that while Congress sat as a Court of Judicatory, authorized by the claiming States ex parte, and Vermont was not put on an equal footing, they should not again darken the doors of Congress; the remonstrance was as follows.

Remonstrance of the Vermont Agents against the proceedings of Congress, Sept. 22, 1780.

“To the Honourable CONGRESS of the UNITED STATES of NORTH AMERICA.

“The remonstrance of Ira Allen and Stephen R. Bradley, Commissioners from the free and independent State of Vermont, appointed for the time being to attend on Congress.

“With pleasure they embrace this first opportunity to testify their thanks for the personal honour done them by Congress, in giving them an attendance, though in a private capacity, with their honourable body: At the same time they lament the necessity which obliges them to say, they can no longer sit as idle spectators, without betraying the trust reposed in them, and doing violence to their feelings, to see partial modes pursued, plans adopted, ex parte evidence exhibited, which derives all its authority from the attestation of the party; passages of writings selected giving very false representations of facts, to answer no other end but to prejudice your honourable body against the State of Vermont; thereby to intrigue and baffle a brave and meritorious people out of their rights and liberties. We can easily conceive the Secretary's office of the State of New York may be converted into an inexhaustible source to furnish evidence to answer their purpose in the present dispute.

“Needless would it be for us to inform Congress, that by the mode of trial now adopted, the State of Vermont can have no hearing without denying itself: And to close with those resolutions, which we conceive our enemies have extorted from your honourable body, and on which the trial is now placed, would be, in fact, taking upon ourselves that humility and self abasement, as to lose our political life, in order to find it.

“We believe the wisdom of Congress sufficient to point out, that pursuing the present mode, is deviating from every principle of the laws of nature, or nations: For if the dispute is between the States claiming on the one part, and the State of Vermont on the other, whether the latter be a State de jure, or an independent jurisdiction de facto, they ought to be considered in the course of the dispute, until the powers interposing have determined whether the latter be an independent jurisdiction de jure; if not they of course ought to annihilate the jurisdiction de facto; but to annihilate the State de facto, in the first place, is summarily ending the dispute; to deny the latter any independent jurisdiction de facto, is to deny there is any longer parties in the dispute.

“Again, we conceive the means connected with the end, and upon no principle whatever can we justify, that either part should establish the modus, or rules to be pursued in determining disputes, without confounding every idea of right and wrong. In the present case, on the one part might the end as justly have been established as the way and means to effect the end.

“We are far from being willing those brave and strenuous efforts made by the State of Vermont, in the controversy with Great Britain, should be buried by our grasping adversaries (thirsting after domination and prey) in the specious pretext of riotously assuming Government; and we thereby lose all credit for the men and money we have expended.

“Thus, while we are necessitated to remonstrate against the proceedings of Congress on the present mode, we are willing, at the same time, any equitable enquiry should be made, the State of Vermont being allowed equal privileges with the other States in the dispute.

“And that the State of Vermont might stand justified to your honourable body, and to the world, both as to her present and future conduct, we are induced, as well from principles of attachment to the American cause, as a regard we have for peace and harmony among the states of America now at war with Great Britain, to make the following proposals, viz.

“1st. That the State of Vermont will, as soon as may be, forward to the Secretary of Congress, an attested return of all male persons, liable to do duty agreeable to a militia act heretofore exhibited to Congress in a code of laws, entitled “The Laws of Vermont;” and the State of Vermont shall, for and during the present war with Great Britain, from year to year, furnish an equal number of troops in the field, in proportion to their numbers, as Congress shall estimate the quotas of the several United States, in proportion to their numbers; which troops shall be clothed, quartered, and paid by the State of Vermont. And, at the close of the war, the dispute shall be equitably settled by the mediation of sovereign powers; and nothing herein contained, shall be construed to take away the right any of the United States claim to have in or over the State of Vermont: Or “2dly, We are willing to agree upon some one or more of the Legislatures of the disinterested States to interpose as mediators, and settle the dispute: Or “3dly, We are willing Congress, being possessed of sovereignty, should interpose to prevent the effusion of human blood; at the same time, we reprobate every idea of Congress sitting as a Court of Judicature, to determine the dispute, by virtue of authority given them by the act or acts of the State or States that make but one party.

“It gives us pungent grief that such an important cause at this juncture of affairs, on which our ail depends, should be forced on by any gentlemen professing themselves friends to the cause of America, with such vehemence and spirit as appears on the part of the State of New York: And shall only add, that if the matter be thus pursued, we stand ready to appeal to God and the world, who must be accountable for the awful consequences that may ensue.

Done at Philadelphia, this 22d day of September, A. D. 1780.

“IRA ALLEN,
“STEPHEN R. BRADLEY.”

Congress having heard the evidence on the part of New Hampshire, on the 27th of September, resolved that the further consideration of the subject should be postponed.

PROPOSALS OF VERMONT FOR A PERMANENT ALLIANCE AND CONFEDERATION WITH ADJOINING STATES.

Oct. 14 1780. Governor Chittenden communicated to the General Assembly the action of Congress in June preceding, his protest to the President of Congress of July 25, and a report of the hearing in Congress in September,—the latter being supplemented by a verbal account by Ira Allen. No legislative action was had, however, in direct response to Congress, but much was done to enable the state to maintain its independence,¹ and on the 8th of November a resolution was adopted,² under which Governor Chittenden proceeded according to his notice of the 25th of July, which was that, should Congress deny to Vermont an admission to the union, “this state will propose the same [an union independent of Congress,] to the legislatures of the United States, separately, and take such other measures as self-preservation may justify.”³

Gov. Chittenden to Gov. Clinton of New York.

STATE OF VERMONT,
IN COUNCIL, ARLINGTON, November 22d, 1780. }

Sir:—Inclosed I transmit your excellency a copy of my letter to Congress of the 25th of July last, and on a full examination of the controversy between the State of New York and this State, and duly considering the present peculiar circumstances of both States, I am induced to make a positive demand on the Legislature of the State over whom you preside, to give up and fully relinquish their claim to jurisdiction over this State, and also propose to them to join in a solid union with this State for mutual defence against the British forces which invade the American States, particularly such part as make incursions on the frontiers of the two States from the Province of Quebec. Such a union for the reciprocal advantage of both governments, I am willing to ratify and confirm on the part of this State.

Col. Ira Allen, who delivers this, waits your answer to these proposals.

³ The last clause covered other measures of Vermont at that period, and notably the Haldimand Correspondence. See Gov. Chittenden's letter to the President of Congress, ante, p. 256.

In behalf of the Council and General Assembly, I have the honor to be with great esteem your Excellency's very obedient humble servant,

THOMAS CHITTENDEN.

His Excellency George Clinton Esq. Governor, &c. of the State of New York.

To be communicated to the Legislature thereof.

The Legislature of New York had been summoned to meet on the 3d of January 1781, but a quorum did not attend until about the first of February.¹ On the 5th Gov. Clinton transmitted Gov. Chittenden's demand with the message following:

Gov. Clinton to the New York Assembly.

Gentlemen,—You will receive with this message a letter from Thomas Chittenden dated the 22d of Nov. last, making a positive demand on the legislature to give up and fully relinquish the jurisdiction of this state over the part thereof generally distinguished by the name of the New Hampshire Grants, with a copy of his letter to Congress of the 25th of July last.

Nothing but the desire of giving you the fullest information of every matter of public concern, could induce me to lay before you a demand, not only so insolent in its nature and derogatory to the honor of the State and the true interests of your constituents, but tending to subvert the authority of Congress (to whom the determination of the controversy is solemnly submitted) and establish a principle destructive in its consequences to the power and happiness of the United States.

GEORGE CLINTON.

Albany, Feb. 5, 1781.

This message, with the accompanying letters, was referred in the Senate to a committee of the whole, and in the House to a committee of nine. Feb. 21 the Senate considered the subject; chancellor Robert R. Livingston, who had been a special delegate for the state at the then recent hearing in Congress, was heard by the committee, which reported resolutions declaring it inexpedient for the state to insist further on its right to jurisdiction over Vermont, and providing for commissioners to meet commissioners of Vermont to settle the terms for a cessation of jurisdiction by New York. On the same day the Senate adopted the resolutions, with only one dissenting voice, and sent them to the House for concurrence. In that body, the resolutions were made the order of the day for February 27th. The result is stated by HILAND HALL as follows:

On that day the entry on the Assembly journal is as follows, viz:

“The order of the day being read, for taking into consideration the resolutions of the honorable the Senate, relative to the tract of country commonly called the New Hampshire Grants, Mr. Speaker put the question, whether the House will now proceed to take the said resolutions into consideration. Debate arose and it was carried in the affirmative.”

Upon the declaration of this vote, the governor's private secretary, who, it seems, had been waiting the result, announced a message from his Excellency which was immediately read. In his message the governor stated that he had received information "in a manner that claimed his credit, that certain resolutions, originating in the Senate, had been sent to the Assembly for concurrence, proposing the relinquishment of jurisdiction to that part of the State commonly designated by the name of the New Hampshire Grants," and declaring that "if the House should agree to carry those resolutions into effect, the duties of his office would oblige him to exercise the authority vested in him by the constitution and prorogue them."

This message, threatening to put an abrupt end to the session of the Assembly, in case they should proceed to concur with the Senate in the passage of the resolutions, had its intended effect of preventing their adoption. But for this extraordinary threat to exercise an odious power, which has since been expunged from the constitution, there is every reasonable probability that the controversy would have been brought to a speedy and happy close, and all the troubles and heart burnings which resulted from it, for several succeeding years, would have been thereby prevented.¹

The time for this experiment upon New York was well chosen by Gov. CHITTENDEN and his advisers. The northeastern frontier of that state had been ravaged in the preceding October by a British force from Canada, and would be exposed to like ravages in the coming spring from both the British and their Indian allies, so the aid of Vermont had become exceedingly important to all the citizens of eastern New York between Lake Champlain and Albany. Hence Vermont had many friends in that section, and among them was Maj. Gen. PHILIP SCHUYLEY, who bore a leading part in the adoption of the Senate resolutions of the 21st of February. The postponement of the Vermont question by Congress in the preceding September had also been discouraging to New York, and from the fact that the Senate was all but unanimous for a settlement with Vermont on the day Chancellor LIVINGSTON had given his opinion, the inference is fair that he, too, favored the project. Another busy actor in the scene was IRA ALLEN. The following letter is interesting, not only for Gov. CLINTON's account of this matter, but for the fact it reveals that even he, within a few weeks after he had defeated the proposed settlement of the controversy, was almost prepared to concede the independence of Vermont, and to extend its jurisdiction over a large part of New Hampshire.

*Gov. Clinton to Maj. Gen. Alexander McDougall.*²

POKEEPSIE, 6 April 1781.

Dear Sir,—In my hasty scroll from Albany I promised you a more lengthy epistle the first leisure hour. It is not yet arrived and if I was to wait for it I am apprehensive I should be charged with inattention.

Our official letters and the copies of laws transmitted with them to Congress with the list of the acts enclosed to Mr. Duane will give you a general idea of the business of the last meeting, and the enclosed copies of Message and resolutions¹ will serve to explain the conduct of the legislature, or rather the Senate, respecting our controversy with the inhabitants of the Grants. I have therefore only to give you a detail of the management of a measure, which, had it succeeded, I am persuaded you will agree would have reflected lasting ignominy and disgrace upon the state, and this consideration alone ought to have forbid it.

By my proclamation the legislature was to have convened at Albany the 3d of January, but the unpunctual attendance of members prevented their forming a quorum until about the first of February. In this period Mr. Ira Allen arrived at Albany, the members who attended met daily to arrange and prepare the business, and on the idea of promoting dispatch, Mr. Allen was introduced and the letter² opened in my absence. The proposition it contained was immediately though informally agitated and every engine set to work to prepare the minds of the members as they arrived to accede to it: Our northern and western frontier could only be protected from the ravages of a treacherous and ruthless savage enemy by the numbers and military prowess of the state of Vermont; that we could not expect their assistance without relinquishing our jurisdiction over them and yielding to their claim of independency; that in this case we should conciliate their affections and be enabled to enter into a compact with them and be safe. The greater part of the citizens of Albany and Schenectady and the inhabitants of the northern frontier were easily gulled by the leaders for this measure into a belief of all they said in favor of it, and daily reports of the intention of the enemy to penetrate the country in force as soon as the lakes were froze, at times that they were actually on their way, circulated to promote the favorite object.³ The discontents and commotion which at the time too generally prevailed in the state were also in some instances employed to answer the end, and among the grievances complained of by some districts not the best affected to the cause of the country, the opposition given to the independency of Vermont was a noted one. On more minute inquiry I discovered that measures as early as last fall had been taken to promote this hopeful business, and that a certain gentleman (an old friend of ours⁴) had then declared his sentiments on the subject and his

² Chittenden's of Nov. 22 to Gov. Clinton.

³ Less than a month previous to the date of this letter, Gov. Clinton himself had given a dismal account of the condition of New York to Gen. Washington, the letter being dated Feb. 14 1781. The enemy, he wrote, had commenced their barbarities in Tryon county and the best part of the remaining territory would be totally depopulated; "a want of ability to raise a competent body of troops for the defence of the frontiers" was confessed; artillerists and field artillery were wanted; they had exhausted all their stock of ammunition; the troops were destitute of provisions of the meat kind; all the money in the treasury had been advanced; and even from that little success was expected, as there were no beef cattle within the state. This account could not have been exceeded by anything Allen and "the leaders for this measure" could say.—See Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, pp. 53, 54.

⁴ Gen. SCHUYLER.

intention to agitate and support it at the next meeting of the legislature. This I have reason to suspect induced some of our monied gentlemen, to what on such occasions you may judge would be easily obtained, to speculate in lands and solicit grants under the government of Vermont, and by this means they became warmly interested.¹ Under these circumstances it is not strange that a majority of our honest and well meaning Senate, speaking of them as a body, should have been led into a measure from which they were inclined to believe so much good was to result, and not sufficiently apprized of the evils attending it, nor that my message to the Assembly on the subject declaring my intention to prorogue was an unpopular one in Albany. Your official letter informing that there was reason to hope for a speedy and just decision of the controversy by Congress arrived very opportunely and it changed the sentiments of some and for the present stopped the mouths of all, and occasioned the laying aside a long address moved in the Senate in consequence of my message to the Assembly, but not yet agreed to.²

¹ To this suggestion the following extract from the letter of Gen. McDougall, to which Gov. Clinton was replying, is amusingly pertinent:

Maj. Gen. Alexander McDougall to Gov. Clinton.—Extract.

PHILADELPHIA, March 12, 1781.

The influence of the officers of the New England line is considerable in their states, and the habits of thinking which they have acquired in the army are more conformable to the genius of our [New York] constitution than [are those of] the yeomanry of those states who will unavoidably come into ours, and it is necessary the leveling principles of the latter should be tempered by those of the former.* It will be a good stroke of policy to grant those gentlemen land in our state, and it might be expedient to extend it to those of New Jersey—vacant lands in the Grants might make a part of it. If this should be judged prudent, the grant should extend to the officers of those lines who have resigned with good reputations, and to all the soldiers who have served three years, and to all who shall serve during the war. Certain I am we shall derive great utility from such a measure, if it is soon done, and in my opinion no time is to be lost in doing it. I understand a bill of this nature was prepared in the fall of 1779 at Kingston, but was rejected from considerations of narrow and niggardly policy. If it had been done, the influence of the Vermont land-jobbers would ere this have been at an end. I would give you some conclusive intelligence on this subject if time permitted.—Clinton Papers, No. 3575.

* In 1756 Lieut. Gov. COLDEN of New York wrote to the British Lords of Trade thus: "The New England Governments are formed on republican principles, and these principles are zealously inculcated on their youth, in opposition to the principles of the Constitution of Great Britain. The Government of New York, on the contrary, is established, as nearly as may be, after the model of the English Constitution. Can it then be good Policy to diminish the extent of Jurisdiction in His Majesty's Province of New York, to extend the power and influence of the others?"—For this extract, and a note thereon by Gov. HALL of Vermont, see Vt. Hist. Society Collections, Vol. II, p. 510.

² March 12 1781, the Senate appointed Mr. Schuyler and Mr. Platt to draft an address to the governor on this subject, but Gen. McDougall's letter of the same date, representing Congress to be favorable to New York, prevented further action. Gen. McDougall wrote as follows in reference to the controversy in Congress:

The question of the New Hampshire Grants will soon be settled as the state of that name urge its delegates to press for a decision, and there is great reason to expect it will be a just and honorable one for

While these matters were transacting in Albany and the revolvers (who had their emissaries among us) had every reason to expect that their demand would be fully complied with, their Council and Assembly then sitting at Windsor came to the resolutions, a copy of which I enclose you, extending their claim to the deepest channel of Hudson's river, &c. These resolutions you will observe is [were] prior to those of our Senate four days, and you will easily perceive the use which was to be made of them if we had been mad enough to have relinquished our jurisdiction. These resolutions appear to me to have been a secret transaction. I obtained a copy by mere accident, and I am the more inclined to believe this to be the case, as by the proceedings of a convention composed of the friends of New York, Chittenden and all parties including two counties on the east side of Connecticut river, though it appears they have agreed to unite and form an independent government including the several townships on the east side of Connecticut river to Mason's line, not a word in the minutes is said of this western extension to Hudson's river, and I am persuaded the inhabitants on the east side of the Green Mountains (who now compose a large majority) would not readily accede to it, as it is a capital object with them to establish their seat of government on the bank of Connecticut river, against which this western extension would militate and in the end defeat.¹

our state. The cession [of land] made by New York to the United States has removed the cause of opposition which Maryland gave, to have our dispute settled, and the other small states not near us will cease their opposition, as the cause of it is removed. Pennsylvania will urge a determination of their dispute with Connecticut as soon as the business of their legislature is over. This I had from the President [Samuel Huntington of Connecticut] in a confidential conversation with him on the subject of the New England encroachments.—Extract from No. 3575 of the Clinton Papers.

¹ The initiatory proceedings, commenced Oct. 31 1780 and continued until June 16 1781, were public, and the propositions for both the east and west unions resolved upon Feb. 14 1781 were referred to the towns concerned, and of course were public. Feb. 15 1781, the Governor and Council recommended to the Assembly a postponement of further consideration of the jurisdictional claims to the next session, and the appointment of an agent to wait immediately upon "the legislature of the State of New York, now [then] convened at Albany, to agree upon and establish the line between this State and the State of New York." Not until more than three months after Gov. Clinton had defeated the resolutions of the New York Senate, and more than two months after the date of the above letter to Gen. McDougal, was the west union effected. The consummation of the unions resolved upon Feb'y 14th was postponed to the April session, and Ira Allen and Joseph Fay were appointed agents to New York on the 17th of February, as proposed by the Council. Allen bore Chittenden's demand to Clinton probably in January 1781, and may have remained in Albany until the project was defeated on the 27th of February; but there was ample time to send to Albany notice of Allen and Fay's appointment as special agents previous to the action of the New York Senate on the 21st, and the strongest of reasons

I most devoutly wish this unhappy controversy was decided. I wish for a just and honorable decision, but I am persuaded almost any that Congress can have in contemplation is better than further delay. To their decision, made by the proper tribunal, we must and can with honor submit, and a decision by them will in a great measure destroy the bad effects which would result from these turbulent people establishing themselves in defiance of their and our authority. They daily gain strength at our expense, and the dissensions which this dispute excites among ourselves, I fear, will have an unhappy effect in our existed for doing so, as it would show that Vermont had on its part appointed agents to meet with like agents or commissioners, as proposed in the Senate resolutions of New York. Thus it appears from the record that Vermont acted frankly and fairly. Gov. Clinton was not officially apprized of the action of the General Assembly, because the Vermont agents were not authorized to treat with him, but with "the legislature of the State of New York." Gov. Clinton's indignant message of Feb. 5 was a sufficient notice to Vermont against any further official or friendly appeals to him. It is not possible, however, that Gen. Schuyler and associates could have been ignorant of Vermont's action, or that they, as Gov. Clinton said he had been, were dependent upon "mere accident" for information on a project which they were zealously pressing. Indeed, the very terms of the resolution of the New York Senate show, and Gov. Clinton was thus in fact notified, that it was expected Vermont would appoint commissioners to settle the controversy. The readiness with which twelve districts of New York agreed, on the 9th of May following, to unite with Vermont, is another reason for believing that these things were not done secretly.—See Appendix H. There are still other facts pertinent, showing conclusively that Connecticut and Rhode Island were apprized of the purpose of Vermont to seek a settlement of the controversy with the co-operation of New York; and it is highly probable that the legislatures of those states had information from Gen. Schuyler and Gov. Chittenden which warranted at least a hope of a happy settlement of the then dangerous controversy. Jan. 21 1781, Gen. Schuyler wrote to Gen. Washington that he had moved in the New York Senate to request the Eastern States to join in a Convention for settling boundaries so as "to create a new State in this quarter on conditions to be stipulated by the Convention."—See Sparks's Revolutionary Correspondence, Vol. 3, p. 213. On the 4th of May following he again declared his desire on this subject to Washington, and added that Gov. Clinton had "put a stop to the business."—See Sparks's Washington, Vol. 8, pp. 42, 43, note. Vermont projected the east and west unions by one act only, Feb. 14th, but suspended both for a settlement of the controversy by the states interested in it, which Gov. Clinton defeated. New Hampshire also persisted in its claim. Then Vermont resumed hostilities by effecting the threatened encroachments on New York and New Hampshire—the east union April 5, and the west June 16. For resolutions of Connecticut and Rhode Island, see post, p. 275.

public councils. If they are to be a state, which however I deprecate, it is essentially our interest that they should extend to Mason's line, as for the reasons above mentioned it will be our best security against future encroachments, besides in this case the weight and influence of government will be in the hands of sober, discreet people, and many of them warmly attached to us.

I am &c. yours sincerely,

GEORGE CLINTON.

To Maj. Gen. McDougall.

On the 22d of February the Vermont Assembly authorized the Governor and Council to prepare instructions to their agents (styled "commissioners," in their commission,) appointed to settle the boundary line with New York, and they were commissioned by Gov. Chittenden, (according to the Index to the Stevens Papers, p. 27,) "to settle boundary lines between Vermont, New Hampshire, and New York"—thus showing that Vermont intended a fair settlement of the controversy by a mutual agreement between the three States. Gov. Clinton seems to have had no idea of the real purpose of Vermont, thus clearly indicated, when he wrote the letter to Gen. McDougall on the 5th of the succeeding April. On learning of the defeat of the project on account of the extraordinary conduct of Gov. Clinton, it was resolved by the Governor and Council, March 7 1781, not to send the agents to Albany, or to write any further to the General Assembly of New York at present.¹ Thus, a really hopeful scheme of conciliation was most unfortunately ended.

Gov. Chittenden to Gov. Hancock of Massachusetts and Pres't Weare of New Hampshire.

Dec. 12 1780, Gov. Chittenden sent demands, similar to that to Gov. Clinton of New York, to the governors of Massachusetts and New Hampshire. For his letter to Gov. Hancock of Massachusetts, see Appendix C, ante p. 198. It is presumed his letter to Pres't Weare was substantially the same, as both are described as the same in the Index to the Stevens Papers, in these words: "to join in the common defence or Vermont will be obliged to join the British," in one letter; and "to join in the common defence or Vermont will be obliged to join the Enemy" in the other.² Gov. Chittenden wrote to Gov. Trumbull on the same day, that he had made "a demand on the legislatures of the states of New York, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts Bay, to relinquish their claims of jurisdiction to Vermont, with proposals to unite with them in a like union." Massachusetts responded favorably by the action of the General Court, March 8 1781, relinquishing its claim and consenting to the independence of Vermont.¹ No direct reply from New Hampshire can be found, but the following document shows the position of that state at the time.

*Resolutions of New Hampshire, Jan. 13 1781, instructing its Delegates in Congress.*²

STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE. IN HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, }
January 12th 1781. }

Whereas this State is Subjected to many hardships & Inconveniencies on Account of the unsettled Situation of the Inhabitants of the Tract of Land called the New Hampshire Grants, west of Connecticut-River—A respectable Number of whom, being desirous of having said Tract confirmed to this State, considering the same as part thereof—And it being highly necessary as well for the good of this State, as for the Interest of the Inhabitants of said Tract that a speedy Decision be had thereon—

Therefore Resolved, that the Agents & Delegates from this State to the Continental Congress be instructed, and they are hereby instructed to use every possible means to induce Congress to make a speedy and final Determination of the Disputes relating to the Tract of land aforesaid—And as soon as Congress shall proceed in this matter, it is the Opinion of this State, that the said Agents and Delegates ought to use their Endeavours to have the Question “Whether the said Tract of Land shall be a Separate and Independent State,” first determined.—That, if the same shall be determined in the Negative, they and each of them urge all proper Motives & Arguments to have the same Tract confirmed to the State of New Hampshire—for which purpose they are directed to make use of the papers now in their possession respecting said Dispute—and to procure such others as may be of service.

It is further Resolved that the Honorable the President be desired to enclose an Attested Copy of this Resolve & transmit the same to the said Agents & Delegates as soon as may be.

Sent up for Concurrence.

STATE OF VERMONT. IN COUNCIL, Arlington, 12th December, 1780.

Sir:—Enclosed I transmit your excellency a copy of my letter to Congress of the 25th of July last, which, together with this, I request may be laid before the legislature of the state over whom you preside for their perusal and consideration, as it is the only method that Vermont has at present in her power of soliciting a union with the United States to propose it to their several legislatures separately, and as I have not received any answer from congress to my proposal of union in my said letter to them, nor to sending other similar offers from this government with additional proffers to that honorable body to bear a just proportion of the expence of the present war with Great Britain, it does not appear that congress have determined to admit this state into union. The arguments and representations exhibited in my said letter to congress are equally applicable for the consideration of the several legislatures of the United States. This being premised, I proceed to propose an alliance and permanent confederation between the states of Connecticut and Vermont against the hostile attempt of British power, on such conditions as may be agreed upon for the mutual advantage and security of the liberty and independence of the two states respectively. Similar proposals are made to the legislature of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations by this government, and also a demand on the legislatures of the states of New York, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts Bay, to relinquish their claims of jurisdiction to Vermont, with proposals to unite with them in a like union.

The citizens of this state are of opinion that it is owing to the undue influence which those contiguous claiming states (to this territory,) have in congress that Vermont has hitherto been prevented from a union with the United States. This they consider the greatest injustice and ingratitude, as they have ever since the commencement of the present war been a frontier, in part, to every one of them, and in such circumstances have nothing better to expect from them at the conclusion of this war, than to be obliged to wage another war with them to protect their liberties against their exorbitant claims, or fall a prey to them, notwithstanding such a series of sufferings and beneficial service done to the United States in general, and to them in particular, in the course of this war. And although these considerations, abstracted from all others, are sufficiently discouraging, yet additional evils arise when we consider the force of the enemy in Canada; the probability of their being reinforced between this and the conclusion of the next campaign, together with their advantages of the navigation of the lakes, by which means they can suddenly bring their whole force into this state, which cannot fail to be their object next campaign, unless some measures be immediately adopted to prevent it, as the frontier settlements of the state of New York are already destroyed. In a word, their force will be so great that it will be out of the power of this state to form magazines and support a body of troops sufficient to withstand them, and the consequence must inevitably be either that the inhabitants of this state be sacrificed; or, 2dly, they must be obliged to retire into the interior parts of the United States for safety; or 3rdly, be under the disagreeable necessity of making the best terms with the British that may be in their power. Nearly the same would be the condition of either of the United States separately considered from their union, (as they would be unable to withstand the British power,) which may abundantly serve to evince that it is out of the power of Vermont to be further serviceable to them, unless they are admitted into the union.

I am, your excellency's most obedient, and most humble servant, THOS. CHITTENDEN.

Copy attest, THOS. TOLMAN, P. Sec'y.

His Excellency Governor Trumbull.

The foregoing shows that Gov. Chittenden addressed substantially the same letter to Rhode Island, a copy of which he transmitted to Gen. Washington Jan. 15 1781.¹ The responses of Connecticut and Rhode Island were as follows:

*Proceedings of the General Assembly of Connecticut, relative to the admission of Vermont, as a State, into the Union of the United States of America.*¹

At a General Assembly of the Governor and Company of the state of Connecticut, holden at Hartford (by special order of the Governor,) on the 21st day of February, Anno Domini 1781,—

Resolved by this Assembly, that the commissioners who are, or may be, appointed on the part of this state to meet the commissioners from the other three New England states, and the state of New York, in convention to be holden at Providence, at the call of his Excellency the Governor of Connecticut, be instructed, in addition to the commission already given them by this Assembly, to propose as a subject of consideration, in said convention, the request of the people calling themselves the State of Vermont, to be admitted into union and confederation with the thirteen United States of America, as a free and independent state, and report their doings, consultations and conclusions thereon, to this Assembly.

And it is further resolved, that His Excellency the Governor be, and he is hereby, desired, as soon as may be, to notify the several states expected to meet by their commissioners, in said convention, of the above resolution, in order that said states may, if they see proper, make similar enlargements of instructions to their commissioners; and His Excellency the Governor is further desired to make a call of said convention as early as possible. *Resolution of the General Assembly for the State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, at a session holden on the third Monday in March 1781.*²

It is voted and resolved, that the Honorable William West, Esq., William Bradford and Esek Hopkins, Esqs., be, and they are hereby, appointed a committee to meet the commissioners from the other New England states, and the state of New York, in convention, to be holden in Providence, on the 12th day of April next, for the purpose of consulting and devising ways and means that Congress may be invested with power to collect and raise a permanent fund for the paying, clothing and supporting the army, and for discharging the interest arising upon the debts which have been contracted; that the said committee be, and they are hereby fully empowered to consult, deliberate and advise with said convention, in all and every subject and matter which may be brought into contemplation, respecting the welfare of the United States or our allies; and in particular to take into consideration the subject-matter of the policy and justice of admitting into union and confederation with the thirteen United States of America, the people calling themselves the state of Vermont.

Provided, that nothing which shall be done in the said convention, in consequence of this appointment, be binding upon this state, until ratified by this Assembly.

APPENDIX H.

THE SECOND UNION OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE TOWNS WITH VERMONT, AND UNION WITH PART OF NEW YORK, IN 1781.

THE action of Congress in June 1780, and the hearing and postponement in September, exasperated the Vermont government, and disheartened both the adherents to New York in Cumberland county, and the persons in eastern Vermont and western New Hampshire who favored an extension of the jurisdiction of New Hampshire over the whole of Vermont, or the establishment of a new state bounded by the Mason grant on the east and the main ridge of the Green Mountains on the west. The prime movers in a "plan," which resulted in annexing western New Hampshire and a large part of the north eastern section of New York to Vermont, were IRA ALLEN and LUKE KNOULTON. In Allen's History, immediately succeeding the last paragraph in his account in the preceding appendix,¹ he said:

A plan was then laid [September 1780,] between two persons at Philadelphia, to unite all parties in Vermont in a way that would be honourable to those who had been in favour of New York, and said sixteen towns, [which united with Vermont in 1778,] that would also justify the Legislature of Vermont, to effect which, measures were taken to induce some of the western members of the Council and Assembly of New Hampshire, who had exerted themselves to extend the jurisdictional claim of New Hampshire over the territory of Vermont, to write circular letters to convene a Convention at Walpole, which met in December 1780.³

Of the adherents to New York who made the earliest public movement, Oct. 31 1780, the first man named was LUKE KNOULTON, and he had for associates several of the leading supporters of New York in Cumberland county, as the following account, by B. H. HALL, of that convention, and of a second on the 8th of November, indicates:

² See Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. I, p. 412. The Convention met on the 15th of November, instead of December.

On this occasion, Luke Knoulton, Hilkiiah Grout, Oliver Lovell, Col. John Sergeants, Micah Townshend, Maj. Jonathan Hunt, Simon Stevens, Charles Phelps, Benjamin Henry, James Clay, Maj. Elkanah Day, Thomas Cutler, and Barzillai Rice, were appointed a committee to take into consideration the feasibility of a new government, and to meet such persons as should be authorized, to consult upon the same question by a convention or a committee of the people of Gloucester [Orange] county on the west, and Grafton county on the east side of Connecticut river. The design of Cumberland county in these proceedings was "to devise and carry into execution such measures as should be deemed best calculated to unite in one political body all the inhabitants from Mason's grant on the east to the height of land on the west side the said river."—The idea thus brought forward of establishing the western line of a new district at the ridge of the Green Mountains, manifested clearly the unwillingness of the New York adherents to acknowledge the jurisdiction of Vermont, provided they could ensure their own safety in any other way.¹

Delegations from three counties having by previous agreement met on the 8th of November, at Charlestown, New Hampshire, measures were taken to learn the sentiments of the inhabitants residing in the towns included in the district which it was proposed to establish. Until the result of this inquiry should be declared, ultimate action was postponed. Desirous of engaging in the union, the towns in the county of Cheshire, New Hampshire, sent delegates to a meeting which was held at Walpole on the 15th of November.²

At a CONVENTION of DELEGATES from the several towns in the County of Cheshire, in the State of New-Hampshire, held at Walpole, in said county, on the 15th day of November, in the year of our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and eighty:

VOTED, That Dr. Page, Col. Hunt, Capt. Holmes, Daniel Jones, Esq. and Col. Bellows, be a committee to confer with gentlemen from any parts of the territory, called the New-Hampshire grants, concerning the jurisdiction of the said grants, and to consider what is proper to be done by the inhabitants thereof, relative to their jurisdiction; that the same may be ascertained and established. Which committee, after due enquiry and consideration, report as follows, viz. The committee appointed by the convention, held at Walpole, November 15th, 1780, do report, that we have conferred with the several gentlemen present, who were committees from the different parts of the territory, called the New-Hampshire grants, viz. Cumberland, Gloucester and Grafton counties, and do find, that many matters lately agitated, with respect to the jurisdiction of the New-Hampshire grants, render a union of the inhabitants of that territory indispensably necessary. The said inhabitants received the grants of their lands from the same jurisdiction, and settled them while a union was extant; which was an implicit engagement of authority, that it should be continued. But we were unjustly deprived of the advantages resulting from it, in the year 1764, by an arbitrary decree of Great Britain, to which we never acceded: which decree, however, cannot be esteemed efficacious, since the declaration of independence; it being one of those iniquitous measures, by which they were attempting to oppress the colonies; and for which we have since thrown off subjection. This being the case, the union re-exists. And shall we throw it off? God forbid. The situation of the territory aforesaid, by reason of their being a frontier, as well as many other matters, which are obvious, respecting commerce and transactions of a public nature, makes it expedient that they be united in all their interests, in order to make their efforts, in that quarter, against the common enemy, more vigorous and efficacious. In respect to government, great disadvantages may arise by a division. In that case, delinquents may easily evade the operations of justice, by passing from one state to another, and thereby be induced more readily to practice iniquity in that part where the body of inhabitants, and the principal traffick, center. And we imagine that a union of public interests is the only means by which the contentions and animosities, now subsisting among the inhabitants of the territory aforesaid, can be brought to a happy issue: for, so long as the course of justice is in different channels, where people are so nearly allied, disturbances will arise. From authentic information, we cannot but apprehend, that the state of New-Hampshire is greatly remiss, if not grossly negligent, (to call it by no harsher name) in trusting affairs of such great importance as the settlement of their western boundary, to a committee, some of whom, we conceive, would risk the loss of half the state, rather than New-Hampshire should extend their claim west of Connecticut river. And from the best authority that can be obtained, it appears that the agent of the state aforesaid is endeavouring to confirm a division of the grants, contrary to their true interests; which has given the people, on the grants, just occasion to rouse and exert themselves in support of an union of the whole. We, therefore, earnestly recommend, as the only means to obtain an union, preserve peace, harmony, and brotherly love, and the interest of the community in general, that a convention be called from every town from within the said grants, to be held at Charlestown, on the third Tuesday of January next, at one of the clock, in the afternoon; and that one or more members be appointed from each town, with proper instructions to unite in such measures as the majority shall judge most conducive to consolidate an union of the grants, and effect a final settlement of the line of jurisdiction.

² History of Eastern Vermont, p. 401.

³ Slade's State Papers, p. 126.

A true Copy—Attest, DANIEL NEWCOMB, Clerk.

JOURNAL OF THE CONVENTION OF DELEGATES FROM FORTY-THREE TOWNS ON THE NEW HAMPSHIRE GRANTS, JANUARY 16, 1781.¹

At a Convention of Members from forty-three Towns on the New Hampshire Grants begun and held at Charlestown, January 16th, 1781.

The Honorable SAMUEL CHASE,² Esq; was chosen Chairman and BEZALEEL WOODWARD,² Esq; Clerk.

RESOLVED, that General Bellows,² Daniel Jones,² Esq; Col. Hunt,² Mr. Woodward,² Col. Bedel,² Col. Paine,² Col. Olcott, Capt. Curtiss, Mr. White, Col. Wells, Mr. Knoulton and Mr. Townsend be a Committee to prepare matters necessary to be transacted by this Convention; and that they report the same with all convenient speed.

January 18th, 10 o'clock A. M.

T H E Committee above named made report, which being read, is in the words following, VIZ, WHEREAS the Governor of New Hampshire, before and after the close of the last war, did exercise jurisdiction over and grant the greatest part of the Lands within the territory commonly called the New Hampshire Grants, on both sides of Connecticut-River, to sundry companies of persons, principally inhabitants of New England; who offered to undertake, and carry into effect, settlements thereon, subject to the jurisdiction of the crown of Great-Britain, in connection with the colony of New Hampshire.

AND WHEREAS the said undertakers did undergo infinite hardships, toils and fatigues, in forming settlements in the several townships, on both sides of the river, agreeable to their engagements; induced by the happiness in prospect for themselves and posterity, resulting, in great measure, from an happy union of their settlements on the two sides of the river, under the same jurisdiction; the benefits of which had long been experienced in adjacent governments, and which were plighted to them by the circumstances and conditions under which they received and held their grants.

AND WHEREAS the King of Great-Britain did, in the year 1764, pass an arbitrary decree, that the said territory should be divided at Connecticut River, subjecting one part to the jurisdiction of his Governor of New-York, and continuing the other part under the jurisdiction of his Governor of New-Hampshire, whereby the said territory was divided without the consent or knowledge of the owners and proprietors, in violation of the royal engagements, and contrary to the true interest of the inhabitants; against which measure those most immediately affected, so soon as the matter came to their knowledge, did in the most humble, earnest and affecting manner remonstrate and petition; sent agents to Great-Britain to state before the King their grievances, and humbly interceded for redress; and at the same time took every prudent measure to obtain the interest of adjacent Colonies in their favor, especially that of New-Hampshire, from connection with which they had been separated.

AND WHEREAS the said connection rendered the government of New-Hampshire more extensive than the object of their first incorporation, viz. the Mason patent; which extension has ever been a source of uneasiness and discontent, to several persons of influence and importance in that government, and the Assembly of New-Hampshire therefore refused to use their influence in favor of a re-union of the grants, after the division of them by the decree in 1764, when applied to for that purpose, in behalf of the owners, proprietors and inhabitants of the said territory.

² Of New Hampshire.

AND WHEREAS the obligations of the inhabitants of the said territory, as well as of all others in the United States, to allegiance and subordination to the crown of Great-Britain have ceased, on account of the series of unconstitutional and oppressive measures of that authority, towards the American plantations; and independence has therefore been declared by the inhabitants of the said grants, with the United States, whereby all those connections have ceased which resulted from, and were dependant on a subordination to Great-Britain. And as the said territory was never annexed by Charter to any one or more of the American colonies, nor otherwise connected, than by an order of the King to his Governors, to exercise authority there in behalf of the crown, and by a grant of the feoffees to claim a right to be continued in union with one another in matters of Government; the jurisdiction was of consequence, by the declaration of independence, transferred to the inhabitants; which they had good right to undertake and exercise, whenever they should see fit—Yet the said inhabitants, influenced by attachments to the different governments with which they had been connected (resulting from an habituated submission to despotic power) and not immediately attending to the singular circumstances, under which independence from the power of Great-Britain left them, did many of them passively submit to, and act with those governments, to which the King of Great-Britain had last annexed them; While on the other hand, a considerable part of the inhabitants of the said territory, influenced by uneasiness with the measures of those governments, and being early led to enquire into our peculiar situation (to which others were inattentive) did observe, and publish to the world, their views in respect to our independence; and in conformity thereto, broke off connection with the states of New-York and New-Hampshire,—And of those on the west side of the river, who had withdrawn connections from the state of New-York, viewing only the operation of independence from Great-Britain, in respect to themselves and not attending that the whole of the Grants were thereby placed in similar situation, did associate together, and set up a new and independent government.

AND WHEREAS as the states of New-York and New-Hampshire, influenced by the refusal of a respectable number of inhabitants of those parts of the Grants, which they severally claimed, to submit to their respective jurisdictions, complained to the Congress of the United States, of measures taking by the said inhabitants in respect to their independency; and also, made known to Congress, that they had claims to the said territory: And as Congress, on the 24th of September, 1779, did resolve and publish, that they would take upon themselves a final settlement of the disputes respecting the said Grants, provided the states concerned should agree thereto; (and, among other things, recommended that no state should exercise jurisdiction over any of the inhabitants of the said district, except such as should profess allegiance to, and confess the jurisdiction of the same)—which was complied with by the states. And as sundry periods have elapsed, which Congress had appointed for a decision of the said matter, in controversy, without anything material being transacted on the subject; and as, notwithstanding the claim of New-Hampshire to the whole of the Grants, the evident object of both states, by their agents at Congress, has of late been to establish a division at the river, contrary to the true interest of the inhabitants; as they would thereby be deprived of those advantages, in respect to commerce, and transactions of a public nature, which would naturally result from that union of the two sides of the river, which they had warrant to expect, and have right to demand, from the nature, tenor, and circumstances of the grants which they hold.

AND WHEREAS a considerable part of the inhabitants on the said territory, having disavowed connection with any state already formed, have subsisted for some time without any regular form of government, and have been destitute of civil regulations, for want of which they are reduced to lamentable circumstances; and as they are thereby prevented, in a great degree, from performing that part in the present contest with Great-Britain, which might otherwise reasonably be expected, and which might be of essential service in the grand dispute:—And as the contiguity of the said Grants to the province of Canada, renders the inhabitants a frontier to the New-England states; and as the parliament of Great-Britain have done what in them lies, towards annexing the greater part of the said territory to the province of Canada, by the act commonly called the Quebec Bill; for the purpose of obtaining an establishment whereof, it is to be expected they will further employ their force, in attempting the reduction of the inhabitants, or destruction of them and their property. And as the British forces, in conjunction with their savage allies, have of late begun a new scene of devastation among us, by burning some of our towns, and carrying the peaceable inhabitants into captivity: and it is to be expected that great part of the said territory will be treated in the same manner, unless vigorous measures are taken to prevent them:—And as there is no military force employed by the continent, or any of the states, for our defence, which renders an union without delay absolutely necessary, or great numbers will immediately abandon their habitations, which will give such advantage to the cause of Britain, and so open and extend this frontier, that a much greater force will then be necessary for its defence:—And as nothing considerable can be done by the inhabitants of the said territory, tending to their own defence, until they are firmly united for that purpose, and in measures of government.

THIS CONVENTION THEREFORE, taking the aforesaid matters into their most serious consideration, and being duly authorized by their constituents, the inhabitants of the said territory, do hereby publish and declare, that notwithstanding all the unjust measures which have been, or may be, taken to divide us, the right of union still remains to the inhabitants of the said territory, which we are determined to maintain and support; and bind ourselves by the ties of virtue and honor, as we are already bound by the ties of interest, to unite in all such lawful measures as the majority of the representative body of the inhabitants of said territory, duly convened, or such as they may appoint under them, shall agree upon, to maintain and support a union of the inhabitants on the whole of the said Grants; holding ourselves in duty bound to abide the decisions of Congress on the subject, when the matter shall be properly stated before them, and their resolutions thereon be obtained.

As the primary object of this Convention is, that an union of the whole of the Grants be formed and consolidated, upon principles that the majority think proper; and as a considerable part of the said Grants are represented in the state of Vermont,

RESOLVED, That a Committee be chosen to confer with the said Assembly, at their next session, on the subject of said union; and invite them to join in measures which may be most conducive to obtain the object proposed.

RESOLVED, That the proceedings of this Convention be laid before the several towns on the Grants, for their approbation; recommending that those towns which concur in the measures, and have no representatives or delegates in this Convention, appoint members for that purpose; and that each and every town empower their members, to join with the representatives of other towns on the Grants, who shall agree to unite together, in all such measures as shall be necessary for our internal regulations and defence.

Which declaration and resolutions having been repeatedly read, and maturely considered, the question was put, whether this Convention do agree with their Committee in their said report?—which was carried in the affirmative.

Whereupon

RESOLVED, That Dr. William Page, Daniel Jones, Esq; and Mr. Elijah Frink, of the county of Cheshire; Luke Knoulton, Micah Townsend, and John Bridgman, Esqs. of the county of Cumberland; Col. Peter Olcott, Noah White, Esq; and Capt. John Strong, of the county of Gloucester; and Col. Paine, Bezaleel Woodward, Esq; and Mr. Davenport Phelps, of the county of Grafton, be a Committee to confer with the Assembly of Vermont, agreeable to the foregoing resolutions.

RESOLVED, That the proceedings of this Convention be printed, and one copy thereof transmitted to each town on the Grants; and that Maj. Day, Mr. Townsend, and Mr. Lovel, be a Committee for that purpose.

RESOLVED, That this Convention do adjourn, to meet at the meeting House in Cornish, on the first Wednesday in February next, at one of the clock in the afternoon.¹

[PROTEST OF A MINORITY OF THE DELEGATES.]

“In Convention at Charlestown, January 18, 1781.

“WE the subscribers, delegates from the several towns to which our names are affixed, wishing for, and endeavoring to form a union of the New-Hampshire Grants on both sides of Connecticut River, and contented that they be annexed to New Hampshire, or be a separate state, as Congress may judge proper; but thinking ourselves not authorized by our constituents to unite with the said Grants, in the method resolved by the said Convention; and being of opinion that their proceedings have a tendency to weaken the reins of government—to retard the exertions of those who are engaged to oppose the public enemy—to introduce irregularity and disorder in the county of Cheshire, and not conducive to the end proposed; think it our duty to protest against the proceedings of said Convention.

SECRET HISTORY OF THE CHARLESTOWN CONVENTION, &C., BY IRA ALLEN.¹

The Governor and Council appointed Colonel Ira Allen to repair to Charlestown to meet that Convention, and to take such measures as his prudence should dictate, and which might be conducive to the interest of the State. Mr. Allen took credentials from Sunderland, as a member, to meet the Convention, from that town, agreeable to invitation; before he arrived, the Convention had been in session two days, and had appointed a Committee to state the business of their meeting. Forty-three towns were represented in the Convention; twelve of those representatives were members of the Council and Assembly of New Hampshire. Mr. Allen did not take a seat as a member of the Convention, nor produce his credentials. At length the Committee reported to unite all the New Hampshire grants to New Hampshire, which was adopted by a great majority, and went in fact to annihilate the State of Vermont. Mr. Allen informed some confidential persons, that the Governor, Council, and some other leading characters, on the west side of the Green Mountains, were for extending their claim of jurisdiction to the Mason line; and that if the Convention would take proper measures the Legislature of Vermont would extend their claim at their adjourned term in February, 1781; and that he was authorized to give such assurance.

A motion was made and carried, to consider the report, and re-commit it to the committee, to be corrected and fitted for the press, as it would be a matter of public notoriety, and to lay it again before the Convention next morning. The friends of New Hampshire were much pleased with their success, and well enjoyed the night; but the scene changed the next morning, and the committee reversed their report, and reported to unite all the territory of New Hampshire, west of Mason's east line, extending to Connecticut river, with the State of Vermont; and which report was accepted by a great majority of the Convention, it being principally opposed by twelve members of the Council and Assembly of New Hampshire, who, thereupon, withdrew to remonstrate against the proceeding.

This bare-faced conduct of the members of the Legislature disclosed their intention at once, and furnished Vermont with fair pretensions to extend her jurisdiction on grounds of similar policy and self-preservation.

The Convention then appointed a Committee to confer with the Legislature of Vermont at their next term, and adjourned to meet at Cornish (only three miles from Windsor, the place of session of the Legislature of Vermont, agreeable to adjournment) on the same day with them.

On February 10th, the Committee informed the Assembly, then sitting at Windsor, that "the Convention of the New Hampshire towns was desirous of being united with Vermont, in one separate independent Government, upon such principles as should be mutually thought the most equitable and beneficial to the whole." In consequence of this application, the Legislature resolved, on February 14th, that "in order to quiet the present disturbances on the two sides of the river (Connecticut) and the better to enable the inhabitants on the two sides of said river to defend their frontier, the Legislature of this State do lay a jurisdictional claim to all the lands whatever, east of Connecticut river, north of Massachusetts, west of the Mason line, and south of latitude 45°; and that they do not exercise jurisdiction for the time being."

¹From Ira Allen's History, in Vt. Historical Society Collections, Vol. I, pp. 413, 414.

The Convention of the New Hampshire towns was then sitting at Cornish, on the opposite side of the river; and on February 22d, the articles of union were agreed upon, and confirmed; nevertheless, the right of dissolving the union of the district was retained by the State of Vermont.

THE JOINT ACTION OF THE CHARLESTOWN CONVENTION AND THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF VERMONT, ON THE UNIONS, FEBRUARY 1781.¹

THURSDAY, Feby. 8th 1781.

A letter signed "Elisha Payne Chairman" of the Convention [the adjourned Charlestown Convention then sitting at Cornish,] directed to the "Hon^{ble} Thomas Porter Esq^r Speaker of the Assembly of the State of Vermont," requesting to be heard on the business of their appointment—and likewise enclosing sundry resolutions of a Convention of members from forty-three towns in the New Hampshire Grants began and held at Charlestown Jan^y. 16th 1781," was read and [it was]

Resolved that the Governor & Council be requested to attend this House in a Committee of the whole to confer together before the said Committee be heard.

The Governor & Council attended accordingly and [both Houses] Resolved themselves into a Committee of the whole.

The Com^{tee} of the whole having adjourned, the House formed and adjourned.

The committee of the whole met on the 9th, 10th and 12th. The proceedings of the day last named were recorded in the Assembly journal of the 14th as follows:

STATE OF VERMONT, Windsor Feby. 12th 1781.

Agreeable to the order of the day, the Governor, Council and House of Representatives met, and formed into a Committee of the whole, for the purpose of taking into consideration the matter of laying a jurisdictional claim east and west—His Excellency Tho^s. Chittenden Esq^r in the Chair. After some debate, a Committee of seven were appointed to prepare a Report, to be made to this Committee, which Report was made as follows, viz. [on the 14th:]

To the grand Committee consisting of his Excellency the Governor the hon^{ble} Council and House of Representatives—

Your Committee to whom was refered the several papers from the Committee of the Convention at Cornish and also the requests of the inhabitants living north of a line being extended from the north line of the Massachusetts to Hudsons River and east of the same River and South of Latitude forty five beg leave to Report—viz.—

That whereas the district of country formerly known by the name of the New Hampshire Grants was peopled in consequence of grants of lands from New Hampshire and whereas the former government of New York did by cunning in the year 1764 obtain a Royal order to exercise jurisdiction to the west bank of Connecticut River which was against the consent of the people of said district. New York proceeded to grant subsequent patents, erect courts, issue writs of ejection, possession &c. in prejudice to the first grantees and occupants; the inhabitants necessitated to it declared a defensive war against the government of New York and that government made acts of outlawry against said inhabitants and warlike preparations was making on both sides. In the interim the people governed themselves by conventions who at several times made application to New Hampshire to exert themselves to obtain jurisdiction who by a Proclamation &c. wholly rejected any such connections. Thus stood the case at the grand era of American Independence when in Kingly governments all jurisdiction and jurisdictional lines ceased and all governmental powers devolved on the people, when they, continuing said Convention, emerged into independence, declaring themselves on the fifteenth day of Jan^r. 1777 to be a sovereign, free and independent people—and

Whereas the general court of New Hampshire did on the 19th day of July 1777, by a letter signed "Meshech Weare President" directed to "Ira Allen Esq^r. Secretary of the State of Vermont," acknowledge the independence of this State, and whereas on the representation of a Committee inhabiting several towns east of and contiguous to Connecticut River made to the Assembly of this State at their Session in March 1778 that a number of towns east of and adjoining to said River were unconnected with any State with regard to their civil police, this State upon said Representation did admit sixteen towns east of said River to Union and extended jurisdiction over them—and

Whereas the General Court of New Hampshire did, by their letter dated Aug^t. 22^d. 1778 signed "Meshech Weare President of the Council of New Hampshire" directed "To the hon^{ble}. Tho^s. Chittenden Esq^r." demand of the State of Vermont a surrendery of their jurisdiction east of said River which will appear in the following paragraph in said letter viz—"I beseech you Sir for the sake of the people over whom you "preside and the [said] people for the sake of their future peace and "tranquility to relinquish every connection as a political body with the "towns east of Connecticut river who are members of the State of New "Hampshire entitled to the same privileges as the other people of the "said State from which there never has been any attempt to restrain "them."—The Legislature of Vermont at their session in Feb^r. 1779 on the reception of President Weares said letter, considering their territory to be larger and more fertile than that of New Hampshire allowing [including] the latter said sixteen towns east of said River and being unwilling to have a controversy with a neighbouring State, did close with the demand of New Hampshire and relinquished jurisdiction east of said Connecticut River. In this the minds of the two governments met and virtually settled upon the River as the boundary line between the respective States. An agent was then appointed to transact the dissolution of said Union to the General Court of New Hampshire who on his arrival there found, after delivering his message, that there was a plan on foot for laying a jurisdictional claim to the territory of Vermont under pretext of friendship and to baffle the claims of New York. Said agent made strenuous efforts against such claims being laid, arguing that it could not be of much service to Vermont as she had little to fear from New York, and the further consideration was postponed to their next Session. In the interim an agent was again sent to attend said General Court with a letter from the Governor of this State requesting the Legislature of New Hampshire in the most urgent manner not to lay claim to this State. After a hearing before both houses and the most pressing arguments used, the legislature did insist that they would do Vermont a favour, and accordingly laid their claim and directed their agents to lay said claims at Congress, which together with the claims of the neighbouring States has prevented this State from obtaining a seat in Congress.¹

¹Ira Allen was the agent of Vermont on both occasions. For his account, see Vol. I, pp. 407-409.

It is to be here observed that New Hampshire have from the time of laying her aforesaid claim endeavoured to support internal broils in the eastern part of this State contiguous to Connecticut River. Some gentlemen inhabitants of the County of Cheshire, that are or have been members of the General Court of New Hampshire, not long since in Convention when fatal necessity obliged them to it, publicly declared that their intentions were to unite the whole of the grants (meaning Vermont) to N. Hampshire.—And whereas Sundry applications have been made by the people inhabiting west of the line known by the name of the Mason line, and east of Connecticut river, to unite with this State in one distinct government—Their last application is in the words following viz—

“To the non^{ble} the Gen^l. Assembly of the State of Vermont now sitting in Windsor.”

“The Committee appointed by the Convention holden at Charlestown the 16th of Jan^r. last to confer with the Assembly of said State beg leave to inform that the Convention are desirous of being united with the State before mentioned in one seperate independent government upon such principles as shall be mutually thought the most equitable and beneficial for the whole, desiring an answer as soon as may be.

“By order of the Committee.

ELISHA PAYNE.

“Windsor Feb^r. 10th 1781.”

Therefore your Committee do recommend, in order to quiet the present disturbances on the two sides of the River and the better to enable the inhabitants on the two sides of said River to defend the frontiers, that the Legislature of this State do lay a jurisdictional claim to all the lands situate east of Connecticut River north of the Massachusetts and South of latitude 45—and that they do not exercise jurisdiction for the time being.

[ON THE WESTERN UNION.]

Whereas the government of New York have for more than sixteen years last past made use of every art and cunning in their power to usurp the rights and properties of the people of this State; while every measure hitherto adopted has proved abortive for settling a controversy of such magnitude, so necessary to be settled for the peace and welfare of the United States at this critical period, the unfortunate situation of this State being that of having an extensive frontier of more than one hundred miles in length to defend against the British invasion from the Province of Quebeck, by the avaricious and ambitious claims of the neighbouring governments and by the powers assumed over them by Congress. [this State has] have at several times been embarrassed in raising men and money for the defence of her frontiers; and by resolutions of Congress, obtained by the claiming governments, notwithstanding the brave exertions of this State in the Bennington Battle &c., every article belonging to the Continent has been called for and ordered out of the State even to pick-axes and spades at a time when the State was erecting a new line of forts on her frontiers, at which time the State of New York evacuated their fort at Skeensborough [now Whitehall,] which necessitated the people¹ to petition this State for protection, when this State reinforced her guards and directed her scouts to cover said people.

¹ The people of that part of New York, or the part covered by the supposed government of Skene, mentioned in the next section.

And whereas it appears by the best accounts hitherto obtained that there was a government established by the Court of Great Britain before the æra of American independence, including all the lands this State at present exercises jurisdiction over, as also a much greater western extent, over which Governor Philip Skene was to have presided, which overturns the claims of New York on their own stating¹—

And whereas it appears that the government of New York is still determined to do everything in her power to embarrass and overturn the jurisdiction of this State, and have made no answer to Governor Chittenden's letter of the 22^d Nov^r. last past which was sent to the Legislature of New York demanding of them to relinquish their claim of jurisdiction to this State and inviting them to join in the mutual defence of the frontiers of the two States against British invasion from the Province of Quebec—

Therefore your Committee do recommend that the Legislature of this State do lay a jurisdictional claim to all the land situate north of the north line of the State of Massachusetts and extending the same to Hudson's River the east of the center of the deepest channel of said River to the head thereof, from thence east of a north line being extended to latitude 45 and south of said line, including all the lands and waters to the place where this State now exercises jurisdiction—and not to exercise jurisdiction for the time being.

By order,

Windsor Feby^r. 14th. 1781.

JOSEPH BOWKER, Chairman.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE, Feby^r. 14th 1781.

The aforesaid Report was read and accepted.

Attest, ROS. HOPKINS, Clerk.

[IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, Feb. 14, 1781.]

The aforesaid Report was read and accepted, and thereupon

Resolved that this state have and do hereby lay a jurisdictional claim to all the lands and waters described in the aforesaid Report.

Resolved that a Committee of five be appointed to join a Committee from the Council for the purpose of waiting upon the Committee appointed by a Convention held at Charlestown with the Report of the Committee of both houses upon the subject of jurisdictional claims and passed the house this day.

The members chosen M^r. Harris [Edward of Halifax,] M^r. Strong [Col. John of Dorset,] M^r. Pearl [Col. Stephen of Rupert,] M^r. Walbridge [Col. Ebenezer of Bennington,] and M^r. Murdock [Major Thomas of Norwich.]²

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, Feby^r. 15th. 1781.

A request from the Convention was delivered to this House by their Committee, and

Resolved that a Committee of three to join a Committee from the Council be appointed to prepare an answer to the aforesaid request of the Convention now sitting at Cornish—and report to this House as soon as may be. The members chosen M^r. Walbridge, M^r. A. Robinson [Amos of Hartford,] and M^r. Webb [Joshua of Rockingham.]³

² Three Councillors were joined the same day—Messrs. Allen, Emmons, and Fassett.

³ The Councillors joined were Messrs. Allen and Brownson.

Resolved that the Committee from the Convention be informed that it is not likely that an answer to their request can be given until tomorrow morning 9 o'Clock.

Resolved that the Report of the Committee of the whole which passed this House yesterday respecting jurisdictional claims be referred until tomorrow morning for further consideration.

FRIDAY, Feb^y. 16th. 1781.

The Committee to whom was refered the request of the Convention now sitting at Cornish &c. brought in the following Report viz.

That this Assembly is willing to receive the inhabitants of the New Hampshire Grants east of Connecticut River and west of the Mason line into union with this State if we can agree on terms that shall be safe for this State and beneficial for the whole.

The reason why some public papers was not delivered to the Committee of said Convention as agreed upon are—that the bill was long and took longer to copy it than was expected, that the appointment of the Committee happened to be laid aside among other papers and could not be found till 12 o'Clock, that it was expected that Doct^r Page would have waited at Windsor till the copies were ready, that about one o'Clock the copies were offered to him—and he did not take them.

P^r. order, TIM^o. BROWNSON, Ch^m.

The aforesaid Report was read and accepted and

Resolved that a Committee of two to join a Committee from the Council be appointed to wait on the Cornish Convention with the aforesaid Report. The members chosen M^r. Walbridge and M^r. E. Smith [Capt. Elihu of Clarendon.]¹

After the intervention of other business the journal proceeded as follows:

A Resolution from the Convention passed this day was delivered to this House by a Committee appointed by said Convention for the purpose mentioned in the said Resolve; and thereupon,

Resolved, that a Committee of nine to join a Committee from the Council be appointed to confer with the said Committee from the Convention according to said Resolve and make Report of their proceedings as soon as may be.—The members chosen Col^o. Strong, M^r. E. Smith, M^r. Walbridge, M^r. S. Robinson [Samuel of Bennington,] M^r. Murdock, M^r. Webb, M^r. M. Powell [Martin of Manchester,] M^r. Harris, and M^r. Whipple [Benjamin of Rutland.]²

The following, from Slade's State Papers, embraces details of the negotiation between the committees of the Convention and the Legislature, and the remaining action of the latter as extracted from the journals of the Assembly and Council and certified by their recording officers for publication.

“Articles of Union, agreed upon between the Committee of the Legislature of the State of VERMONT, and the Committee of the Convention of the New-Hampshire Grants, at Windsor, in Feb. 1781.”

ARTICLE 1. That the Constitution of said state be adopted as it now stands, subject to a revision, when the people, at large, shall judge proper.

² Councillors Allen, Fassett, Spooner, and Emmons were joined.

ANSWER—We cannot agree to a revision of the Constitution, in any other way than is pointed out therein.

REPLY—The answer of the committee of the Legislature to our first article, not objected to.

ART. 2. That so soon as the circumstances of the state shall admit, the Legislature of the state shall apply to the Congress of the United States, to be admitted into confederation with them.

ANSWER—Agreed to.

ART. 3. That no farther grants of land shall be made by the Legislature of Vermont, until the towns included in the Union have opportunity to be represented in the Assembly.

ANSWER—Not admissible.

REPLY—Agreed to omit the third article, in confidence the Assembly will act on principles of honor, in respect to it.

ART. 4. That all expences of the several towns, non-represented in the Legislature of Vermont, and those which shall be admitted into the Union, which shall have accrued in respect to the war, be, at some future period, properly adjusted, and that the whole be at equitable charge therein.

ANSWER—Admitted, on condition the losses of the suffering inhabitants of this state, be included.

ART. 5. That a general and full act of oblivion be passed for the persons who, on the first day of October last, professed themselves subjects of the state of New-York: and that all judgments for fines, forfeitures, &c. against any, or either of the said persons, for opposing the authority of the state of Vermont, be annulled; and that no judgments be, hereafter, rendered against any of the said persons for offences heretofore committed against said state.

ANSWER—Agreed to.

ART. 6. That no civil suits shall hereafter be maintained against any, or either, of the said persons, for trespasses, heretofore committed by them, against any of the officers of the said state or their assistants.

ANSWER.—Agreed to.

ART. 7. That where unappropriated lands were granted by the late government of New-York, antecedent to 1st of September, 1775, the property of such grantees, now residing upon the New-Hampshire grants, shall be secured to them, free from expence; and where the same, or any part thereof, has already been granted by this state, compensation in value, shall be made in other unappropriated lands, free from expence.

ANSWER.—Not agreed to.—Whatever compensation of that kind is made, it must be done on application to the Legislature, according to equity, arising out of each particular case.

A Message from Committee of Convention to Committee of the Legislature.

In order that the committee of Convention may the better determine on articles necessary to be proposed, respecting the regulation of Militia, present defence, &c. we would request the committee of the Legislature of Vermont to suggest to us their ideas in respect to the time and manner, in which the Union shall be completed, in case other articles can be mutually agreed on; and wish for an answer, before we proceed further.

To the honorable the Committee of the Legislature. }
Saturday, 12 o'clock, February 17th, 1781. }

The answer of the Committee of the Legislature to the foregoing Message.

The committee are of opinion that, if articles of Union are fully agreed on, it ought to be completed, at farthest, by the first Wednesday of April next; and that the manner be as follows, viz.

The Legislature shall call on all the towns, in the state of Vermont, and also on all the towns on the New-Hampshire grants, east of Connecticut river, to give their sentiments relative to the Union's taking place, as soon as may be; and that the votes of each town be returned to the assembly, at their adjourned session, on the first Wednesday of April next; and, on condition that two thirds of the towns in the state of Vermont, at a legal town meeting, vote for the union, and also, two thirds of the towns, on the New-Hampshire grants, east of Connecticut river; at the same time, those towns that vote for the Union (who are not represented) be directed by the Legislature, to choose members to sit in the assembly, who will be admitted, in case the Union is completed as aforesaid.

By order.

I. ALLEN, Clerk.

To the honorable the Committee of Convention. }
Saturday, 2 o'clock, February 17th, 1781. }

The Reply of the Committee of the Convention, to the above Answer of the Committee of the Legislature.

In order to facilitate the raising and subsisting men for the present defence, according to the act of the Legislature of Vermont, for that purpose, the committee of Convention concur with the proposals of the honorable committee of that Legislature, in respect to the time and manner of completing the Union, with the following explanations and alterations, viz.

1. That those towns only, who make returns, be reckoned in computing the proportion.

2. That an extent of only those towns, east of the river, which are within about twenty miles of it, be referred to.

3. That the towns, not represented in Assembly, shall be immediately called on to elect members to take their seats in Assembly, on the said first Wednesday of April next, in case the Union shall be concurred in by a major part of the towns who act on the matter; which will, doubtless, include two thirds of the inhabitants.

The Assembly's committee give for answer to the committee of Convention, to their proposed explanation and alteration of the proposals of this committee, as to the manner and time of completing the Union:—

ART. 1. Agreed to.

ART. 2. Agreed to.

ART. 3. That the towns, proposed to be in Union, be immediately called on to choose members to sit in Assembly, on the first Wednesday in April next, in case the Union shall be concurred to, by a major part of the towns in this state, and two thirds of the towns, east of, and within about twenty miles of Connecticut river.

By order,

J. FASSETT, Chairman.

To the honorable Committee of Convention. }
Tuesday, 3 o'clock, February 20th, 1781. }

ART. 8. Proposed by the Committee of Convention.

That wherever persons, who professed themselves subjects of New-York, have heretofore been fourfolded, for not giving in their list to the assessors, or if such cases shall happen before the approbation of the several articles of Union by the Assembly and Convention, respectively, the fourfold shall be relinquished, upon the party's giving in his list to the assessors.

ANSWER.—Agreed to.

ART. 9. That wherever property has been taken, under the authority of Vermont, or shall be taken, before the several articles of Union shall be ratified by the Assembly and Convention, respectively, from any of the persons in the county of Cumberland, who, at, or before, the time of such taking, professed themselves subjects of New-York, for fines, forfeitures, &c. credit shall be given to the persons aforesaid, for the full value of such property, in future military services.

ANSWER.—Not agreed to, in the extensive sense that it may be taken in; yet, it is expected that whatever personal service has been done, or fines, will be duly considered.

ART. 10. That all actions, pending in any court in the counties of Cheshire and Grafton, shall be transferred in the situation they shall be in, at the time of completing the Union, to Courts to be then, forthwith, erected, under the authority of Vermont, without cost to the parties, other than would have accrued, had they been terminated in Courts under the jurisdiction of New-Hampshire.

ANSWER.—Agreed to.

ART. 11. That those towns, east of the river, who have paid their proportion, or any part thereof, of the sixty million of dollars, apportioned to New-Hampshire, shall have credit for what they have severally paid to the treasury of said state, in case Vermont, at any future period, shall have to pay their proportion of the Continental assessment for the money emitted by Congress.

ANSWER.—Answered in the answer to the fourth article.

A Message from the Committee of the Convention, to the Committee of the Legislature.

The Committee of Convention beg leave to inform the Committee of the Legislature of Vermont, that they have, at present, no additional articles, and agree to wave any further objections to answers received to those already proposed, and wish to receive whatever the Legislature's Committee have to add, on the treaty. Tuesday, 5 o'clock, P. M. February 20th, 1781. }

A Message from the Committee of the Legislature to the Committee of Convention.

As no further proposals are to be made by the Convention's Committee, at present, the Assembly's Committee propose the following articles, as really necessary for the peace and well being of this state, and the United States.

ART. 1. That the independence of the state of Vermont be held sacred; and that no member of the Legislature shall give his vote or otherwise use endeavors to obtain any act or resolution of Assembly, which shall endanger the existence, independence or well being of the state, by referring its independence to the arbitrament of any power.

ART. 2. That whenever this state becomes united with the American States, and there shall then be any dispute between this and either of the United States, respecting boundary lines, the Legislature of this state will then (as they have ever proposed) submit to Congress, or such other tribunal as may be mutually agreed on, the settlement of any such disputes. Proceedings of the Legislature of Vermont and the Convention on the foregoing articles.

STATE OF VERMONT, IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, February 22d, 1781.

The aforesaid report was read and accepted; and

Resolved, That the articles of Union agreed to, and proposed, by the Committee of this Legislature, to the Committee of the Convention, be and are hereby confirmed; and this Assembly do pledge the faith of this state, that said articles be held sacred. Attest, ROS. HOPKINS, Clerk.

IN CONVENTION at Cornish, February 22d, 1781.

The foregoing articles and recommendation were read and agreed to.

SAMUEL CHASE, Chairman.

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, Thursday Febr. 22d. 1781.¹

A Resolve of the Convention of this day's date appointing a Committee to deliver the articles of Union to this House for their approbation and ratification was read and

Resolved that a Committee of three be appointed to wait on the Convention with the Articles of Union that have passed this House and likewise the articles that have passed the Convention which are ratified by this Legislature; and bring back the original Articles that have passed this House when ratified by the Convention.—The members chosen M^r. Bartlet [Capt. Samuel of Sunderland,] M^r. Pearl and M^r. Burton [Capt. Elisha of Norwich.]²

² The purpose of this resolution seems to have been to preserve a copy of the ratified articles. This committee made no formal report, but its duty was performed, as the published articles indicate.

FRIDAY Feb^y. 23^d. 1781.

Resolved that Ezra Styles [Stiles] Esq^r be and he is hereby appointed and impowered to get the several Acts and Articles of Union that have passed this session printed and forward the same to Martin Powel Esq^r of Manchester in the County of Bennington, Sol^o. Bingham Esq^r of Tinmouth in the County of Rutland, Briant Brown Esq^r of Windsor in the County of Windsor, Tim^o. Bartholomew Esq^r of Thetford in the County of Orange and Nath^l. Robinson Esq^r of Westminster in the County of Windham, who are hereby requested to forward them to the several towns in their several Counties as soon as may be.

Whereas there are several towns unrepresented in this Assembly through neglect of the proper officers for warning freemens meetings or some other reasons which does by no means interfere with their right of Representation; and

Whereas there is a Union formed or about to be formed between this State and the New-Hampshire grants east of Connecticut River and in case that Union proves to be agreeable to the people it will be necessary for them towns to be represented in this Assembly in their next Session—Therefore

Resolved that the respective Constables of such towns in the west and east side of Connecticut River, or the Selectmen where there are no Constables, be and they are hereby impowered and desired to warn the freemen in their respective towns to meet at some convenient place in such town at least four days before the next Session of this Assembly for the purpose of chosing a Representative or Representatives for such town, and it shall be the duty of the freemen then and there to attend and proceed to elect a Representative or Representatives according to law, and the Representatives on the Grants east of Connecticut River shall be fairly intitled to seats in this Assembly on the said Unions appearing to be agreeable to the people according as is proposed in the Articles of said Union.¹

Resolved that this Assembly be and is hereby adjourned until the first Wednesday of April next then to meet at Bennington.

The General Assembly met at Windsor, (not at Bennington, as per entry in the Assembly journal of the adjournment of the February session,) on Wednesday the 4th of April, but a quorum did not attend until the afternoon of the 5th. The record of the 5th and 6th gives the completion of the eastern union as follows:

THURSDAY, 2 o'clock, P. M. April 5th, 1781.

The following was delivered the Speaker by the Committee appointed for that purpose, viz.

“IN CONVENTION at Cornish, Thursday, April 5th, 1781.

“Voted, That a committee of three be appointed to wait on the Assembly of Vermont, now sitting at Windsor, to inform them of the state of the returns from the towns on the east side of Connecticut River and that the way is clear on our part for the proposed union agreeable to the articles of the treaty, and to Request information whether the Assembly are ready to receive the members returned to sit in the Assembly, on the unions taking place. The Committee chosen, Col^o. Payne, M^r. Woodward and Doct. Page.—Extract from the Minutes.

“BEZA. WOODWARD, Clerk.”

“List of those towns east of Connecticut River which have made returns acceding to an Union with the State of Vermont, viz:—Hinsdale,

ELISHA PAYNE,
BEZA. WOODWARD, } Committee.
WILLIAM PAGE,

The several Representatives were desired to give in the votes of the towns that they represent concerning the union; and the following towns were found to have voted to accept the same agreeable to the articles, viz.—Shaftsbury, Arlington, Sandgate, Sunderland, Dorset, Reuport, Pawlet, Poultney, Castleton, Danby, Tinmouth, Rutland, Pittsford, Bethel, Pomfret, Peacham, Fairlee, Guilford, Moortown, Whitingham, Marlborough, New-Fane, Wilmington, Putney, Westminster, Athens, Chester, Windsor, Reading, Thetford, Strafford, Barnard, Royalton, Sharon, Norwich and Hinsdale; and the following towns disapproved of the said Unions taking place, viz:—Bennington, Manchester, Clarendon, Dummerston, Londonderry, Woodstock and Hertford.

Note.—The following towns have not sent in their opinion, viz:—Wells, Wallingford, Townshend, Wethersfield, Cavendish and Hartford.

Resolved, That a Committee of three be appointed to wait on the Convention and inform them that the Union is agreed on by a major part of the towns in this State agreeable to the Articles of Union as proposed; and that this Assembly will wait to receive the members returned to sit in this Assembly, on the Unions taking place to-morrow morning nine o'clock to take their seats. The members chosen, Mr. Walbridge, Mr. [Stephen R.] Bradley and Mr. Lyon.

FRIDAY April 6th 1781.¹

Mr. Woodward [Bezaleel,] a Representative from the East side of Connecticut River, informed this House that the Representatives elected in the several towns east of said River were waiting to take their seats agreeable to the Articles of Union and the order of the day—whereupon

Resolved that a Committee of three be appointed to wait on the Representatives returned to sit in this Assembly from the towns east of Connecticut River and introduce them to this House—the members chosen Mr. Bradley, [Stephen R., who took his seat for Westminster at this session,] Mr. Walbridge and Mr. [Matthew] Lyon.

The following are the several members chosen to Represent the towns east of Connecticut River, who were introduced by the aforesaid Committee, and produced their Credentials and took the necessary oaths to qualify them to a seat in this House viz—

Deacon Silas Thompson and Capt. Sam^l. King, Chesterfield; Mr. Absalom Peters, Landaff; Lieut. Jn^o. Stevens, Plainfield; Capt. Josiah Russell, Plainfield; Mr. Moses Whipple, Croyden; Daniel Jones Esq^r. Hinsdale; Will^m. Ripley Esq^r. Cornish; Mr. Silas Gaskill and Mr. Daniel Cass, Richmond; Doct^r. W^m. Page, Capt. Sam^l. Wetherbee, Charlestown; Tho^s. Russell Esq^r. Piermont; Mr. John Dunton, Acworth; Mr. Sam^l. Canfield, Marlow; Mr. Moses True, Saville; Nath^l. S. Prentice Esq^r. Alstead; Mr. Elijah Frink, Lempster; Mr. Wolston Brockway, Surry; Benjⁿ. Giles Esq^r. Newport; Deacon Matthias Stone, Capt. Oliver Ashley, Claremont; Capt. Abel Stevens, N. [North] Grantham; Mr. Russel Mason, Grafton; Col^o. Elisha Payne, Lieut. Elihu Hyde, Lebanon; Jonth. Freeman Esq^r. Col^o. John House, Hanover; Mr. Sawyer Bullock,

Cardigan; Maj^r. Jonth. Child, M^r. Walter Fairfield, Lime; M^r. Davenport Phelps, Orford; Col^o. Tim^o. Bedle, Lyman, Morristown, and Bath; Tim^o. Bedle Esq^r. and Maj^r. Joshua Howard, Haverill; M^r. John Young Jun^r. Gunthwaite; Bezaleel Woodward Esq^r. Dresden—except Deacon Silas Thompson and M^r. Sawyer Bullock.¹

On the preceding day twelve representatives from Windham, Windsor, and Orange counties—doubtless elected under the resolution of the preceding February—took their seats. On the 6th of April, after the admission of the representatives from New Hampshire towns, Stephen Tilden and Lieut. Gov. Joseph Marsh presented credentials as representatives for Hartford, in place of Elkanah Sprague and Amos Robinson, who were the sitting members, but were “recalled.” Gov. Marsh had been very active against the Vermont government from the dissolution of the first union with New Hampshire towns, but at this period doubtless he was anxious to identify himself again with Vermont. These credentials were referred to a committee, which reported immediately that the town was “duly represented” by the sitting representatives, and the report was accepted.

SATURDAY April 7th 1781.

Resolved that the Clerk of this Assembly send a summons to the Constables of each town that is not Represented in this Assembly on the east side Connecticut River directing them forthwith to warn the freeholders &c. to meet at some suitable place and there to choose a Representative or Representatives to sit in this Assembly as soon as may be.¹

SETTLEMENT OF BOUNDARY WITH NEW YORK PROPOSED.

IN COUNCIL, February 15th 1781.

Resolved that it be recommended to the General Assembly, that the further Consideration of the Jurisdictional Claims read & passed in both Houses yesterday be postponed until the next Session of this Assembly & that an Agent be appointed and fully Authorised, Immediately to Wait upon the Legislature of the State of N. York now Convened in Albany to agree upon and Establish the line between this State & the State of N. York.

Attest,

THOMAS TOLMAN, Sec^y. P. T.

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, SATURDAY Feb^y. 17th 1781.

Resolved that there be two Agents appointed and fully authorized immediately to wait upon the Legislature of the State of New York now convened at Albany to agree upon and establish the line between this

¹ For the appointment of civil and military officers in the New Hampshire towns embraced in the union, see ante, pp. 88, 89, 96–99, 108, 116, 118.

State and the State of New York.—The Agents chosen (by ballot) are Col^o. Ira Allen and Maj^r. Joseph Fay.¹

Resolved that a Committee of five to join a Committee from the Council be appointed to prepare instructions for the aforesaid Agents and Report to this House.—The members chosen M^r. Whipple, M^r. Ward 1st,² M^r. Pearl, M^r. Murdock and M^r. Webb.³

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, Feb. 22, 1781.

The Committee appointed to prepare instructions for the Agents appointed to settle the line between this and the State of New York brought in their Report which was read, and

Resolved that the Governor and Council be and they are hereby requested to make out instructions to said Agents whenever it shall be judged necessary, under such restrictions as they shall judge proper for the benefit of this State.

March 7, doubtless having heard of the failure of the proposition of the New York Senate to settle the controversy, the Governor and Council declined to give instructions at that time.—See ante, pp. 266-273.

UNION WITH VERMONT OF A PART OF NEW YORK, APRIL AND JUNE, 1781.

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF VERMONT, Tuesday, April 10, 1781.

The House formed themselves into a Committee of the whole with the Governor and Council to take into consideration the several petitions from the inhabitants of Cambridge, Campden, Granville, Skeensborough &c.⁴—[New York towns.]

⁴ Councillors Throop and Emmons were joined.

⁴ Three of these petitions are preserved in the Secretary of State's office. The following is the petition of inhabitants of Granville. It is more forcible than elegant.

To Tho^s. Chittenden Esq^r. Cap^t. General Gov^r. and Commander in Chief in and over the State of Vermont.

this petition of the Subscribers Inhabitants of the town of Granvill in the County of Charlottee and State afore said humble Shueth that your Excellency[']s humble petitioners are fully Sensable that the Extent [of] Jurisdiction of Said State includes us and we Dear'y feel the Sad Consequence of Not Being Enexed to Said State of Vermont for Reasons that ever since the year 1777 we have been Left without any provition for defence against the Merciless Indevations [invasions] of our unnatiel Enemy and we Being a frontier town to the Northward but Ever Called upon to Raise our Equl Dotto [quota] of men year by year and [who have been] ever Stationed fair [far] below us—and whereas the Right and Lawfull Jurisdiction of the State of Vermont Extend to the west of us we your Excellency[']s humble petitioners Begeth that your Excellency would Except of us as true and faithfull Subjects to the afore Said State of Vermont and adopt some Mesher

The Committee of the whole having adjourned—The House formed and the Speaker resumed the Chair.

WEDNESDAY April 11th. 1781.¹

Agreeable to the order of the day the House formed themselves into a Committee of the whole with the Governor and Council. Said Committee having dissolved, the speaker resumed the chair.

The Committee of the whole made the following report of a Subcommittee. viz.

“To the Grand Committee consisting of his Excellency the Governor, the hon^{ble} the Council and the General Assembly.

“Your Committee to whom was referred the consideration of the several petitions and letters from the inhabitants of Granville, Cambridge, &c. requesting this State to exercise jurisdiction over them for the reasons therein specified, beg leave to report

“That the Legislature of this State do recommend to the people inhabiting that part of the former government over which Gov^r. Philip Skeene was to preside, to which this Legislature at their session in Feb^y. last laid a jurisdictional claim, to appoint members to attend a Convention at Cambridge [N. Y.] the second Wednesday of May next; that the Legislature of this State appoint a Committee to meet said Convention at said time and place: that said Convention and Committee take into consideration the defence of the frontiers, and if they can mutually agree on articles of Union that then such Convention proceed to resolve to raise their quota of men for the defence of the frontiers, with a proper proportion of officers, which shall be returned to the Board of War and commissioned in the same manner that the troops heretofore ordered to be raised for the present defence of this State are and do duty in the same manner: that in case said Convention and Committee do agree on whearby we may be Better Governed, Agreeable to the Ruels and Laws of the Constitution of the Aforesaid State of Vermont.

Your Excellency[’s] Humble petitioners Intreat your Gracious attention to this our Humble petition As we in duty Bound will Ever pray

Granvill March 28th 1781

[Signed by Isaac Bennett and one hundred and seven other persons.]

The petitions of Lieut. John Patterson and thirty-seven other citizens of Camden, and of John Austin and seventy-nine others of Cambridge, set forth as reasons for annexation to Vermont that “the Government of New York have neglected guarding our Northern frontier;” that, aided by the militia of Vermont, a force sufficient for defence could be raised in case of emergency; and that the territory had been formerly embraced in “a government” “over which Gov^r. Skeen was to have presided.”—See Vermont State Papers, (manuscript,) Vol. 17; being Petitions, Vol. 1, 1777–87, pp. 39, 40 and 44.

On the return of these towns to their allegiance to New York, in 1782, their conduct in joining Vermont was excused by allegations of the neglect or inability of New York to protect them, which were even more emphatic than the above.—See Documentary History of New York, Vol. 4, pp. 605, 606. For other evidence of the weakness of New York at this period, see Early History of Vermont, pp. 341–344; and Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, pp. 49–55.

MONDAY April 16th. 1781.

Resolved that this Assembly be and is hereby adjourned until the second Wednesday of June next then to meet at Bennington.

The adjournment was to the 13th of June, but a quorum was not in attendance until the afternoon of the 15th, when the following occurred:

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF VERMONT, June 15, 1781.

The representatives of the western District informed this House in writing that they were ready to take their seats according to the Articles of Union, &c.

The Committee, who was appointed to treat with the Convention holden at Cambridge in June [May] last reported the following articles, viz.

“Articles of Union proposed by the Convention composed of representatives from the several districts of Hoosack, Scorticook, Cambridge, Saratoga, Upper-White-Creek, Black-Creek, Granville, Skeensborough, Greenfield, Kingsbury, Fort Edward and Little Hoosack, convened at Cambridge aforesaid the 9th day of May 1781, and by several adjournments to the 15th of the same month inclusive.

“ARTICLE 1st. That the district or tract of land lying north of a line being extended from the north line of the Massachusetts to Hudson’s River, and east of said river and south of latitude 45, as comprehended in the late jurisdictional claim by the Legislature of the State of Vermont, be considered as part of said state, and the inhabitants thereof as free citizens.

“ANSWER.—Agreed to by the Committee of the Legislature of the State of Vermont.

“ARTICLE 2^d. That the whole military force of the State of Vermont (as occasion may require) shall be exerted in our defence, as free Citizens, against any insurrection, invasion or incursion whatsoever; but especially against the common Enemy.

“ANS.—Agreed to.

“ARTICLE 3^d. That application be made by the Legislature of the state of Vermont to the Congress of the United States to be admitted with them as soon as circumstances will admit.

“ANS.—Agreed to.

“ART. 4th. That as the people within the aforesaid late claim have been called upon and have paid a considerable part of the Continental taxes into the treasury of the State of New-York, they shall have credit for the same in case the State of Vermont at some future period should be called upon to pay their proportion of money emitted by Congress.

“ANS.—Agreed to, provided the services done by the state of Vermont in the present war be included.

“REPLY OF CONVENTION.—Agreed to, provided the expence of said district in the present war be likewise included.

“ARTICLE 5th. That all actions depending within the late claim shall be transferred in the situation they shall be in at the time of completing the union to courts that may be then forthwith erected under the Authority of Vermont, without cost to the parties other than would have accrued had they been terminated in courts under the jurisdiction of the State of New-York.

¹ Mr. Curtis was excused and John W. Dana of Pomfret was appointed in his place.

“ANS.—Agreed to.

“ART. 6th. That the change of jurisdiction shall not be understood to effect, [affect,] or alienate, private property.

“ANS.—Agreed to.

“Articles of union proposed by the Legislature of the State of Vermont.

“ART. 1st. That the Independence of the State of Vermont be held sacred, and that no member of the Legislature shall give his vote or otherwise use his endeavours to obtain any act or resolution of Assembly that shall endanger the existence, independence, or well being of said State by referring its independency to the arbitrament of any power.

“ANSWER.—Agreed to by Convention.

“ARTICLE 2^d. That whenever this State becomes united with the American states and there shall then be any disputes between this and any of the United States respecting boundary lines, the Legislature of the State of Vermont will then (as they have ever proposed) submit to Congress or such other tribunal as may be mutually agreed upon for the settlement of any such disputes.

“ANS.—Agreed to.

“The foregoing articles were severally mutually agreed to by the Convention and Committee at Cambridge the 15th May 1781.

“Attest,

JOHN ROGERS, Chairman of Convention.

MOSES ROBINSON, Chairman of Committee.”

The aforesaid Articles were read and after some debate

Resolved that this House form themselves into a Committee of the whole with the Governor and Council to take the aforesaid Articles under consideration. The Committee of the whole having dissolved, the House formed themselves, and the Speaker resumed the Chair—

And after some time spent in debating on the said report it was referred until tomorrow morning, for further consideration.

A declaration of the Inhabitants of the western District, giving their reasons for disavowing allegiance to the State of New-York, with their disavowal, was read.

Adjourned until to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

SATURDAY, June 16th 1781.

Met, according to adjournment.

The House again took up the consideration of the Articles of Union, agreed on between the Committee appointed to treat with the Cambridge Convention, and said Convention, and after some debate the question was put—whether this House would approve of said articles, as agreed between said Committee and Convention? It passed in the affirmative.

The yeas and nays on the question being requested by Mr. Woodward, and the question being put whether the yeas and nays should be taken—passed in the affirmative, and they are as follows, viz.

YEAS 53.¹—Mr. Barber Mr. Briggs Mr. S. Robinson Mr. Olin Mr. Ward 1st Mr. Walbridge Mr. Lyon Mr. Ormsby, Mr. Powell Mr. Bartlet Col. Strong Mr. Underhill Mr. Harmon Mr. Pearl Mr. Everest Mr. Moss Mr. Ward 2^d Mr. Rowley Mr. Gage Mr. Speaker [Porter,] Mr. Bingham Mr. J. Smith Mr. B. [Six Vermonters in the negative.]

Resolved that a Committee of three be appointed to wait on the members returned from the Western District to sit in this Assembly and inform them that this House are ready to receive them as members of this House upon their producing their several appointments &c.—The members chosen Mr. S. Robinson, Mr. Lyon and Mr. Harris.

The following are the several members chosen to Represent the Western District and were introduced by the aforesaid Committee and produced their Credentials which were read and approved, viz.—

MONDAY, June 18th. 1781.²

Resolved that a Committee of three to join a Committee from the Council be appointed to arrange the civil and military departments in the Western Territory lately united to this State and make Report.—The members chosen Mr. Warren [of Greenfield, N. Y.,] Mr. Whiteside of Cambridge, N. Y.,] and Mr. S. Robinson, [Samuel of Bennington.]

Resolved that the Governor and Council be and they are hereby requested to join this House in a Committee of the whole to morrow morning nine o'clock to take under consideration proper measures for informing the Congress of the United States of the political situation of Vermont &c.

Resolved that an inquiry be made into the grounds of the report of a treaty with Canada &c. to morrow morning when the Committee of the whole meet.³

The Committee of the Whole met on the 19th and after consultation adjourned to the 22d. On the 20th the committee appointed by the Assembly to arrange the civil and military affairs of the Western District made a report, annexing so much of the District as was in Albany county to the county of Bennington, and so much as was in Charlotte county to the county of Rutland; dividing the militia in four regiments and annexing them to the first brigade; providing for the election of magistrates and town officers, and also of militia officers—all for the time being; which report was accepted.

³ The report of the committee indicates nothing on this subject; but an inquiry was made, and Ira Allen contrived a report so ingeniously as to satisfy all parties.—See Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, pp. 133–135 and 142.

FRIDAY June 22^d. 1781.

The House formed themselves into a Committee of the whole with the Governor and Council agreeable to their adjournment.

The Committee of the whole having dissolved, the House formed and the Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Committee of the whole made the following Report of a Sub Committee viz.—

“To the Grand Committee consisting of Governor, Council and Assembly—

“Your Committee appointed to prepare a draught to send to Congress to inform them of the political situation of this State &c. Beg leave to recommend,

“That an Annunciation of the late extention of the boundaries of this State with some of the capital reasons for such extention be transmitted to adjacent states.

“That three delegates be appointed to repair to Congress with full powers to propose to and receive from them terms for an union of this with the United States—and to transact any other matters at Congress which may be necessary for the welfare of this State—such terms of union or other treaty agreed on by them to be subject to the ratification of the Legislature of this State previous to their establishment—such delegates to give Congress whatever information they may desire of the political situation of this State—And that they be vested with full and ample powers to take seats in Congress as Delegates from this State when terms of union shall be agreed on and ratified as before mentioned. Two delegates to be nominated by the members within the ancient limits of the state, and two by the members from each newly added territory.

“Which is humbly submitted by

JONAS FAY Ch^m.

“Bennington June 22^d. 1781.”

“IN GRAND COMMITTEE June 22^d. 1 81.

“The aforesaid Report was read by paragraphs and approved.

“Attest

JOSEPH FAY, Clerk.”

The aforesaid Report was read and accepted.

Resolved that this House will proceed agreeable to the aforesaid Report to choose Delegates to wait on Congress &c.

Ordered that the members of the Districts proceed immediately to bring in their nomination agreeable to said Report—And the following Nomination was returned by them viz.—

Middle District	JONAS FAY } IRA ALLEN }	Esquires.
Eastern District	BEZALEEL WOODWARD } ELISHA PAYNE }	Esquires.
Western District	JONAS FAY } IRA ALLEN }	Esquires.

The ballots being taken the Hon^{ble} Jonas Fay and Ira Allen Esquires and Bezaleel Woodward Esq^r. were Elected Delegates as aforesaid.

Resolved that a Committee of three to join a Committee from the Council be appointed to prepare the ANNUNCIATION to send the adjacent States; and make Report.—The members chosen Mr. Woodward, Mr. Lyon and Mr. Whiteside.

Resolved that a committee of five to join a Committee from the Council be appointed to prepare instructions for the members appointed to wait on Congress &c.—The members chosen Mr. Jones [probably Daniel

Jones of Hinsdale, N. H.,¹ Mr. Phelps [Davenport of Orford, N. H.] Mr. Giles [Benjamin of Newport, N. H.] Mr. Walbridge [of Bennington,]² and Mr. Webb, [Joshua of Rockingham.]

Resolved that a Committee of three be appointed to run the South line of this State from the southwest corner of Pownal to Hudson's River.—The members chosen Mr. S. Robinson, Mr. Caldwell [of Cambridge, N. Y.,] and Mr. Barber, [Elisha of Pownal.]

On the 25th of June the committee appointed to draw up instructions to the delegates to Congress, reported in the language of the report of the committee of the whole on that subject; also a resolution desiring the Governor to commission them; and the instructions and resolutions were adopted. July 10, Gov. Chittenden delivered the commission in substantially the words of the report of the committee of the whole.—See commission in proceedings of Congress of Aug. 17 1781, post.

WEDNESDAY June 27th. 1781.

An Annunciation of the extention of the boundaries of this State was read and agreed to.³

Ordered, that his Excellency the Governor be desired to transmit copies of the annunciation to all the United States.

Resolved that the delegates appointed to repair to the American Congress be and they are hereby directed to set off on the business of their appointment by the first day of August next.

THURSDAY June 28th. 1781.

Resolved that Jonas Fay, Ira Allen, and Bezaleel Woodward Esquires, appointed Delegates to repair to Congress, be impowered to draw on the Treasurer of this State for such sum or sums of money as may be necessary to enable them to discharge their commission to Congress agreeable to the orders of this House—and that an order on the Treasurer issue accordingly signed by his Excellency the Governor, and that they be accountable for such sums as they shall receive.

ACTS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY, JUNE 1781, FOR THE ORGANIZATION OF THE WESTERN DISTRICT.

AN ACT for the purpose of forming the Western Territory, lately taken into Union with this State, into Townships, and for annexing it to the Counties of Bennington and Rutland.

Whereas it is found necessary, for the purposes of representation, and for exercising civil government, that the inhabited part of the following described district, viz.—Beginning at the north-west corner of Williamstown,¹ and extending west, ten degrees north, to the centre of the deepest channel of the waters of Hudson's River; then up said river, and extending through the centre of the deepest channel thereof, to the head thereof; thence north, by the needle of the compass, to the latitude forty-five—(lately taken into union with this State) be divided into townships, with the usual incorporate privileges; and that the said district be annexed to said counties. Therefore,

Be it enacted, &c. that the districts of land, in said territory, commonly known by the names of Hosack, Cambridge, White-Creek, alias New-Perth, Black-Creek, Skeensborough, Kingsbury, Scotch-Patent, alias Argyle, and Fort Edward, be, and they are hereby incorporated, each of them, into a distinct township, and to be severally known and distinguished by the aforesaid names respectively; and are hereby vested with all the privileges and immunities, which other towns within this State do of right exercise and enjoy.

Be it further enacted, that the tract of land within the said territory, lying west of, and adjoining to, Pownal, and north of the south line of said territory, and west of a line extended from the east line of the tract of land known by the name of Scorticook district, and south of Hosack district, be and is hereby incorporated into a township, by the name of Little-Hosack; and that the tract of land, lying bounded west on the north river, south on the south line of said territory, north on the tract of land, commonly called Scorticook district, and east on Little-Hosack, together with the district of land, commonly known by the name of the district of Scorticook, be and is hereby incorporated into a township, by the name of Scorticook; and that such part of the tract of land, known by the name of the district of Saratoga, as is included in said territory, be and is hereby incorporated into a township, by the name of Saratoga-East; and that the tract of land, lying west of, and adjoining to, Pollet, and north of, and adjoining to, Black-Creek, and westerly on Kingsbury and Skeensborough, be and is hereby incorporated into a township, by the name of South-Granville; and that the tract of land, north of said South-Granville, as far north as the west-line of the township of Wells extends, be and is hereby incorporated into a township, by the name of North Granville; and that the tract of land, northward of said North-Granville, extending north to the East-Bay, bounded eastward on Fairhaven, and westward on Skeensborough, be and is hereby incorporated into a township, by the name of Eastborough. And that each of said townships be and are hereby vested with the same privileges and immunities as other towns within this State do of right exercise and enjoy.

And be it enacted, that the townships of Little-Hosack, Hosack, Cambridge, Scorticook, and Saratoga-East, being that part of said territory which formerly belonged to Albany county, be and are hereby annexed to the county of Bennington; and that all the remaining part of the aforesaid townships, be and are hereby annexed to the county of Rutland.

AN ACT directing the holding Town Meetings in the Western Territory lately taken into Union with this State, and directing the Listers in said Territory in their Office and Duty.

Whereas, for the purpose of civil government, it is found necessary that the inhabitants of the towns lately formed in the western territory, lately taken into union with this State, be directed and empowered to hold town meetings, and choose the town officers necessary for the present year.

Therefore,

Be it enacted, &c. that the inhabitants of each of the respective towns, formed and incorporated by this Assembly, in said territory, be, and they are hereby authorised and impowered to hold town meetings in their respective towns, at such time in the month of July next, and at such places as usual, or most convenient in their respective towns, as the persons hereafter impowered to warn such meetings shall direct; and to appoint such officers at their said meetings, as other towns, in this State, by law, are directed and impowered to choose, in their annual March meetings: which officers, when sworn to the faithful discharge of their office, shall be, and they are hereby impowered to execute such office as they are appointed to, as other officers of the like kind, in the other parts of this State are.

And it is hereby recommended to the inhabitants of each of the said towns, at their said meeting, to choose one or two meet persons for justices of the peace in and for the county to which they belong, and make return to the Governor and Council, of such choice, in order that such persons be appointed and commissioned, in case they are approved of by them.

Be it further enacted, that the persons hereafter named, be, and they are hereby impowered to warn town meetings in the towns to which they respectively belong; that is to say,—Capt. William Sheppard, for Scorticook; Mr. Thomas Smith, for Saratoga; Mr. Stutson Benson, for Hosack; Col. Joseph Caldwell, for Cambridge; Mr. Benjamin Randal, for Little-Hosack; Capt. Solomon Brown, for White-Creek, alias New-Perth; Capt. Aaron Osgood, for Black-Creek; Capt. David Blakesley, for South-Granville; Capt. John Grover, for North-Granville; Mr. James Burroughs, for Skeensborough; Mr. Lemuel Hide, for East-Borough; Mr. Gilbert Harris, for Kingsbury; Capt. Batty, for Scotch-Patent, alias Argyle; Mr. Daniel Paine, for Fort-Edward.

And whereas the time the law directs that the inhabitants of the respective towns in this State be warned to give in the list of their polls and rateable estate, is now elapsed, and there is a necessity of the said lists being regularly taken in the towns in the said territory:

Therefore,

Be it enacted, that the listers chosen in the respective towns in the territory aforesaid, be, and they are hereby authorised, for the present year, to warn all the inhabitants of their respective towns, some time in the month of July, to give in, to them, their respective lists, according to law, by the 15th day of August next, of all their rateable polls and estate they were possessed of on the twentieth day of June; which list shall be inspected by said listers, and returned to the General Assembly, agreeable to the law of this State.

And the said listers shall govern themselves in their said office, according to said law, in all respects, the times therein mentioned only excepted.

AN ACT to impower Heads of Classes in the Western District to tax the Members of said Class, &c.

Whereas sundry persons in the western district, have been appointed heads of classes, by the authority of the State of New-York; in consequence of which appointment, they have engaged, and are further to engage, sundry persons in the service of this and the United States; to some of whom they have given their obligations promissory, for their county; which heads of classes are, by a law of the State of New-York, vested with authority to levy a tax on the several members of each class, for the payment of such sum or sums of money as have been, or shall, from time to time, be found necessary by such heads of classes, to be paid or engaged to be paid, for such man or men, as shall, at any time, be called for from such class. Therefore,

Be it enacted, &c. that each and every such head of classes be, and they are hereby authorised with full power and authority, to call on the several members of their classes for their proportion of such sum or sums; and in case of neglect or refusal, to proceed against them as the law directs in case of debt; and such men so raised be directed forthwith to join a company in this State.

PROCLAMATION OF GOV. CHITTENDEN, JULY 18, 1781.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

THOMAS CHITTENDEN, ESQUIRE,

Captain-General, Governor and Commander in Chief, in and over the State of VERMONT.

A P R O C L A M A T I O N .¹

WHEREAS the Legislature of this State, at their Session in June last, for the reasons hereafter exhibited, did extend their Claim of Jurisdiction from the North-West corner of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Westerly in the same Direction with the North Line of said Commonwealth, until it reaches the deepest channel of Hudson's River; thence running Northerly in the deepest Channel of said River, to the Source thereof, and from thence a due North Direction to Latitude 45° North (or the southern Boundary of the Province of Quebec.)

AND whereas no Part of the Lands contained in said Claim, were ever included in any original Charter from the Crown of Great Britain to the Government of New-York, but were known to be extra-provincial Lands, without the Limits of any of the chartered Colonies, and annexed to the former Government of New-York, merely by the Decree of the Crown, manifested in its Commissions to the respective Governors of New-York: which Jurisdiction in its own nature became null and void in Consequence of the Declaration of Independence by the United States, and the Annihilation of Kingly Power in America. And in consequence of a subsequent Commission from the same royal Authority to Governor Philip Skeene, which vested him with Powers of Jurisdiction over the same Territory, and which on the Position of the Validity of royal Traditions and Boundaries, would fatally operate against the Claim of the State of New-York. And although there may have been what some People call a mutual Association and Connection between the Inhabitants included in said Claim, and the State of New-York since the Declaration of Independence, yet the Nature of such Allegiance must be founded on a reciprocal Protection; for Government and Protection are by Nature so connected together, that the one cannot exist indepen-

AND whereas the Government of New York, for a Number of Years, have been very deficient in succoring, defending or protecting the Citizens inhabiting the said claimed Territory, and of late have wholly abandoned them to the Ravages of the common enemy. And whereas this State have been their main Support and Protection for several years last past, and have lately entered into a governmental League and Combination with them, for the mutual Happiness and Security of each other, under the same Constitution and Code of Laws; being urged thereto by the Refusal of the Government of New-York to unite with this Government for their mutual Defense, and from the local Situation of both to the Waters of Lake Champlain, and the British Government of Canada, from whence a powerful Force can suddenly invade this State including its late Western Union.

AND whereas Commissions both civil and military have been lately issued from the supreme Authority of this State to Persons chosen, agreeable to the Laws and Customs thereof, in the several Districts and Corporations within the Limits of the said western Claim of Jurisdiction: I HAVE therefore thought fit, by and with the Advice of my Council, to issue this Proclamation, and do hereby strictly require, charge and command all Persons of whatever Quality or Denomination residing within the said Western Claim of Jurisdiction, to take due Notice of the Laws and Orders of this State, and govern themselves accordingly, on Pain of incurring the Penalties therein contained.

AND I do hereby further strictly require and command all Magistrates, Justices of the Peace, Sheriffs, Constables, and all other civil, and all military Officers to be active and vigilant in executing the Laws aforesaid, without Partiality.

Given under my Hand, and the Seal of this State, at Arlington, this 18th Day of July, A. D. 1781, and in the 5th
Year of the Independence of this State.

PROCEEDINGS IN CONGRESS RELATING TO VERMONT—JULY 19 TO
AUG. 20, 1781.¹

July 9 1781, the following letter was referred by Congress to a committee consisting of Mr. Sherman of Connecticut, Mr. McKean of Delaware, Mr. Carroll of Maryland, Mr. Varnum of Rhode Island, and Mr. Madison of Virginia:

¹In the interim, between the proceedings in Congress in Sept. 1780 and July 1781,—to wit, March 1 1781—the Confederation was completed by the accession of Maryland; and on the same day New York, by its delegates in Congress, relinquished to the United States its claim to lands west of its present boundary. Of this claim Mr. MADISON said:—"The claim of New York is very extensive, but her title very flimsy. She urges it more with the hope of obtaining some advantage or credit by its cession, than ever of maintaining it. If the cession should be

Gentlemen,—Enclosed you have copies of three petitions from different towns in the county of Cheshire, by which you will see the embarrassed situation we are in, occasioned by the dispute relative to the New Hampshire Grants not being settled.

New Hampshire flattered herself that dispute would have been long since adjusted by Congress, and have been at great expense in sending agents to Philadelphia for that purpose. The amazing unexpected delay therein has been attended with the greatest mischief to the United States in general, and to the State of New Hampshire in particular. It has given an opportunity to many disaffected persons, who are the principal leaders in the disturbances, to do much injury, and who, it is said, and not without foundation, have entered into a negotiation with the enemy. In short, New Hampshire is brought into such a dilemma, and the Government thrown into such confusion by this delay in Congress, that it is impossible for her to comply with the requisitions of Congress, to any great degree, while this dispute remains unsettled; and it is in vain for them to expect it of her, as no supplies of men, money or provision can be collected at present from more than $\frac{1}{3}$ rd even of that part of the state which lies east of Connecticut River, and unless Congress brings matters to an immediate issue, we cannot tell how far the contagion may run, but very much fear that the state will be very soon ruined, in a great measure, and not able to contribute farther towards the war. Therefore you are directed to lay this dispatch before Congress as soon as may be, and earnestly request that they would immediately take the matter under consideration, and make a final decision thereon without any further delay, as it is of much greater consequence than can be described. I am, gentlemen, your most humble servant, accepted, and the affair of Vermont terminated, as these are the only ties which unite her with the southern states, she will immediately connect her policy with that of the eastern states, as far at least as the remains of former prejudices will permit."—See Madison Papers, Vol. I, p. 121; and Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, pp. 268-9.

¹ Haldimand Papers, in Vt. Hist. Soc. Coll., Vol. I, p. 137.

² Aug. 13 1781, Prest. Weare wrote to Gen. Washington on the same subject as follows:

Had it not been for this unaccountable and altogether unexpected destruction of our currency, [by the people of Massachusetts refusing to take continental bills,] the only one we had, I doubt not we should have been able to carry the acts [for completing the quota of New Hampshire in the continental army] fully into effect, excepting in that part which, as I mentioned in my letter of the 23d of July, under pretence of joining what they call Vermont, have refused to raise men or furnish supplies of any kind, so that there will be a deficiency on that account of more than quarter part, both of men and supplies, until Congress, before whom the matter lies, shall determine upon it.—Correspondence of the Revolution, Letters to Washington, Vol. VIII, p. 385.

From a letter of Hon. John Sullivan, in Congress, to President Weare, (in the N. H. Papers on the Vermont Controversy.) July 10 1781, it seems that several documents were presented to Congress on the 9th. These were in the lost Stevens Papers, and are named in the Index to the Stevens Papers, in connection with Weare's and Sullivan's letters, as follows:

Instructions to delegates in Congress to prosecute their claims as to Vermont, March 31st 1781.

Walpole petition opposed to union with Vermont.

Westmoreland petition as to Vermont.

Swanzy petition do. do.

July 20, according to one memorandum, and July 31 according to another,¹ the committee above named submitted a report, which opened with an acknowledgment of the zealous exertions of New Hampshire and New York in the common cause, and a conviction that they would not ever suffer it to languish by their means; recited briefly the case of Vermont, describing its boundaries as they existed previous to the Unions, and the relinquishment by Massachusetts of her claim on condition that a like relinquishment be made by New Hampshire and New York, and concluded with the following resolutions:

Resolved that it be recommended to the states of New Hampshire and New York respectively to declare the inhabitants of the district called Vermont, bounded as aforesaid, unamenable to any jurisdiction under their authority and to renounce all territorial claims thereto, but to refer to Congress to determine on what terms this concession shall take effect, in case Congress shall recognize the independence of the said people of Vermont.

Resolved that Congress will consider all the lands of New Hampshire and New York respectively, lying without the limits of Vermont aforesaid, as coming within the actual guarantee of territory contained in the articles of confederation: and that the United States will accordingly guarantee such lands and the jurisdiction over the same against any claims or encroachments from the inhabitants of Vermont aforesaid.

Gov. HALL suggested that this report was prepared in the absence of the delegates of New York, and in the expectation that both New Hampshire and New York would assent to its recommendation, and so end the encroachments of Vermont upon their territory. But, as will be seen, the delegates of New York resumed their seats on the 31st of July, and on the 3d of August presented a memorial of that state persisting in its claims to Vermont; whereupon the above named report was recommended.

¹The appointment of the committee and its report are not noted in Folwell's edition of the Journals of Congress, and the statements made here are from notes taken by Gov. HALL from the Committee Books of the Continental Congress in the State Department at Washington.—See H. HALL'S Early History, pp. 350, 351.

TUESDAY, July 31, 1781.¹

Mr. Duane and Mr. L'Hommedieu, two delegates for the state of New York, attended.

WEDNESDAY, August 1, 1781.

A motion was made by Mr. Varnum, seconded by Mr. L'Hommedieu, that a committee be appointed to enquire into the facts mentioned in the intercepted letter of the 7th February last, from lord George Germain to sir Henry Clinton, and report the result of their enquiries to Congress.

Mr. Bland moved to postpone this motion, which failed for want of the vote of a majority of the States. Yeas—New-Hampshire, New Jersey, Delaware, Virginia, South Carolina; nays—Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York; divided, Maryland; not counted one member yea for North Carolina, and one member nay for Georgia. The question to agree to the motion was also lost for the same reason: yeas, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Maryland, and Virginia; nays—New Hampshire, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Delaware, and South Carolina; one vote on each side from North Carolina and Georgia not counted.²

This dispatch, and the encroachments of Vermont on New Hampshire and New York, thoroughly alarmed Congress and contributed essentially to the pledge in the resolutions of the 7th and 20th of August on which the final acknowledgment of the independence of the State was founded. This appears from the following:

WHITEHALL, [London,] February 7, 1781.

The return of the people of Vermont to their allegiance, is an event of the utmost importance to the king's affairs, and at this time, if the French and Washington really meditate an irruption into Canada, may be considered as opposing an insurmountable bar to the attempt.* General Haldimand, who has the same instructions with you to draw over these people, and give them support, will, I doubt not, push up a body of troops, to act in conjunction with them, to secure all the avenues through their country into Canada; and when the season admits, take possession of the upper parts of the Hudson and Connecticut Rivers, and cut off the communication between Albany and the Mohawk country. How far they may be able to extend themselves southward, or eastward, must depend on their numbers, and the disposition of the inhabitants; but, if Albany should take part with them, the inducement to attempt to open a communication with them by Hudson's river will appear irresistible to people here.—Vt. Hist. Soc. Col., Vol. II, p. 93.

* Washington had entertained such a design at times from September 1778 to December 1779.—Life and Writings, Vol. VI, pp. 56, 423. Vermont was to aid in this expedition.—See Vol. I, p. 217.

sentation from New York.¹ The plan is, which is a report of a committee, to recommend it to New York and New Hampshire to relinquish their jurisdiction, or to consult on the propriety of doing it, to the state of Vermont, according to her former claims—the Massachusetts having already passed a law for that purpose, provided the other states would do the same. This report being the order of the day was recommitted. This plan probably might in some degree exculpate congress from blame, and they might refer the sufferers to the state, who had voluntarily relinquished their jurisdiction, for compensation for their lands. 'Tis said a person from our state [New York] lately informed some members of congress that a majority of the assembly and a greater part of the senate were in favor of granting their independence. Probably this might have some effect.—Clinton Papers, No. 3862.

James Madison to Edmund Pendleton.

PHILADELPHIA, August 14, 1781.

Dear Sir:—The controversy relating to the district called Vermont, the inhabitants of which have for several years claimed and exercised the jurisdiction of an independent state, is at length put into a train of speedy decision. Notwithstanding the objections to such an event, there is no question but they will soon be established into a separate and federal state. A relinquishment made by Massachusetts of her claims; a despair of finally obtaining theirs on the part of New York and New Hampshire, the other claimants on whom these enterprising adventurers were making fresh encroachments; the latent support afforded them by the leading people of the New England states in general, from which they emigrated; the just ground of apprehension that their rulers were engaging in clandestine negotiations with the enemy; and lastly, perhaps, the jealous policy of some of the little states, which hope that such a precedent may engender a division of some of the large ones, are the circumstances which will determine the concurrence of congress in this affair."—See Early History, p. 346–353; Madison Papers, Vol. I, p. 96.

Referring to the intercepted dispatch, IRA ALLEN said:

This information had greater influence on the wisdom and virtue of Congress than all the exertions of Vermont in taking Ticonderoga, Crown Point, and the two divisions from General Buogoyne's army, or their petition to be admitted as a State in the general confederation, and offers to pay their proportion of the expenses of the war.—I. Allen's History, in Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. I, p. 429.

IN CONGRESS, FRIDAY, August 3, 1781.

A memorial of the delegates, as agents for the state of New-York, respecting the controverted jurisdiction of the district called the New Hampshire Grants, was read.

The memorial was as follows:

*Memorial of the Delegates of New York to Congress.*³

To the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The underwritten delegates for the state of New York have the honor, in obedience to an express instruction from the Legislature of the state of New York, to represent, that on the 24th of September, 1779, it was unanimously resolved by Congress that it be most earnestly recommended to the states of New Hampshire, Massachusetts and New York (among other things) forthwith to pass laws to refer to the decision of Congress all differences and disputes relative to jurisdiction over the district called the New Hampshire Grants, which they respectively had with the people of that district, so that Congress might proceed thereon on the first day of February then next, and Congress did thereby pledge their faith to carry into execution and support their determination and decision in the premises.

³ From the Haldimand Papers—furnished to Gen. H. by Ira Allen.

That Congress having declared it to be essential to the interests of the whole Confederation that all intestine dissensions be carefully avoided, and domestic peace and good order be maintained, it was further unanimously resolved: that it was the duty of the people of the district aforesaid who denied the jurisdiction of all the aforesaid states, to abstain in the meantime from exercising any power over any of the inhabitants of the said district who profess themselves to be citizens of, or to owe allegiance to, any or either of the said states, but that none of the towns either on the east or west side of Connecticut River were to be considered as included within the said district, but such as had heretofore joined in denying the jurisdiction of either of the said states, and had assumed a separate jurisdiction which they called the state of Vermont; and further, that in the opinion of Congress the three states aforesaid ought in the mean time to suspend executing their laws over any of the inhabitants of the said district, except such of them as professed allegiance to and confessed the jurisdiction of the same respectively; and further, that Congress would consider any violence committed against the tenor, true intent and meaning of that resolution as a breach of the peace of the Confederacy, which they were determined to keep and maintain. And it is further resolved unanimously, that in the opinion of Congress no unappropriated lands or estates which were or might be adjudged forfeited or confiscated, lying in the said district, ought, until the final decision of Congress in the premises, to be granted or sold. That in pursuance of the said recommendation the Legislature of the state of New York passed a law fully authorizing Congress (among other things) to hear and determine all differences and disputes relative to the jurisdiction between the state of New York and such of the inhabitants of that part of the said district which lies on the west side of Connecticut River as denied the jurisdiction of that state; and that the said decision being duly made and published, should be and remain final and conclusive against that state forever. That in conformity to the said resolution, law and at great expense, the state of New York made the necessary preparations for supporting their territorial rights, and similar steps were taken on the part of the state of New Hampshire. That on the 19th of September, '80, all the parties concerned in the said controversy (Massachusetts Bay excepted) attended, namely: the delegates and agents from the states of New Hampshire and New York respectively, Ira Allen and Stephen R. Bradley in behalf of the people of the Grants claiming a separate and independent jurisdiction, Luke Knowlton, agent in behalf of a number of towns within that part of the said district known by the name of the county of Cumberland, and Peter Olcot and Bezaleel Woodward, agents for the towns in the northern parts of the said district on both sides of the Connecticut River, and the delegates as agents for the state of New York, laid before Congress evidence with an intent to prove that the district known by the name of the New Hampshire Grants on the west side of the Connecticut River is within the limits of the state of New York; that the state of New Hampshire had acknowledged this, and that the people of the said district had been represented in the Legislature of New York since the year 1764, and submitted to the authority, jurisdiction and government of the Congress and Convention of the said state till late in the year 1777, and therefore have no right to a separate and independent jurisdiction. That on the 27th of the same month, all the parties being present except Messrs. Allen and Bradley, agents for the people of the Grants claiming a separate and independent jurisdiction, who, although duly notified, declined any further attendance, the agents of the state of New Hampshire proceeded to offer evidence tending to prove that the tract of country known by the name of New Hampshire Grants was within the state of New Hampshire, and that therefore the people inhabiting the said tract of country can have no right to a separate and independent jurisdiction. That Luke Knowlton, agent in behalf of part of the county of Cumberland, within the said district, and Peter Olcott and Bezaleel Woodward, agents from the towns in the northern parts of the New Hampshire Grants on both sides of Connecticut river, being respectively called upon and having nothing to add, and pressing Congress to come to a determination, withdrew. That the delegates of the state of New York have repeatedly entreated Congress to decide the matters in question respecting the claim of an independent state, set up by some of the inhabitants of the district aforesaid, but a decision hath hitherto been deferred. The underwritten delegates are further instructed to represent that the state of New York, in compliance with the resolutions of Congress before recited, have hitherto suspended the execution of their laws over any inhabitants of the said district, except such as professed allegiance to, and confessed the jurisdiction of, the same, and have refrained from granting any lands within the said district. The inhabitants who deny our jurisdiction, on the contrary, have strengthened their party by disposing of those lands, and exercising force to compel their neighbors, within the said district, who profess themselves to be citizens and to own allegiance to the state of New York, to submit to their authority, and in violation of the express resolutions of Congress, have passed acts to include with their assumed jurisdiction several considerable districts extending westward from the claim they set up at the time of passing the said resolution, to the middle of Hudson's River. That their high-handed encroachments have greatly interrupted the raising of levies and supplies within the state of New York for the support of the war, and must be productive of further weakness and disorder, and render the said state, already greatly exhausted and desolated, altogether unable to contribute to the common cause. From these weighty considerations the underwritten are expressly instructed by the Legislature of the state of New York to urge Congress, agreeable to their said resolutions and engagements, to decide the controversy so long subsisting respecting the claim of independent jurisdiction set up under the pretended state of Vermont, and to take measures in the meantime for restraining the encroachments of the said inhabitants, at least within the bounds which they themselves, till the late extraordinary extension, considered, represented and claimed as comprehending the New Hampshire Grants. The underwritten do therefore, by this public act, (which they pray may be received amongst the records of the United States,) make known the just expectations and earnest request of the Legislature of the state of New York, declaring their readiness to lay before such of the members of Congress as may be uninformed, satisfactory evidence of the title of New York to all that part of the controverted district which lies on the west side of Connecticut River.

Done at Philadelphia, in obedience to the express instruction of the Legislature of the State of New York, the 3d day of August, 1781, and in the sixth year of our Independence.

IN CONGRESS, TUESDAY, August 7, 1781.

Congress took into consideration the report of the committee, consisting of Mr. Sherman, Mr. McKean, Mr. Carroll, Mr. Varnum, Mr. Madison, to whom was recommended their report on a letter of the 20th June from the President of New Hampshire, together with a motion relative to the subject; and thereupon came to the following resolutions:

Whereas the states of New-Hampshire and New-York, have submitted to Congress the decision of the disputes between them and the people inhabiting the New-Hampshire Grants, on the west side of Connecticut river, called the state of Vermont, concerning their respective claims of jurisdiction over the said territory, and have been heard thereon; and whereas, the people aforesaid claim and exercise the powers of a sovereign independent state, and have requested to be admitted into the federal union of the United States of America: in order thereto, and that they may have an opportunity to be heard in vindication of their said claim:

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to confer with such person or persons, as may be appointed by the people residing on the New-Hampshire Grants, on the west side of Connecticut river, or by their representative body, respecting their claim to be an independent state, and on what terms it may be proper to admit them into the federal union of these states, in case the United States in Congress assembled, shall determine to recognize their independence, and thereof make report:

And it is hereby recommended to the people of the territory aforesaid, or their representative body, to appoint an agent or agents to repair immediately to Philadelphia, with full powers and instructions to confer with the said committee on the matters aforesaid, and on behalf of the said people, to agree upon and ratify terms and articles of union and confederation with the United States of America, in case they shall be admitted into the union; and the said committee are hereby instructed to give notice to the agents of the states of New-Hampshire and New-York, to be present at the conference aforesaid.

Resolved, That in case Congress shall recognize the independence of the said people of Vermont, they will consider all the lands belonging to New-Hampshire and New-York respectively, without the limits of Vermont aforesaid, as coming within the mutual guarantee of territory contained in the articles of confederation; and that the United States will accordingly guarantee such lands and the jurisdiction over the same, against any claims or encroachments from the inhabitants of Vermont aforesaid.¹

WEDNESDAY, August 8, 1781.

Congress proceeded to the election of a committee of five, to confer with such person or persons as may be appointed by the people residing on the New-Hampshire Grants, on the west side of Connecticut river, or by their representative body, respecting their claim to be an independent state, and on what terms it may be proper to admit them into the federal union of these states, in case the United States in Congress assembled, shall determine to recognize their independence:

FRIDAY, August 17, 1781.

Congress took into consideration a report of the committee appointed in pursuance of the resolution of the 7th, to confer with agents to be appointed by the people of the New-Hampshire Grants, on the west side of Connecticut river; and to whom was referred a letter from Jonas Fay, Ira Allen, and Bezaleel Woodward, wherein they represent, that the said J. Fay, I. Allen and B. Woodward, have produced to them a commission, under the hand of Thomas Chittenden Esq; empowering them among other things, to repair to the American Congress, and to propose to and receive from them terms of an union with the United States; whereupon,

Resolved, That it be an instruction to the committee to confer with the said Jonas Fay, Ira Allen and Bezaleel Woodward, on the subject of their mission.¹

with a verbal inquiry, whether the people of Vermont would be satisfied with the independence suggested by the resolutions, or really designed to join the enemy. Gov. Chittenden conversed freely on Vermont affairs with Capt. Heacock; assured him that the negotiation with Canada was to secure the state from invasion; that the people of Vermont were zealous supporters of national independence, and desired the admission of their state into the union; but that under no circumstances would they submit to the jurisdiction of New York: "that they would oppose this by force of arms, and would join with the British in Canada, rather than to submit to that government." Capt. Heacock was requested to report these declarations to Gen. Washington.—Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, p. 158.

Vermont Delegates to Committee of Congress.

To the Honorable Committee of Congress:

Whereas, the state of Vermont hath formed jurisdictional union with people inhabiting a district of land known by the name of New Hampshire Grants, east of Connecticut River, on apprehension that the said district does not of right belong to New Hampshire; also with a district 20 miles in breadth, lying west of the New Hampshire Grants, on apprehension that it does not of right belong to the state of New York, by means of which union it is impracticable for the people on the New Hampshire Grants, west of Connecticut River only, to perform any public act as a state, exclusive of the districts above mentioned, and that the claims of the people on the said districts to independence from the states of New Hampshire and New York respectively, may have a full and fair hearing, and that a final decision may be had thereon as soon as may be: Therefore, the subscribers, delegates from and in behalf of the state of Vermont, beg leave to propose the following as terms which appear to them necessary in order to a Federal union between that and the United States:

1st. That Vermont be recognized as an independent state, under the following description, viz: Beginning at the northwest corner of the state of Massachusetts, which is the northwest corner of the town of Williamstown, and from thence extending eastward in the north line of Massachusetts to the west bank of Connecticut River; thence up the river as it tends to the 45th degree of north latitude; thence west in said latitude line to the centre of Lake Champlain, (west of Missisquy Bay); thence southwardly in the deepest channel of the said Lake, as also the channels of the South and East Bays, to the head of the latter; thence up the deepest channel of Poultney River, and the west line of the town of Poultney; thence southward on the westward line of the seven-

Agreeable to a Resolution of the General Assembly of this State passed at their Session in June last, appointing You Delegates in behalf of this State to repair to the American Congress; with full powers to propose to and receive from them terms for an Union of this State with the United States, and to transact any other matters at Congress which may be necessary for the Welfare of this State: such terms of Union or other Treaty agreed on to be subject to the ratification of the Legislature of this State previous to their establishment, and You are to take Seats in Congress as Delegates in behalf of this State when terms of Union shall be agreed on and Ratified as aforementioned.

These are therefore to authorize and empower You, the said Jonas Fay, Ira Allen and Bezaleel Woodward, Esq^{rs}. or either two of you to attend on the Honorable the Congress of the United States of America as soon as may be, then and there to do and transact the business of your appointment.

Given under my hand and the seal of this State in the Council Chamber at Bennington this 10th day of July A. D. 1781, and in the fifth Year of the Independence of this State.

ral towns of Poultney, Wells, Pawlet, Ruport, Sandgate, Arlington, Shaftsbury, Bennington and Pownall, to the place of beginning.

2nd. That delegates to represent the state of Vermont in Congress be elected by the representatives of the freemen of the state, as it is now extended, until the several claims of New Hampshire and New York to the said districts be heard and determined.

3rd. That the several claims of New Hampshire and New York be determined as soon as may be, and agreeable to the mode prescribed by the Articles of Confederation for the decision of disputes between two or more states concerning boundary, jurisdiction, &c.

4th. That Vermont have the same right as any other state, on application to Congress, to have an hearing on the said disputes, and to be admitted in like manner by their agents (to be appointed for that purpose) as a party in support of the claim of the people within the said districts to independence from the said states of New Hampshire and New York respectively. In case that on trial the districts aforesaid shall [not] be found to belong of right to the states of New Hampshire and New York respectively, they shall be thenceforth considered as belonging to the jurisdiction of the state of Vermont.

PHILADELPHIA, 18th August, 1781.

Query 1st. Are the boundaries, set forth in the written propositions delivered in by the said agents, at this time, claimed by the State of Vermont, as the lines of jurisdiction, the same as contained in the resolution of Congress of the 7th of August instant?

Answer. They are the same, with the addition of part of the waters of Lake Champlain, for the benefit of trade &c.

Query 2d. What part do the people of Vermont mean to take, as to the past expences of the present war, and what aid do they propose to afford as to men and money, to the common defence?

Answer. Such proportion as shall be mutually judged equitable, after their admission to a seat in Congress, which has been several times officially proposed by agents on the part of Vermont.

Query 3d. What are the ideas of the people of Vermont relative to the claim of private property, under grants or patents from New-Hampshire, or New-York, previous to the present revolution?

Answer. Altho' the State of Vermont hath not, hitherto, authorized any court to take cognizance of such causes, as respect titles of lands, nevertheless, they have had, and still have it in contemplation to adopt such modes, as the circumstances, arising out of each case, may justify, without adhering to the strict rules of law.

Query 4th. What are the intentions of your constituents, in regard to the patents that were granted on conditions of settlement within a given time, and which have been prevented by the claims of the people of Vermont, and the present revolution?

Answer. No forfeitures have been taken by the state of Vermont, on any such grant, for non-performance of conditions of settlement, and we conceive it to be the intention of our constituents to grant a further reasonable time for fulfilling such conditions.

Query 5th. What are the number of inhabitants within the lines mentioned in their propositions above mentioned?

Answer. As the citizens of Vermont have not been lately numbered, we can therefore only estimate them at about thirty thousand, which we conceive to be nearly a true estimation.

Query 6th. What quantity of land is contained within the said bounds?

Answer. There has been no accurate survey of the state of Vermont, but we conceive it to contain about five million acres.

Query 7th. What applications have been made, either publicly or privately, by the enemies of the United States, or their adherents, to draw off the people of Vermont from their affection to the United States of America?

Answer. The honorable committee are possessed of copies of Bevy. Robinson's letters, enclosed in B. General Allen's letter of the 9th of March last, to the then President of Congress; and any private offers we cannot avouch for.

Query 8th. In case the enemy should attempt an invasion of the northern frontiers, what aid, as to men and provisions, could be raised in the State of Vermont, for the public defence, (you can suppose the invasion made in different quarters) and within what time?

Answer. The number of militia, within the lines herein limited, we suppose to consist of about seven thousand, in general well armed and accoutred, and have ever shown themselves spirited in case of alarms, &c. In regard to provisions, the country is fertile but new and considerable emigrations from other states to Vermont.—The Legislature, at their session, in October last, levied a tax on the inhabitants for provisions sufficient for victualling one thousand five hundred troops in the field for twelve months; and we are of opinion a larger store may be, in the same manner, collected, the ensuing autumn.

Of this interview IRA ALLEN gave other details in the following account:

A Committee of Congress was appointed to meet and agree with the Agents of Vermont, respecting lines and boundaries; they accordingly met. The eastern boundary line [Connecticut river] proposed by the [delegates of Vermont to the] Committee of Congress was not disputed, but the western boundary afforded a tedious dispute. Mr. James Duane, and Colonel Allen, managed the controversy, both being greatly interested in the lands liable to be affected by the boundary line. Different proposals had been made, without producing any effect, and the Committee often adjourned for deliberation, and went out of the Committee-room in Congress. At length Colonel Allen drew an abstruse line that would answer Vermont; gave it to the late Roger Shearman, Esq. member for Connecticut, just as Congress were impatient to adjourn, praying him to redraft it, and propose it as his own, which he complied with, and laid it before Congress, which was immediately received and passed into a resolve, and Congress adjourned, before Mr. Duane properly understood the motion, or rather, the operation of such proposed line, which added to Vermont beyond the original claim of New Hampshire, (which was a line from the north-west corner of the Massachusetts's north, ten degrees east, in the west line of the towns of Pownal, Bennington, Shaftsbury, &c.) the towns of Fairhaven, Benson, South Hero, North Hero, and Isle of Mott, and several other Islands, and put out of dispute Alburg, and some other lands, as also the navigation of Lake Champlain. Had the Legislature of Vermont described Pawlet River, instead of Poultney River, in their act of relinquishment of jurisdiction, they would have held a much larger tract, and been equally consistent with the resolve of Congress, and if disputes arose respecting said line, they could not have been used against Vermont, as her Agents did not consent to them.—I. Allen's History, in Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. I, p. 432.

IN CONGRESS, MONDAY, August 20, 1781.

The committee appointed to confer with J. Fay, I. Allen and B. Woodward, delivered in a report, which was taken into consideration; and, thereupon, Congress came to the following resolution:

It being the fixed purpose of Congress to adhere to the guarantee to the States of New-Hampshire and New-York, contained in the resolutions of the 7th instant:

Resolved, That it be an indispensable preliminary to the recognition of the independence of the people inhabiting the territory called Vermont, and their admission into the federal union, that they explicitly relinquish all demands of lands or jurisdiction on the east side of the west bank of Connecticut river, and on the west side of a line beginning at the north-west corner of the state of Massachusetts, thence running twenty miles east of Hudson's river, so far as the said river runs north-easterly in its general course; then by the west bounds of the townships granted by the late government of New-Hampshire to the river running from South-Bay to Lake-Champlain, thence along the said river to Lake-Champlain, thence along the waters of Lake-Champlain to the latitude of forty-five degrees north excepting a neck of land between Missiskoy-Bay and the waters of Lake-Champlain.

So it was resolved in the affirmative.

It will be observed that New York only voted in the negative. From the affirmative vote of Mr. Livermore of N. H. the inference is that the instructions of New Hampshire of March 31 1781 were in harmony with those of the preceding January, on p. 274, ante.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF VERMONT, OCTOBER 1781, ON THE RESOLUTIONS OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 1781.

The deliberations and action of the legislature were mainly in a committee of both Houses, and for that reason the journals do not give an account in detail. Ira Allen stated in his history of Vermont that much difficulty was encountered on account of the conflicting interests growing out of the eastern and western unions; however, a result was reached on the 19th of October, when Jonas Fay of the Council, and Messrs. Ezra Stiles, Stephen R. Bradley, and John Barrett of the House, were appointed a committee to "prepare a Bill" agreeable to the report of the committee of the whole. A "bill," in the language of the record, meant an official statement of the action of the legislature. It was as follows:

[From Slade's State Papers.]

STATE OF VERMONT, CHARLESTOWN, October 16th, 1781.

The Governor and Council having joined the general assembly, in a committee of the whole, to take into consideration the report of the honorable Jonas Fay, Ira Allen and Bezaleel Woodward, Esquires, who were appointed by the Legislature of this State, in the month of June last, to repair to the American Congress, with powers to propose to, and receive from, them, terms for an union of this, with the United States, &c.

His Excellency THOMAS CHITTENDEN, Esquire, in the chair:

The said agents laid before the committee the following papers, which were read by the secretary in their order, viz.

1st and 2d. A copy of their letter to the President of Congress, of the 14th of August last, enclosing a duplicate of their commission.

3d. The resolutions of Congress, of the 7th and 8th of August last.

4th. Brigadier General Bellows, and associates, petition to New-Hampshire, 25th of May, 1781.

5th. Petition of the selectmen of Swanzy to New-Hampshire, June 9th, 1781.

6th. Honorable Mesheck Weare's letter, to be laid before Congress, dated 20th June, 1781.

7th. Messieurs Duane and Ezra L'Hommedieu's memorial and prayer to Congress, of the 3d day of August, 1781; together with Ira Allen and Stephen R. Bradley Esquire's remonstrance to Congress, dated September 22d, 1780.

8th. Resolve of Congress, dated 17th August, 1781.

9th. Written proposals to committee of Congress, dated August 18th, 1781.

10th. Questions proposed to the agents of Vermont by the committee of Congress, August 18th, 1781.

11th. The foregoing questions, with the answers annexed.

12th. Resolutions of Congress of the 20th August, 1781.

The further consideration of the report being referred, adjourned till to-morrow morning, nine o'clock.

October 17.

Met, according to adjournment.

The committee proceeded to the consideration of the resolutions of Congress, of the 20th day of August aforesaid, and other papers mentioned in the report of said agents; and, after some time spent thereon, resolved that, in the opinion of this committee, the Legislature cannot comply with the resolutions last referred to, without destroying the foundation of the present universal harmony and agreement that subsists in this state, and a violation of solemn compact entered into, by articles of union and confederation.

The further consideration of the report being postponed, adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

October 18.

The committee having resumed the further consideration of the said report:

Resolved, That, inasmuch as the resolutions of Congress of the 7th and 20th of August last, did, by no means, comport with, but entirely preclude, any propositions made by our agents; it is, therefore, the opinion of this committee, that the propositions made by our agents to the committee of Congress, on the 18th of August last, ought not, in future, to be considered as binding on the part of Vermont.

Resolved, That it be and is hereby recommended to the Legislature of this state, that their thanks be returned to their honourable agents, for their good services in behalf of this state, on the business of their late mission to the Congress of the United States of America.

And this committee recommend to the Legislature of this state, to remain firm in the principles on which the state of Vermont first assumed government; and to hold the articles of union which connect each part of the state with the other, inviolate; and, for the further information and satisfaction of the honourable the Congress, and the world, do recommend to the Legislature to publish the following articles, which respect the admission of Vermont into the federal union, viz.

ART. 1st. That the independence of the state of Vermont be held sacred, and that no member of the Legislature shall give his vote, or otherwise use his endeavours, to obtain any act or resolution of Assembly, that shall endanger the existence, independence and well being of said state, by referring its independency to the arbitration of any power.

ART. 2d. That whenever this state becomes united with the American States, and there shall then be any disputes between this and any of the United States, the Legislature of the state of Vermont will then (as they have ever proposed) submit to Congress, or such other tribunal as may be mutually agreed on, for the settlement of any such disputes.

And that the impartial world may be fully convinced of the good and laudable disposition of Vermont, and of her readiness to comply with any reasonable proposal, for the adjustment of the disputes, respecting boundary lines, between this and the neighbouring states of New-Hampshire and New-York, this committee further recommend to the Legislature to make the following proposals to the said states of New-Hampshire and New-York, respectively: that whereas, disputes have arisen between the states of New-Hampshire and Vermont, relative to jurisdictional boundary lines, &c. the Legislature of Vermont, being willing and desirous, as much as in them lies, to promote unity and good accord between the two states, do propose to the state of New-Hampshire, that all matters relating to the aforesaid dispute, shall be submitted to five, or more, judicious, unprejudiced persons, who shall be mutually agreed on, elected and chosen by a committee of Legislature, on the part of each state, respectively.

And that the states of New-Hampshire and Vermont do pledge their faith, each to the other, that the decision had, by the persons so elected, being made up in writing, signed by the President of such Commissioners, and delivered to the secretary of each state, respectively, shall be held sacredly binding on each of the said states of New-Hampshire and Vermont for ever.

And that proposals of the same tenor, be also made to the Legislature of New-York.

And this committee do further recommend, that nine persons be elected Commissioners, by the Legislature, on the part of Vermont, to treat with Commissioners to be elected on the part of New-Hampshire and New-York, respectively, for the adjusting the aforesaid jurisdictional boundary lines.

And that they be commissioned by his Excellency the Governor, and the faith of this state be by him pledged in behalf of the state, that the decision, thus had, shall, in future, be held as sacredly binding on the part of Vermont.

The committee further recommend to the Legislature, that the Proceedings of this committee, be officially transmitted to the Congress of the United States; and that they be enclosed in a letter, under the signature of his Excellency the Governor, and directed to the President of Congress.

And this committee do further advise the Legislature to recommend to the authority in every part of the state, to remain firm in the support of government, and the punctual execution of the laws, notwithstanding the various measures taken to create divisions and discord.

The commissioners chosen for the above purpose,—the honourable Elisha Paine, Jonas Fay, Ira Allen, and Peter Olcott, Esquires, Daniel Jones, Esquire, Colonel Gideon Warren, Phineas Whiteside, Esquire, Colonel Joseph Caldwell, and Ezra Stiles, Esquire.

Resolved, That it be an instruction to the said Commissioners, that they prepare, and make, the necessary defence in the premises, and that they introduce the said matters to New-Hampshire and New-York, in such way as to them shall appear best.

October 19, 1781.

Voted that this committee be dissolved.

To the Honorable Elisha Payne, Jonas Fay, Ira Allen, and Peter Olcott, Esq^{rs}; Daniel Jones Esq; Colonel Gideon Warren, Phinehas Whiteside, Esq; Colonel Joseph Caldwell and Ezra Stiles Esq;

GREETING.

Agreeable to a Resolution of the Governor, Council and House of Assembly at their Session held at Charlestown this Instant October, appointing you Commissioners for and in behalf of the STATE OF VERMONT to enter upon a Negotiation for the Settlement and Adjustment of the Boundary Lines, as well between the State of NEW HAMPSHIRE and VERMONT as between the State of NEW YORK and VERMONT agreeable to your Directions contained in the Resolution aforesaid.

THESE ARE THEREFORE, in the Name and by the Authority of the Freemen of the State of VERMONT, to authorize and amply empower you the said Elisha Payne, Jonas Fay, Ira Allen, Peter Olcott, Daniel Jones, Gideon Warren, Phinehas Whiteside, Joseph Caldwell and Ezra Stiles, or any five of you the said Commissioners, to compleat and carry into Execution the Negotiation and Settlement of the said Boundary Lines of Jurisdiction between the said States of NEW-HAMPSHIRE and NEW YORK with the said State of VERMONT respectively agreeable to said Resolutions.

AND I DO HEREBY PLEDGE THE FAITH of the said State of VERMONT, that the determinations had in the Premises shall be held sacredly binding on the part of VERMONT.

IN TESTIMONY whereof, I have hereunto set my Hand, and caused the Seal of this State to be affixed, In Council, this 27th Day of October Anno Domini, One Thousand Seven Hundred & Eighty one—And in the 5th year of the Independence of this State. THO^S. CHITTENDEN.

Ira Allen regarded the failure to send agents personally, in October, to New Hampshire and New York as a great mistake; first, because he believed New Hampshire could have been then persuaded to assent to Vermont's proposition; second, that New York would have been forced either to assent or refuse, probably the latter; and third, that with the assent of New Hampshire, and her aid with that of the states then friendly, "Vermont would have retained her west union to the present day, if not extended her claims further west."¹ In December, Gov. Chittenden sent Allen to urge the assent of New Hampshire, and an effort was made in conjunction with other agents appointed by Lieut. Gov. Payne; but at that date New Hampshire had resolved upon forcible measures, as will appear hereafter, and the attempt at conciliation was fruitless.

FORCE AGAINST VERMONT ATTEMPTED BY NEW YORK, AND CON-
TEMPLATED BY NEW HAMPSHIRE—1781-2.¹

The actual exercise of jurisdiction by Vermont in the East and West Unions, after the failure of the attempts to induce New Hampshire and New York to settle the controversy, very naturally excited the hostility of those states, and the most extraordinary thing is, that both failed to maintain their authority. New York was manifestly unable to do it, mainly from the fact that the sympathies of a majority of the people north of Albany, (from whom her military force was at that time necessarily drawn,) were in favor of Vermont;² while New Hampshire seems to have been reluctant to push matters to the extreme of a civil war, in which eastern New Hampshire would have been confronted by a majority of her people in the west, and all the force that Vermont could bring into the field. Moreover it appears from the vote of Mr. LIVERMORE, (the only delegate from New Hampshire present,) for the resolution of Congress, Aug. 20 1781,³ that the government of New Hampshire was friendly to the independence of Vermont on condition of the relinquishment of the Unions.*

COLLISIONS IN THE WESTERN DISTRICT.

New York was the first to commence active measures. Oct. 15 1781, Gen. Peter Gansevoort jr. notified Gov. Clinton of the arrest, at Lausingburgh, by Col. John Van Rensselaer, of Samuel Fairbanks, who had been a private in the colonel's regiment, but had joined those who after the union considered themselves Vermonters, and had received a lieutenant colonel's commission.⁴ This was sharply resented by the following letters of Vermont officers to Gen. John Stark, who then commanded the continental troops on the northern frontier.

¹ The spirited "Song of the Vermonters," which has been assigned to 1779, was undoubtedly written on this occasion. This is evident from allusions in the closing verses to Lutterloh, which was not granted until June 1781, and to Schaghticoke, which was not annexed until the same month. The verses are as follows:

From far Michiscoui's wild valley to where Poosoomsuck steals down from his wood-circled lair,
From Shocticook river to Lutterloh town,—
Ho—all to the rescue! Vermonters, come down!

Come York or come Hampshire—come traitors and knaves,
If ye rule o'er our land, ye shall rule o'er our graves;
Our vow is recorded—our banner unfurled;
In the name of Vermont we defy all the world!

*Col. Samuel Robinson, of Vermont Militia, to Gen. Stark.*¹

BENNINGTON, Oct. 16, 1781.

Dear General:—I am surprised to learn that the militia of Albany county have no other business upon their hands, at this time of general alarm and danger, than to distress the inhabitants of Vermont, as if they considered the British from Canada not sufficient for our destruction, at a time when all our militia are under marching orders, and most of them have already marched. This they [the New York authorities] think a proper time to manifest their spite and malice. Part of my regiment has marched to Castleton. I shall this morning follow with the remainder. If your honor cannot find the militia of Albany some other employment, I shall march my regiment to that quarter, and try powder and ball with them, which I have as well as they. I pray your honor to check them if possible.

I am, dear general, your very humble servant,

Hon. General Stark, Saratoga.

SAM'L ROBINSON.

*Gen. Safford, of Vermont Militia, to Gen. Stark.*²

BENNINGTON, October 17, 1781.

To Brigadier General Stark: Sir:—In consequence of your request to me of the 11th, I sent orders to the militia, now considered in this state, in the neighborhood of the New City [Lansingburgh.] Lieutenant-colonel Fairbanks is present with me, and informs that, in obedience to my orders, he had mustered a number of men to march to your assistance on Sunday morning. Saturday evening, colonel Van Rensselaer came with a party of men from Albany, and its vicinity, and took them prisoners, broke open their houses, and much distressed their families. Such conduct appears very extraordinary at this time, when every man ought rather to be employed in the defense of his country, than in destroying his neighbor's property. What colonel Van Rensselaer designs, is best known to himself: but it has the appearance of preventing men going to defend the frontier at this critical moment. I have ordered one half of our militia to the north, and the remainder I expect must shortly follow. The inhabitants of this western territory are willing to do their duty under Vermont, but are prevented by York. And now, sir, if you judge it lies within your province to quiet those disorders, I must entreat you to do it. That we may be united is my sincere desire. The dispute of jurisdiction must be settled between the states; but if such conduct is persisted in before [such settlement by the states,] I must repel force by force, and the hardest fend off.

I am, with sentiments of esteem, your obed't serv't,

SAM. SAFFORD.

*Governor Clinton to General Gansevoort.*³

POUGHKEEPSIE, Oct. 18, 1781.

Dear Sir:—Your letter of the 15th instant was delivered to me on the evening of the 16th. I have delayed answering it, in hopes that the Legislature would ere this have formed a quorum, and that I might have availed myself of their advice on the subject to which it relates; but as this is not yet the case, and it is uncertain when I shall be enabled to lay the matter before them, I conceive it might be improper longer to defer expressing my own sentiments to you on this subject.

The different unwarrantable attempts, during the Summer, of the people on the Grants to establish their usurped jurisdiction, even beyond their former claim, and the repetition of it (alluded to in your letter,)¹ in direct opposition to a resolution of Congress injurious to this State and favorable to their project of independence,² and at a time when the coming enemy are advancing, can only be accounted for by what other parts of their conduct have given us too much reason to expect—disaffection to the common cause.³ On my part, I have hitherto shown a disposition to evade entering into any altercation with them, that might, in its most remote consequence, give encouragement to the enemy, and expose the frontier settlements to their ravages; and from these considerations alone I have submitted to insults which otherwise would not have been borne with; and I could have wished to have continued this kind of conduct until the approaching season would have secured us against the incursions of the coming enemy. But as from accounts contained in Colonel Van Rensselaer's letter, it would appear that the militia embodying under Mr. Chittenden's orders are for the service of the enemy, and that their first object was to make you a prisoner, it would be unjustifiable to suffer them to proceed.⁴ It is therefore my desire that you maintain your authority throughout every part of your brigade, and for this purpose, that you carry the laws of this State into execution against those who shall presume to disobey your lawful orders. I would only observe that these sentiments are founded on an idea that the accounts given by Col. Van Rensselaer in his letter may be relied on; it being still my earnest desire, for the reasons above explained, not to do anything that will bring matters to extremities, at least before the close of the campaign, if it can consistently be avoided.

In my last, I should have mentioned to you that it was not in my power to send you a supply of ammunition; but, as I had reason to believe you had gone to Saratoga, I conceived it improper to say any thing on the subject lest my letter might miscarry. You may recollect that of the whole supply ordered by General Washington, last spring, for the use of the militia, five hundred pounds is all that has been received in the state magazine, which you will easily conceive to be far short of what was necessary for the other exposed parts of the state. With respect to provisions, it is equally out of my power to furnish you with any, but what the state agent, who is now with me, may be able to procure.

I am, with great respect and esteem, Dear Sir, your most obed't serv't,
*Brig. Gen. Gansevoort.*⁵ GEO. CLINTON.

³The governor's interpretation of the Haldimand correspondence.

⁴On the very day before this letter was written, Gen. Safford, of the Vermont militia, wrote to Gen. Stark that in consequence of his [Stark's] request, he had on the 11th sent orders to the militia in the West Union, in obedience to which lieutenant-colonel Fairbanks had mustered men to march to Stark's assistance when Van Rensselaer took them prisoners. So Van Rensselaer's (or Gov. Clinton's) suspicion or conjecture in this instance was flatly contradicted by Safford.—See preceding letter of Gen. Safford; Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, p. 371.

⁵*Life of Joseph Brant*, Vol. II, pp. 183–185.

Oct. 22, Gov. Chittenden laid before the Vermont Assembly a letter from Fairbanks, stating his arrest by Van Rensselaer, and also his escape in a skirmish in which three New Yorkers were wounded.¹ Thereupon Gov. Chittenden at once wrote to Captain [Col. John] Van Rensselaer a letter, of which the following abstract was given in WILLIAM L. STONE'S Life of Joseph Brant, Vol. II.

*Governor Chittenden to Captain [Col. John] Van Rensselaer.*²

Governor Chittenden wrote to officers of New York, demanding the release of the prisoners taken from the Grants—asserting their [Vermont's] determination to maintain the government they had “set up,” and threatening that, in the event of an invasion of the territory of New York by the common enemy, unless those prisoners were given up, they [Vermont] would render no assistance to New York. This letter also contained an admonition that “power was not limited to New York.”

Dec. 4, Col. Van Rensselaer informed Gen. Gansevoort that he had been arrested by Col. John Abbott and taken to Bennington, where he was discharged by Vermont magistrates. He also informed Gov. Clinton of the facts, and stated that he intended to defend himself and the authority of New York.³ Of this affair Gen. Stark gave the following account:

General Stark to Major General Heath.—[Extract.]⁴

SARATOGA, 12th December, 1781.

I have sent to Bennington to gain the particulars of a riot raised some time ago, and which still continues at St. Coicks. The particulars are as follows: Men, under the direction of a captain [col.] Abbott, assaulted a public house at Hoosac, seized upon colonel Rensselaer and some others, who considered themselves under the government of New York, and abused them in a most outrageous manner; after which they carried them to Bennington, and called upon the magistrates acting under the authority of Vermont for warrants to arrest them in (as they term it) a legal manner; but, upon the magistrates refusing to interfere in the matter, they were dismissed. Rensselaer, upon his liberation, represented the matter to general Gansevoort, and invited his neighbors to join him and protect him from a second abuse, with which he was severely threatened. Gansevoort approved his conduct, and ordered the militia on both sides the North river above Albany to join them. Those persons called Vermonters discovered the motion of the Yorkers, and immediately collected their forces within half a mile of the quarters of the Yorkers, and in this position the two detachments have continued nearly a week. Yesterday, about twelve o'clock, the Yorkers were about two hundred strong, and the Vermonters about two hundred do. What I mean by Vermonters is those acting under Vermont within the twenty-mile line; for I cannot learn that any have joined them belonging to old Vermont.⁵

⁵ Ira Allen stated that the force, arrayed at this time against New York, was “the militia of the [West] Union” collected by Col. Abbott.

The Governor and others met on the 7th and consulted Gen. Safford as to military matters in the "western district." Of this meeting there is no record, but the fact of the meeting and its import are shown by the following:

*Colonel Ira Allen to Colonel Thomas Lee.*¹

SUNDERLAND, December 8th, 1781.

Dear Sir:—I have to inform you that the legislature of New York, at their late session, have revived their claim to the west bank of Connecticut river. They have remonstrated against the resolutions of congress of the 7th and 20th of August last, which virtually invite this state into the confederacy of the United States. In fine, their procedures will most probably for the present bar congress from any further proceedings. When this state are left to vindicate their rights to independence against all the machinations of their old adversary, every measure is taken to divide and sub-divide the citizens of our western territory, to which this state have pledged their faith to support, and which the impartial world will justify this state in, when they consider the former proceedings of the government of New York against this people, and the resolutions above referred to.

Gov. Chittenden had endeavored in writing to reconcile both parties, and had sent Gen. Safford and Col. Walbridge, who succeeded in quieting the parties somewhat, but could not effect any accommodation. Ira Allen was then sent. He counseled Col. Abbott to avoid rash measures, and then visited Gansevoort and his officers. He endeavored to settle the controversy by observing that the measures adopted by New York had compelled Vermont to extend her jurisdictional claims, but that in time of peace the dispute might be adjusted. Gen. Gansevoort said he was much opposed to civil war, but it was the duty of New York to protect those who owed and professed allegiance to New York. Allen replied that Vermont had an equal right to protect those who acknowledged her jurisdiction; but it was advisable to use lenient measures on both sides, till Congress should have settled the boundary between the states—thus preventing the horrors of civil war when the common cause required all to be united against Great Britain. Gansevoort would not consent to withdraw his force from the West Union. Col. Allen then returned to Gov. Chittenden and advised the sending of a force sufficient (by over-awing the New Yorkers) to restore tranquility without bloodshed. "The plan," said Allen, "was adopted."—Vt. Hist. Soc. Coll. Vol. II, p. 212.

¹*Ms. Record of Board of War*, p. 27. Col. THOMAS LEE of Rutland, it is said, was a captain in Col. Warner's continental regiment, and presided at a court martial at Fort Ranger in 1779 for the trial of Maj. Hilkiah Grout.—See ante, p. 178; B. H. HALL'S Eastern Vermont, p. 329. It is certain that he was a captain in Col. Gideon Warren's regiment of Vermont militia in 1780. Probably on the removal of the latter to the "western district" Lee succeeded him as colonel. He headed the attempted insurrection in Rutland county in November 1786.—See Dr. CAVERLY'S History of Pittsford, pp. 246-261.

It is further to be observed, that if this state are left to support themselves against various powers, the more numerous her citizens are the better; and other advantages which are very important will arise to this state by holding the western territory, which is clearly in the power of this state to support; yet it may be necessary in order to convince the government of New York that this state will support her jurisdiction, and to suppress some internal divisions to the westward, that a body of the militia should make a move to the west, which would doubtless answer similar purposes as the tour into Cumberland County did.¹ Should anything of that kind be necessary, it is expected by the governor, general Safford, and others who were in council last evening, that you will furnish such proportion of your regiment as shall be necessary. There are other cogent reasons that at this time cannot be inserted in this letter.

It is expected by those in council [last] evening, that you consult your officers and soldiers on this subject, and make these matters familiar to them.

I am, Sir, with due respect,

Your humble servant,

Col. Thos. Lee.

IRA ALLEN.

Dec. 8, Gen. Stark advised Col. Yates [of N. Y.] not to begin hostilities with the Vermonters, but to stand on the defensive until reinforced.²

Gov. Clinton to Brig. Gens. Van Rensselaer and Gansevoort.—[Extracts.]

December 11. Having enclosed papers already noted, gov. Clinton wrote:

I have therefore to request that you will, on his [Gansevoort's] application, afford him such aid from your brigade as shall be necessary for quelling the insurrection and apprehending the offenders.

On the same day gov. Clinton wrote to Gen. Gansevoort:

I perfectly approve of your conduct [in resisting the pretended authority of Vermont,] and have only to add that should the force already detached prove insufficient, you will make such additions to it as to make it effectual³.

Dec. 12. No. 4216 of the Clinton Papers is an affidavit by Bezaleel Phelps, that he had been admitted into the council of Gen. Safford, Moses Robinson, and others, at Bennington, and the result was a determination to disperse the New York party under Col. Yates, by taking their lives or making them prisoners. Had seen writs for apprehending Cols. Yates and Van Rensselaer and others, to punish them by Vermont laws.

On the same day, colonel Yates, at St. Coick, wrote to general Gansevoort that the Vermonters appeared desperate. He had only about eighty men, the "insurrectionists" one hundred and forty-six, and he wanted aid with speed. He thought the Vermonters would only make a great show and encourage the others. The rioters taken by him were secured in a block-house. He wanted a field-piece and artillerymen for defense.¹

*General Stark to Colonel Yates.*²

HEADQUARTERS, Saratoga, 14th December 1781.

Sir:—Upon anxiously examining the nature of the disputes between New York and Vermont, I am of opinion that violent measures at present would be attended with very evil consequences. If, therefore, colonel Rensselaer can be assured of protection of his person and property, together with positive assurances that his adherents shall remain in peaceable and quiet possession of their estates, and that their persons shall be preserved from indignities and insults until congress shall determine the jurisdictional boundaries—till then, I say, I should think hostilities very dangerous.

Now, Sir, considering the inconveniences of keeping men in the field at this season of the year, I imagine, if the above mentioned preliminaries are agreed to and ratified by responsible men on the part of Vermont, it would be prudent for you to withdraw your men; but if your orders are to continue in your present station, you must obey. In that case, it would be advisable to apply to general Gansevoort, or the officer who gave the orders, that they might be remanded.

I am, Sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN STARK.

General Stark to Meshech Ware.—[Extract.]³

SARATOGA, 14th December 1781.

Dear Sir:—Notwithstanding my letters to you seem to be treated with silent contempt, yet, when any thing intervenes where I think my country or the state of New Hampshire in a particular manner deeply interested, I conceive it my duty, apart from common politeness, to inform you of it. Such I deem the late riotous conduct of the state of Vermont, in extending their pretended claim to the westward, and threatening to support it by a military force; and, indeed, those within the twenty-mile line are actually in arms, in open defiance and violation of the rules of Congress; and are actually opposing themselves to the troops raised by the state of New York to put their laws and constitution into execution. Two detachments, one acting under the authority of Vermont, and the other under officers owing allegiance to the state of New York, are assembled now at St. Coick, in opposition. For further particulars I refer you to Captain Fogg, who will have the honor of delivering this.⁴

On the 14th the Governor and Council met, and measures were agreed to in respect to the contest with both New Hampshire and New York. The two papers following as to New York resulted from this meeting:

*Governor Chittenden to General Stark.*⁵

Bennington, as soon as may be; at which time they will doubtless consult such measures as may tend to the peace and tranquility of this state and the United States.

In the mean time I earnestly request that you write to the officers of New York, that are daily making depredations to the west, to suspend any farther operations of that kind until the assembly meet; and that, if they do not comply, you will not interfere with your troops. And I do assure you that if they comply with said request, and liberate the prisoners they have taken, I will suspend the exercise of jurisdiction or law over any person or persons who profess themselves subjects of New York during that time. THOMAS CHITTENDEN.

*Col. John Abbott of the Vermont troops to Lieut. Col. Henry Van Rensselaer of N. Y.*¹

Sir:—I have this minute received orders from my superior which delay me from holding any further treaty with you—therefore I shall not meet you at time and place appointed. I shall not admit of three or four of your men coming into my camp to bring one letter, as they have done heretofore.

I am, sir, your humble serv't,

JOHN ABBOTT, Colonel.

Lieut. Col. Henry V. Rensselaer.

Dec. 16, 1781.

Dec. 17. Col. H. Van Rensselaer wrote to Gen. Safford, as appears from the following reply, written by the officer in command of the Vermont party:

*Col. Eb'r Walbridge to Col. H. Van Rensselaer.*²

MAPLETOWN, 17 Dec'r, 1781.

Sir:—Yours of this day to gen. Safford has been duly considered, and as you are pleased to say that you are not authorized to treat with any but subjects of the state of New York, it is imagined there is none such opposed to you. Those in opposition to the authority of New York, now in arms,—inhabitants of this territory claimed by your state, who profess to owe allegiance to Vermont,—now propose for your consideration, and request your immediate answer, viz:

1. That you release all the prisoners who are in your custody, belonging to claims [territory] in dispute.

2. That you make good all damages sustained by individuals by the troops under your command.

3. That all those inhabiting said territory respectively, professing to owe allegiance to New York and Vermont, shall rest quiet and unmolested in their persons and properties until the dispute shall finally be adjusted by congress, or such other tribunal as shall be mutually agreed on by the contending powers.

sheriff of the county to apprehend the insurgents; and was informed that a large body of troops from the Grants were marching in force, with artillery; but before he proceeded any further, he wished to be informed what was the object of their movements into the interior parts of New York, and by what authority.

Colonel Walbridge, at Bennington, to General Gansevoort.—[Abstract.]¹

Dec. 19. The object of the movement from Vermont was to protect those of the inhabitants who, in consequence of the union, preferred allegiance to the state of Vermont. If the New York forces will release prisoners and cease to exercise jurisdiction over men claiming to be under Vermont, that state will cease to do the same over men professing allegiance to New York. He wished conciliatory methods might be adopted, but if those persons who professed to be citizens of Vermont should be imprisoned and their property destroyed, he was not to be held answerable for the consequences.

It will be observed that though Col. Walbridge twice proposed terms in the conciliatory spirit of Gov. Chittenden's letter to Stark of the 15th—terms that would have restored peace without dishonor to either party or prejudice to their rights,—Gen. Gansevoort neither responded in the like spirit, nor remained on the field to assert the authority of New York. Of his retreat, and the end of the quasi war, a New York author has given the following account:

On the 16th (Dec.) Gen. Gansevoort took the field himself, repairing in the first instance to the head-quarters of Gen. Stark at Saratoga, in order to obtain a detachment of troops and field-pieces. But the troops of Stark were too naked to move from their quarters; and it was thought improper for him to interfere without an order from Gen. Heath. Gansevoort then crossed over to the east side of the river, in order to place himself at the head of such militia as he could muster in Schaghticoke and Hoosick; but was soon met by Col. Yates in full retreat from the house of Col. John Van Rensselaer. He had been able to raise but eighty men of Col. John Van Rensselaer's regiment to put down the insurgents; and on arriving at San Coick he discovered a force of five hundred men advancing from the Grants to the assistance of the rebels. Gansevoort retired five miles further, in order to find comfortable quarters for his men, and then attempted, but without success, to open a correspondence with the leaders of the insurgents.² Calls had been made upon four regiments, viz: those of Col. Yates, and Henry K. Van Rensselaer, as before stated, and upon Col. Van Vechten, and Major Taylor. But from the whole no greater force than eighty men could be raised. Of Col. Van Vechten's regiment, only himself, a few officers and one private could be brought into the field. Under these discouraging circumstances, the general was compelled to relinquish the expedition, and the insurgents remained the victors, to the no small terror of those of the inhabitants who were well disposed [to New York] inasmuch as they were apprehensive of being taken prisoners and carried away, as had been the case with others, should they refuse taking the oath of allegiance to the government of Vermont.¹

COLLISIONS IN THE EASTERN DISTRICT.

Chesterfield was one of the New Hampshire towns which assented to the union with Vermont and elected two representatives in the Vermont Assembly in April 1781; nevertheless it appears that some of its citizens were zealously loyal to New Hampshire. Nov. 5 1781, Samuel Davis, constable of that town under Vermont, was prevented from serving a precept by John Grandy jr. and Nathaniel Bingham; for which, on the 12th, these men were arrested and committed to the jail at Charlestown. Nov. 16, they petitioned the Council and Assembly of New Hampshire for relief.²

Under date of Nov. 15, Gen. Benjamin Bellows of Walpole in a confidential letter informed President Weare that Vermont had determined to exercise jurisdiction east of Connecticut river and had imposed a land tax. He feared the consequences would be violent if not sanguinary, and waited with impatience for action by New Hampshire. He wrote that officers and posses should be sent "from off the Grants"—that is, from the section of the state which was loyal to the government—"as it would be more likely to settle us in peace than the Employing any among us for this Purpose, where we are so intermixed and near Equally divided." He suggested the propriety of arresting "some of the Leaders of the revolt," and thought it could be done safely if it were secretly and prudently attempted.³

Col. Enoch Hale, sheriff of Cheshire county under New Hampshire, was ordered to release Grandy and Bingham, but in attempting to execute the order he was himself arrested. On the 27th of November he was arraigned before Benjamin Giles and Nathaniel S. Prentice, magistrates for Vermont, on the charge of attempting to break the jail; and on the 29th he was committed to the same jail.⁴

¹ WM. L. STONE'S Life of Brant, Vol. II, pp. 205-207. Early History, pp. 379-380. It is remarkable that ETHAN ALLEN is no where named in connection with the promised fight with New York. Nobody, certainly, could have entered into that business with a sharper appetite; and he was there. In his account against the state, settled in 1785, and recorded in Ethan Allen Papers, pp. 407-408, are the following items:

To my attending on the Militia at the seige of Vallumcock the last of Decr. 1781,	1£ 10 .
To Cash paid for my Expenses and for the Militia at the same time,	9£ 2 .

*Act of New Hampshire for the enforcement of its authority in Cheshire and Grafton counties.*¹

STATE OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

In the Year of our LORD One Thousand Seven Hundred and Eighty one.

AN ACT

For empowering the Sheriff of the County of Cheshire to release from Prison sundry of the good Subjects of this State, imprisoned by certain evilminded Persons, assuming Authority for so doing under the People inhabiting a Territory commonly called Vermont; and for apprehending the Persons so offending.

WHEREAS the People inhabiting a Tract of Country on the West Side of Connecticut River, originally granted by this State, and afterwards claimed by the State of New York, have erected themselves into a separate and independent Jurisdiction by the Name of the State of Vermont; And whereas, sundry Persons have, by Colour of Authority under the said pretended State of Vermont, acted as civil Officers, passed Judgment and committed to Prison sundry of the good Subjects of this State, and have seduced many of the Inhabitants of the Counties of Cheshire and Grafton to submit to the Jurisdiction of the said pretended State of Vermont, by Means whereof the proper Officers of the said Counties may be unable to release the good Subjects of this State from Such illegal Imprisonment, and to apprehend the Persons so offending, without the special Aid of this Assembly; and inasmuch as an impartial Trial of the said Offenders cannot probably be had within the said Counties where the Offences have or may be committed:

THEREFORE,

BE IT THEREFORE ENACTED BY THE COUNCIL AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, in General Assembly convened, and by the Authority of the same, it is hereby enacted, That the Committee of Safety be, and hereby is impowered and authorized to issue their Order to the Sheriff of the County of Cheshire to release from Prison all Persons confined, or who may hereafter be confined in either of the said Counties by Order, Process or Authority of any pretended Court, Magistrate, Officer, or other Persons claiming Authority from the said pretended State of Vermont, and to apprehend the Persons, who heretofore have exercised, or who hereafter shall attempt to exercise any Office, Power or Authority within the said Counties of Cheshire or Grafton from, by or under the said pretended Authority of Vermont, and to convey said Offenders to the common Goal in the County of Rockingham, or such other County in this State as the said Committee may order, there to remain until released by Order of the General Assembly, the Committee, or by due course of Law.

And be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the said Committee of Safety be, and hereby are impowered to authorize the Sheriff of the said County of Cheshire to call upon the Sheriffs of any or either of the other Counties in this State, to raise the Body of their respective Counties to aid and assist him in executing the Order of the Committee of Safety, either to release Persons imprisoned as aforesaid, or to apprehend the Person or Persons imprisoning them, and to convey the said Offenders to any Prison within this State, and also to command the Aid of any Officer or Officers of the Militia or Troops of this State, which may at the Time be within the limits thereof, and commanded by an officer commissioned by this State, and all officers and other Subjects of this State shall yield due Obedience to such command.

And be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the several and respective Courts of Judicature in the County or Counties where the said Offenders may be confined, be and they are hereby respectively impowered to hear, try and determine any Process or Processes against the said Offenders, and to give Judgment and award Execution thereon in the same Manner as though the offence had been committed within the Body of the County where such Trial is had; any Law, Usage or Custom to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding.

WALPOLE, NOV^m. 29th. 1781.

Sir,—The methods taken by the General Assembly for Liberating Mess^{rs}. Bingham and Grandy are so far from being Effectual for that Purpose that the Authority of Vermont have imprisoned the Sheriff of the County of Cheshire who was sent here for the Purpose aforesaid; the Authority of said Vermont are Determined to keep the Goal and their Prisoners, and also to withstand and oppose (by Force of Arms) all the Sheriffs and their Posses who may be employed by New Hampshire to Counteract any of their Purposes or Designs; it is said that they can raise (by their Account) Six Hundred men at the shortest notice, who will resolutely dispute the Ground Inch by Inch: That the Posse should be raised to carry the Orders of this State into Execution now, is absolutely necessary, something effectual must be done, dallying will not answer, and unless some force can be obtained from without the County of Cheshire, it will not be advisable to Dispute the Ground any longer. You cant but be Sensible of the ill Consequences of such an Attempt from within ourselves within this County and Especially within the Grants, for should the Friends of New Hampshire Generally Exert themselves at this Time it would Universally alarm the Vermonters, and many who would not otherwise arm in this Quarrel would Exert themselves to the utmost to oppose the Orders of the Assembly and all the New Hampshire Authority. I should think that if New Hampshire are Determined to Support and Protect their Friends in this Quarter and to maintain their Jurisdiction it will be Absolutely Necessary that a Sufficient force should be collected from without the Grants be sure, if not from without the County of Cheshire; You will put yourself in our Circumstances and Especially in those of the Sheriff and the other Prisoners, and I think you cant Hesitate a moment respecting what is necessary to be done and how it should be done.

Dec. 1, Doct. William Page, of Charlestown, sheriff under Vermont, informed Col. Samuel King of the imprisonment of Col. Hale and the prospect of an attempt by New Hampshire to release him. In that event he notified Col. King that he should call on him for military aid. On the 3d, Col. King issued orders to Col. Chamberlain, Capt. Franklin, Capt. Cole, and Capt. Butterfield to be ready to march to Charlestown on the shortest notice.¹ Sheriff Page sent a like notice to Col. Wm. Heywood, who ordered Capt. Hooper and Lieut. Bundy to be ready with arms and ammunition complete, with two or three days' provisions for each man, to march to Charlestown on the shortest notice.² Dec. 5, Michael Cresey of Chesterfield notified Gen. Bellows of the foregoing call for military aid.³ Dec. 12, sheriff Page sent a messenger to Gov. Chittenden, notifying him of events which had occurred in the district, and of the probability that New Hampshire would attempt coercion. This messenger reached Gov. Chittenden on the evening of the 13th, when the Governor and Council were in session.

CHARLESTOWN GOAL, December 12th, 1781.

I have to inform your honors that I wait the pleasure of the honorable Committee of Safety, whom, I trust, well know my situation. Sir, I have given bonds for the liberty of the yard, but could not give bonds to appear at an unknown court, for the honor of the state that sent me to this place. However, I was prevented doing the business that I was sent upon, yet I found the people to be much disappointed when they see that I refused to recognize [to Vermont,] and said that it would immediately bring on a quarrel; and many said they never would take up arms for the sake of jurisdiction, and could only wish to know the pleasure of Congress on the matter, which I think has been much kept from them by designing persons.

Sir, even those that are leading in the insurrection were panic-struck on hearing that two thousand men was on their march, but have since been much encouraged by hearing that the state of New Hampshire did not know what to do with them.

Sir, I think now is the time to put the laws in execution, more especially the state ones.

Sir, the wisdom of the honorable Committee is sufficient to direct them. I am, Sir, with much respect,

Your honor's most obedient, humble servant, ENOCH HALE.

ARLINGTON, 14th December, 1781.

Sir:—I have received dispatches from William Page, Esq., Sheriff of Washington County, which give me to understand that there is a high probability that the government of New Hampshire are about taking coercive measures to compel the peaceable citizens of this state to submit to the laws and authority of New Hampshire. The sheriff further desires my special orders in matters relating to the premises, and as my remote situation renders it impracticable that I should have the knowledge of the particular occurrences which may take place should such an attempt be made [by] New Hampshire, therefore I can only give you several orders in the matter, viz: provided that New Hampshire reject the proposals of the Legislature of this state and insist upon hostile measures, you are hereby directed to call on such of the members of the Council and the Generals Fletcher and Olcott, and such of the field officers of the militia on the east side of the mountain as you may think proper, and after having consulted matters, if need be, you are directed to call on any or all of the militia of this state to the eastward of the range of Green Mountains to your assistance, and to assist the sheriff in carrying into execution the laws of this state, and to defend its citizens against any insult; and provided New Hampshire makes an attack with an armed force, you are hereby ordered to repel force by force; and in the meantime you will use every means in your power consistent with the peace, happiness, or dignity of this state, to prevent the effusion of human blood, which at this time might be more or less injurious to the common cause of America, as well as attended with many other serious considerations, and which I pray God may never take place.

I am, Sir, your ob^t and humble serv^t,

THOMAS CHITTENDEN, Capt. General.

of the United States, and find that they have not only rejected the resolutions of Congress, but in reality have disavowed their authority; and I farther perceive that, in their great wisdom, they have thought proper to appoint a committee to determine whether New Hampshire shall exercise jurisdiction to Connecticut river or not. This proceeding appears too weak and frivolous. For men of sense to suppose that New Hampshire would ever consent to an indignity so flagrant, and an abuse so pointed as this seems to be, is what I own surprises me. However, I hope, and indeed have no doubt, that New Hampshire will be more politic than to take notice of this daring insolence. What I mean by notice is, to think of treating with them upon this or any other subject until Congress shall come to a final determination with respect to these people. I am, sir, with high respect,

Your most obedient serv't,

JOHN STARK.

*Lieut. Gov. Payne, of Vermont, to President Weare.*¹

CHARLESTOWN, Dec. 21st, 1781.

Sir,—I herewith transmit to your honor a copy of orders received from the commander-in-chief of the state of Vermont, issued in consequence of coercive measures pursuing by New Hampshire, from which you will learn my situation.

Inclination and duty conspire to induce my compliance with any measures which reason and justice may point out to avert threatening hostilities, pregnant not only with the horrors of civil war, but also the greatest injury to the United States, whose interest it is our desire as well as yours to support—have, therefore, by advice of sundry members of the Council of this state, and other gentlemen of influence and consideration now present, appointed Brigadier General [Roger] Enos and William Page, Esq., in conjunction with Col. Ira Allen, (already appointed by the Governor to wait on your Assembly,) to state before the said Assembly the reasonableness of the late proposals of the legislature of Vermont, transmitted to your honor by a committee appointed by said legislature for that purpose, for the settlement of disputes between New Hampshire and Vermont.

You must be sensible it has ever been our idea to have justice and equity take place in the decision; and, therefore, by the advice aforesaid, [I] renew proposals that the controversy, in respect to the territory the jurisdiction of which is in dispute between the said states, be decided by an impartial tribunal on principles of right and equity, in the mode congress have pointed out by articles of confederation of the United States in cases where disputes arise between two or more states in respect to boundary, jurisdiction, &c.,—Vermont being allowed equal privileges as the other party in support of their claim—and that hostilities between the said states be suspended till such trial can be had.

We doubt not a compliance on the part of Vermont with the foregoing proposals, which appear to us equitable and just; and are persuaded that New Hampshire are so possessed of principles of justice and equity as shall induce a compliance on their part, and hope for their favorable answer to lay before the assembly of Vermont for their concurrence at their meeting on the last Thursday in January next.

In case New Hampshire refuses compliance with equitable terms (as we view the foregoing,) and are determined on hostilities previous to attempts for an amicable settlement, [I] shall find myself under the disagreeable necessity to execute the orders I have received in raising the force of Vermont, to repel encroachments on its jurisdiction exercised by consent of the people, and which I doubt not their most spirited exertions to support till the dispute is decided, confident that New Hampshire, in case they commence hostilities, must be accountable for the consequences.

I have the honor to be, with esteem and respect, sir,

Your honor's most obedient and most humble servant,

ELISHA PAYNE, Lieut. Gov.

His Honor Mesheck Weare, Esq., President of the Council of New Hampshire.

Immediately following the foregoing document in the lost Stevens Papers was a letter from Gen. Samuel Fletcher to Lieut. Gov. Payne, informing that he had issued orders to call out the [Vermont] militia east of the mountains to defend the East Union.¹

Dec. 22, Col. Enoch Hale wrote to President Weare, by sheriff Page, commending the attempt, which was to be made by Enos, Page, and Allen, to obtain an honorable settlement between the two states. Hale wrote: "I have been used well as a Prisoner, have had the liberty of the yard, and they Now begin to Desier me to depart out of their Course" [coasts.]²

Dec. 27, by a concurrent vote of the House of Representatives and Council of New Hampshire, it was ordered that Dr. William Page be committed to jail at Exeter, to await a trial for accepting the office of sheriff "under the usurped authority of Vermont;" and on the same day bail was refused.³

Honored Sir:—This moment two men from Chesterfield, who made their escape from the mob, who after they had rescued Samuel King from the officer, returned to Chesterfield, and apprehended Lieutenant Roberson and two others, who they seemed determined to treat according to the custom of Vermont, that is by whipping them. Whether they will really venture upon this business is very uncertain to me. But they have actually driven many of the good subjects of the state from their homes in this cold night. Mr. Bingham's son is one of the men that have come to my house for shelter, who I have this account from, who expected to have found his father here with another man, who made their escape. They have not been here, and I am some concerned for them. The triumphs of the Vermonters are great, and say that New Hampshire dare not come like men in the day-time, but like a thief, and steal a man or two away. Your honor cannot be insensible of our situation. I would not wish to dictate, but pray that something may be done that shall be for the relief of the good subjects in this part of the WALPOLE, Jan. 2d, 1782.

Sir,—I have often troubled you with a narrative of our distresses and difficulties in this part of the state. Notwithstanding, I presume you and the rest of the honorable committee of safety will exercise your wonted indulgence while I give an account of some new difficulties arising upon the officers attempting to convey one Samuel King of Chesterfield to Exeter, which rescue you will have an account of before this reaches you. Upon the return of the mob, after proper refreshment at said King's, they sought for all those persons who were any way concerned in assisting the aforesaid officer, some of whom they got into their hands, and have abused in a shameful and barbarous manner, by striking, kicking, and all the indignities which such a hellish pack can be guilty of, obliging them to promise and engage never to appear against the new state again; and that is not all, they swear they will extirpate all the adherents to New Hampshire, threatening to kill, burn and destroy the persons and property of all who oppose them; that the friends to this state cannot continue at said Chesterfield with their families, but are obliged to seek an asylum in other towns among the Hampshire people. I have two respectable inhabitants of said Chesterfield now sheltering themselves under my roof, who I have the greatest reason to think would be treated by them in a barbarous manner were they in their power, as they have stove the doors and broke up houses in search of them. I am credibly informed that there is in said Chesterfield about one hundred persons who support said King, who damn New Hampshire and all their authority to hell, and say they (New Hampshire) can do nothing only in a mean and underhanded way; in short, they defy all the authority and force of the state, and are determined to support and maintain their usurped authority, maugre all attempts that have or shall be made to curb or restrain their usurpations. The wrath of man and the raging of the sea are in scripture put together, and it is He alone who can rule the latter and restrain the former. I hope and trust the Author of Wisdom will direct the honorable committee to such measures as will ultimately tend to the peace and happiness of this part of the state, and more especially those adherents to New Hampshire who are in a sense suffering for righteousness sake.

I am, with all esteem and respect,

Your most obedient humble servant, BENJ. BELLOWS.

Jan. 8, Doct. Page at Exeter wrote a long letter to Lieut. Gov. Payne, in which he deplored the state of affairs, and asserted that the people of western New Hampshire, who were friendly to Vermont, were greatly misunderstood or misrepresented. The following are extracts from this letter:

"The General Court have Ordered Two Thousand men to be Raised Immediately in the Counties of Rockingham and Strafford & March them to Subjugate the People in the Counties of Cheshire and Grafton."

"P. S. The whole State of New Hampshire are to hold themselves in Readiness to march if Required."¹

Jan. 10, Col. Bellows wrote to President Weare against the release of Doct. Page, on the ground that, while it might quiet the people of western New Hampshire somewhat, it would encourage hostility in Vermont. He closed with a statement that Esq. Giles [Benjamin, of Newport, representative and magistrate under Vermont,] had been arrested by sheriff Hale, but had been rescued.³

Jan. 10, Ira Allen reported to the Governor and Council the failure of the attempt to negotiate with New Hampshire.

Jan. 11, Col. Hale informed President Weare of the arrest and release of Giles, and added the following humorous account of his own misfortune on the occasion, prefacing it with a statement that the Vermont party had a force of forty men:

For a frunt Gard they Raised some of their most ablest women and sent forward with some men dressed in woman's apparril which had the Good luck to Take me Prisoner Put me aboard one of their Slays and filled the same with some of the Principal women and drove off Nine miles to Wellan Tavern in Walpole the main body following after with acclamation of Joy where they Regaled themselves and then set me at liberty Nothing Doubting but that they had intirely subdued New Hampshire.¹

From the fact that Col. Hale represented the people of Charlestown to be very zealous for Vermont, the inference is that the party which arrested him was raised in that town. On the next day, according to the Index to the Stevens Papers, p. 81, Col. Hale again wrote that he had concluded to stay at home and let the Vermonters in the East Union alone. Probably this was a condition of his release on the 11th.

Jan. 12, President Weare issued "a proclamation giving Vermonters forty days to leave the east union, or subscribe an oath &c."² Feb. 21 1782, in precisely forty days from the date of this proclamation, the General Assembly of Vermont resolved to dissolve both the eastern and western unions. This result was largely due to the intervention of Gen. WASHINGTON, whose letter, and the resolutions of Congress of August 1781, were accepted as pledges that, on the withdrawal of Vermont to its former boundaries, the state would be admitted to the Union.³

BELKNAP'S ACCOUNT OF THE SECOND EASTERN UNION—1781-2.⁴

The state of society within the seceding towns [of New Hampshire] at this time, was very unhappy. The majorities attempted to control the minorities; and these were disposed not to submit, but to seek protection of the government with which they had been connected. At the same time and in the same place, Justices, Sheriffs and Constables, appointed by the authority of both states, were exercising jurisdiction over the same persons. Party rage, high words and deep resentment, were the effect of these clashing interests. An affray which began in the town of Chesterfield, threatened a scene of open hostility, between the states of New Hampshire and Vermont.

A Constable, appointed by the authority of Vermont, had a writ, in an action of debt against a man who was in the interest of New-Hampshire. He found the man in company with a number of people of his own party, and attempted to arrest him. The owner of the house interposed. The Constable produced a book which he said contained the laws of Vermont, and began to read. The owner of the house forbade him. Threatening words were used; and the officer was compelled to retreat. By a warrant from a Vermont Justice, the householder, and another of the company, were committed to prison in Charlestown. They sent a petition to the Assembly of New-Hampshire for relief. The Assembly empowered the committee of safety to direct the Sheriff of Cheshire to release the prisoners; they farther empowered the committee to cause to be apprehended and committed to prison, in any of the counties, all persons acting under the pretended authority of the State of Vermont, to be tried by the Courts of those counties where they might be confined; and for this purpose the Sheriffs were empowered to raise the posse Comitatus.

In attempting to release the two prisoners from Charlestown gaol, the Sheriff himself [Col. Enoch Hale] was imprisoned by the Vermont Sheriff [Doct. Wm. Page,] under the authority of a warrant from three Justices. The imprisoned [N. H.] Sheriff applied to a Brigadier General of New Hampshire,¹ to raise the militia for his liberation. This alarmed the Vermonters; and orders were issued by the Governor for their militia to oppose force with force. A committee of Vermont was sent to Exeter, 'to agree on measures to prevent hostilities.' One of this committee was the Vermont Sheriff; he was immediately arrested and thrown into prison at Exeter, and there held as a hostage for the release of the Sheriff of Cheshire. The assembly issued a proclamation, allowing forty days for the people in the revolted towns to repair to some Magistrate of New Hampshire, and subscribe a declaration that they acknowledged the extent of New Hampshire to Connecticut river; and that they would demean themselves peaceably as good citizens of the State. They also ordered the militia of all the counties to hold themselves in readiness to march against the revolvers.

While affairs wore such a threatening aspect between the two States, means were used at Congress to take up the controversy on more general ground. A committee, who had under consideration the affair of admitting Vermont into the union and determining its boundaries, prevailed on General Washington, then at Philadelphia, to write to the Governor of Vermont, advising to a relinquishment of their late extension, as an 'indispensable preliminary' to their admission into the union; intimating also, that upon their non-compliance, they must be considered as having a hostile disposition toward the United States, in which case coercion on the part of Congress, however disagreeable, would be necessary.

This letter had the desired effect. The Assembly of Vermont, taking advantage of the absence of the members from the eastern side of the river, obtained a majority for complying with the preliminary, and resolved, 'that the western bank of Connecticut river on the one part, and 'a line drawn from the north-west corner of Massachusetts, northward, 'to Lake Champlain on the other part, be the eastern and western 'boundaries of the State of Vermont, and that they relinquished all ¹ Possibly Gen. MOSES NICHOLS, of Amherst, N. H., who commanded a part of Stark's men at the battle of Bennington. In a letter to Prest. Weare by Samuel Livermore, in Congress, Jan. 1 1782, he said: "I am anxious to hear the event of Gen. Nichols' expedition."—See Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, p. 227.

'claim of jurisdiction without those limits.' When the members from the eastern side of Connecticut river arrived, they found themselves excluded from a seat in the Assembly, and took their leave with some expressions of bitterness.

After this compliance, it was expected that Vermont would be admitted into the union, and the question was solemnly put in Congress; but a majority decided against it; to the no small disappointment of many persons, beside the inhabitants of the disputed territory. The pretence for this decision was, that they had exceeded the limited time; but they had complied with the 'indispensable preliminary;' and the order of Congress, requiring it, stood unrepealed.

IRA ALLEN'S ACCOUNT OF THE COLLISIONS IN THE EASTERN AND WESTERN DISTRICTS—1781-2.¹

In December new scenes of difficulty and danger presented themselves, and the affairs of Vermont appeared fast approaching to an alarming crisis, assailed as she was, at the same time, and threatened by an armed force from New York and New Hampshire.

General Gansevoort, in pursuance of a law of the State of New York, and conformable to the orders of Governor Clinton, was detached with a part of his brigade of militia to assist the Sheriff of the county of Albany to suppress an insurrection in said county, alias the west union of Vermont; Colonel Abbot collected the militia in the union to oppose him; they encamped against each other, and remained in this situation for some time; the horrors of civil war seemed to moderate both parties.

In the mean time Governor Chittenden tried to reconcile both parties by writing, and he also appointed General Safford and Colonel Walbridge to repair there, and, if possible, to settle the controversy in some way, and by all means prevent the shedding of blood. They repaired to the contending parties, and were the means of keeping them more quiet, but could not effect an accommodation.

The Governor then directed Colonel Allen to see if he could devise any means to accommodate matters; for, said the Governor, a civil war is much to be dreaded. Colonel Allen repaired to Colonel Abbot's camp, held a conference with him and his officers, admonishing them against any rash measures; that some way would be found to settle the dispute without an appeal to arms, engaging them not to commence hostilities till the further order of the Governor. He then proceeded to General Gansevoort's camp, had an interview with him and his officers, endeavoured to settle the controversy, observing, that the measures pursued by New York had necessitated Vermont to extend her claims, that in time of peace the dispute might be adjusted, &c.

General Gansevoort was very much opposed to a civil war, yet thought it a duty incumbent on the State of New York to protect her inhabitants, who owed and professed allegiance to that Government. Colonel Allen observed, that the State of Vermont had an equal right to protect those who had acknowledged her jurisdiction, which was a great majority of the people; that it would be advisable to use lenient measures on both sides, till a boundary line could be settled by Congress between the States, thereby to prevent the horrors of a civil war, when the united efforts of all were necessary in the common cause against Great Britain; but no measures could be suggested to induce General Gansevoort to withdraw from said union.

¹ From I. ALLEN'S History, in Vt. Hist. Soc. Coll., Vol. I, pp. 442-446.

Colonel Allen returned to the Governor and Council, advised that the Governor, as Captain General, should direct a sufficient military force to march, from within the old bounds of Vermont, against General Gansevoort, as the only means to restore tranquility without bloodshed; for in that case General Gansevoort would, in his opinion, retreat, and not otherwise. The plan was adopted; and while the Governor was making out his orders, directing Colonel Ira Allen, with a detachment of militia, to prosecute said plan, an express arrived from William Page, Esq; Sheriff of the county of Washington,¹ announcing the prospects of hostilities in the east union from New Hampshire. This intelligence made a serious impression on the minds of the Governor and Council for a few moments (as it appeared like an agreement between the claiming States to commence hostilities at one and the same time.) When they resumed business, Colonel Walbridge was directed to march with a detachment of militia against General Gansevoort. In his way he received a letter from General Gansevoort.

At the same time the troops of New York were in motion to suppress the proceedings of their citizens, who had formed an union with Vermont. On December 18, their Commander, Brigadier General Gansevoort, wrote to the commanding officer of the troops from Vermont, that in pursuance of a law of New York, he had been detached with a part of his brigade to suppress an insurrection of some of the inhabitants of Schaticook and Housac; that he was arrived to aid the Sheriff of the County, to apprehend the insurgents; and was informed that a large body of troops from the grants, were marching in force, with artillery; but before he proceeded any further, he wished to be informed what was the object of their movement into the interior parts of that State, and by what authority. Colonel Walbridge, commandant of the troops from Vermont, wrote in answer, that the object of their movement was to protect those of the inhabitants, who, in consequence of the union, professed allegiance to the State of Vermont; that he wished conciliatory methods might be adopted, but if those persons who professed to be citizens of Vermont should be imprisoned, and their property destroyed, he was not to be answerable for the consequences. General Gansevoort retreated, and peace was restored.

The Governor and Council attended to the said dispatches from William Page, Esq; and appointed Colonel Ira Allen, and instructed him to repair to the General Court of New Hampshire, then in session at Exeter, with full powers to concert measures for an amicable adjustment of all disputes with that State. On the 14th Governor Chittenden issued orders to Lieutenant Governor Payne (who lived in the east union) to raise the militia east of the Green Mountains to protect the civil authority and inhabitants against the menacing insults of New Hampshire, and if attacked, to repel force by force.

Colonel Allen took these orders, and proceeded to Charlestown, and on conferring with William Page, Esq; found a prospect of hostilities on the eve of commencement, on the part of New Hampshire, for the protection of some persons who professed allegiance to that State. Colonel Allen immediately made out several copies of said orders to Governor Payne, ostensibly to encourage the people in the east union to remain firm to Vermont, but found means for one copy to fall into the hands of a staunch friend to New Hampshire, who eagerly seized the prize, and sent it by express night and day to the Governor of New Hampshire. Colonel Allen then proceeded to Exeter. On his way through the State, he found the people extremely enraged against Vermont, both on account of her supposed connexions with the British in Canada, and for extending her claims, so much to the injury of that State, that, in fact, very little stimulus would raise the people to a civil war, which was his duty and inclination, if possible, to prevent. These circumstances made him apprehensive it might be difficult to gain the necessary information. When he arrived, and being acquainted with the late Major General Fulson,¹ who was Commandant of all the militia of that State, and had been friendly to Vermont, Colonel Allen, on his arrival, found means immediately to have a private interview with him, by which he learnt, that two days before the court had determined to raise a sufficient military force to assist the civil power to carry into effect the laws of the State to Connecticut River; that the day before a copy of Governor Chittenden's orders to Lieutenant Governor Payne had been delivered to Mr. Weare, purporting a determination to repel force by force; this had occasioned a delay in issuing said orders; for if the militia to the west of Connecticut River were to cross and oppose the authority of New Hampshire, it would provoke a civil war. Under these circumstances, what further order the Court would take was yet undetermined. This interview was agreed to be kept a profound secret till all disputes were settled between the contending States.

Colonel Allen waited on the President and Council, and delivered his credentials, but the President and Council received him coolly; appeared not inclined to make any stipulations whatever respecting Vermont. Indeed their countenance, &c. seemed to whisper, this is the man that has carried on the negotiations with the British in Canada, that produced Lord George Germain's instructions to Sir Henry Clinton, &c. purporting an intention of Vermont's being a British colony; he has before learned our secrets and profited thereby; he is a dangerous man, and we must unite and guard against him. No information could be obtained from any member of the Legislature, notwithstanding Mr. Allen was intimately acquainted with many of them.

While Colonel Allen was thus endeavouring to reconcile matters, General Enos and William Page, Esq; arrived with a letter from Lieutenant Governor Payne to President Weare, enclosing the copy of Governor Chittenden's orders to him, informing Mr. Weare that it was his wish to avoid the horrors of civil war, but before the people who had united with Vermont, and were under her protection, should be subjected by any hostile operation of New Hampshire, they would spiritedly oppose her, and that New Hampshire must be responsible for the consequences.

These gentlemen were authorized to assist Colonel Allen in his laudable endeavours to restore harmony. Mr. Page, who had been active in opposing the laws of New Hampshire, and lived on the east side of Connecticut river, was immediately arrested and confined in gaol, as might have been reasonably expected; thus, spirited measures were pursuing on all sides, while no negotiation could be entered into by the united exertions of the Agents of Vermont, nor could they learn what determination the Court had, or would probably come to; all was a profound secret.

¹ Gen. NATHANIEL FOLSOM was born at Exeter, N. H., and died there May 26 1790. He distinguished himself in the French war, was Brig. General of the New Hampshire forces at the siege of Boston in 1775, and subsequently Maj. Gen. of New Hampshire militia. He was a member of the Continental Congress in 1774-5 and 1777-80, and president of the convention which adopted the constitution of New Hampshire.—Drake's Dictionary of American Biography.

In this situation, Colonel Allen engaged a lady to gain for him the requisite information, which she effected, and informed him of the time when the business would finally be discussed and determined in the general Court, by both houses in grand Committee.

When the Court convened on this subject, Colonel Allen went into the lobby, and began to write a memorial to the Legislature of New Hampshire. In the mean time he heard the debates, and that the Court determined on appointing an Agent to take the advice of Congress previous to any hostile measures. Colonel Allen took his leave of General Enos and Mr. Page; on his return he wrote to Lieutenant-Governor Payne and the Members of Council on the east side of the mountain, requesting them to attend in Council at Arlington, [on the 10th of January 1782,] to hear his report, and take such further steps as might be thought proper.

CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN GOV. CHITTENDEN AND GEN. WASHINGTON ON VERMONT AFFAIRS—NOV. 1781 AND JAN. 1782.

*Gov. Chittenden to Gen. Washington.*¹

STATE OF VERMONT, Arlington, 14th November, 1781.

Sir:—The peculiar situation and circumstances with which this state for several years last past has been attended, induce me to address your excellency on a subject, which nearly concerns her interest, and may have its influence on the common cause of the states of America.

Placing the highest confidence in your excellency's patriotism in the cause of Liberty, and disposition to do equal right and justice to every part of America, who have by arms supported their rights against the lawless power of Great Britain, I herein transmit the measures by which this state has conducted her policy for the security of her frontiers; and as the design and end of it were set on foot, and have ever since been prosecuted on an honorable principle (as the consequences will fully evince,) I do it with full confidence that your excellency will not improve it to the disadvantage of this truly patriotic, suffering state; although the substance has already been communicated by Captain Ezra Heacock, employed by Major-Gen. Lincoln, by your excellency's particular direction, and who arrived here with the resolutions of Congress of the 7th of August last, which appeared in some measure favorable to this state.

I then disclosed to him the measures this state had adopted for her security, which I make no doubt have by him been delivered to your excellency; and, though I do not hesitate that you are well satisfied of the real attachment of the government of this state to the common cause, I esteem it nevertheless my duty to this state, and to the common cause at large, to lay before your excellency, in writing, the heretofore critical situation of this state, and the management of its policy, that it may operate in your excellency's mind as a barrier against the clamorous aspersions of its numerous, and in many instances, potent adversaries.

It is the misfortune of this state to join on the province of Quebec and the waters of the Lake Champlain, which affords an easy passage for the enemy to make a descent with a formidable army on its frontiers, and into the neighborhood of the several states of New York, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts, who have severally laid claims in part or in whole, to this state, and who have used every art which they could devise to divide her citizens, to set congress against her, and finally to overturn the government and share its territory among them. The repeated applications of this state to the Congress of the United States to be admitted into the federal union with them, upon the liberal principles of paying a just proportion of the expenses of the war with Great Britain, have been rejected, and resolutions passed ex parte tending to create schisms in the state, and thereby embarrass its efforts in raising men and money for the defense of her frontiers, and discountenancing the very existence of the state. Every article belonging to the United States, even to pickaxes and spades, has been by continental commissaries ordered out of this state, at a time when she was erecting a line of forts on her frontiers. At the same time the state of New York evacuated the post of Skenesborough for the avowed purpose of exposing this state to the ravages of the common enemy.

The British officers in New York, being acquainted with the public disputes between this and the claiming states, and between Congress and this state, made overtures to Gen. Allen, in a letter, projecting that Vermont should be a colony under the crown of England, endeavouring, at the same time, to draw the people of Vermont into their interest. The same day Gen. Allen received this letter (which was in August [or last of July] 1780.) he laid it before me and my council, who, under the critical circumstances of the state, advised that no answer, either oral or written, should be returned, and that the letter should be safely deposited till further consideration, to which Gen. Allen consented. A few months after, he received a second letter from the enemy, and the same council advised that Gen. Allen should send both letters to Congress inclosed in a letter under his signature; which he did, in hopes that Congress would admit Vermont into the Union; but they had not the desired effect.

In the fall of the year 1780, the British made a descent up the Lake Champlain, and captured the Forts George and Anne, and appeared in force on the lake. This occasioned the militia of this state, most generally, to go forth to defend it. Thus the militia were encamped against the enemy near six weeks, when Gen. Allen received a flag from them, with an answer to my letter dated the preceding July to Gen. Haldimand, on the subject of an exchange of prisoners. The flag delivered a letter to Gen. Allen, from the commanding officer of the enemy, who were then at Crown Point, with proposals for a truce with the state of Vermont, during the negotiating the exchange of prisoners. General Allen sent back a flag of his to the commanding officer of the British, agreeing to the truce, provided he would extend the same to the frontier posts of the state of New York, which was complied with, and a truce took place, which lasted about three weeks. It was chiefly owing to the military prowess of the militia of this state, and the including the state of New York in the truce, that Albany and Schenectady did not fall a sacrifice to the ambition of the enemy that campaign.

Previous to the retiring of the enemy into winter quarters, Col. Allen and Major Fay were commissioned to negotiate the proposed exchange of prisoners. They proceeded so far as to treat with the British commissioners on the subject of their mission, during which time they were interchangeably entertained with politics, which they treated in an affable manner, as I have been told. But no cartel was settled, and the campaign ended without the effusion of blood.

The cabinet council, in the course of the succeeding winter, finding that the enemy in Canada were about seven thousand strong, and that Vermont must needs be their object the ensuing campaign, circular letters were therefore sent from the supreme executive authority of this state to the claiming states before mentioned, demanding of them to relinquish their claims to this state, and inviting them to join in a solid union and confederation against the common enemy. Letters were also sent to your excellency and to the states of Connecticut and Rhode Island. Each of these letters stated the extreme circumstances of this state, and implored their aid and alliance, giving them withal to understand, that it was out of the power of this state, to lay in magazines, and support a body of men, sufficient to defend this state against the force of the enemy. But to these letters there has been no manner of answer returned.

From all which it appeared that this state was devoted to destruction by the sword of the common enemy. It appeared to be the more unjustifiable, that the state of Vermont should be thus forsok, inasmuch as her citizens struck the first offensive blow against British usurpation, by putting the continent in possession of Ticonderoga, and more than two hundred pieces of cannon; with Crown Point, St. Johns, and all Lake Champlain; their exertions in defeating Gen. Carleton in his attempt to raise the siege of St. Johns; their assisting in penetrating Canada; their valor in the battles of Hubbardton, Bennington, and at the landing near Ticonderoga; assisting in the capture of Gen. Burgoyne; and by being the principal barrier against the power of the enemy in Canada ever since.

That the citizens of this state have by nature an equal right to liberty and independency with the citizens of America in general, cannot be disputed. And that they have merited it from the United States by their exertions with them in bringing about the present glorious revolution, is as evident a truth as any other, which respects the acquired right of any community.

Generosity, merit, and gratitude, all conspire in vindicating the independence of Vermont. But notwithstanding the arguments, which have been exhibited in sundry pamphlets in favor of Vermont, and which have been abundantly satisfactory to the impartial part of mankind, it has been in the power of her external enemies to deprive her of union, confederation, or any equal advantage in defending themselves against the common enemy.

The winter was thus spent in fruitless attempts to form alliances, but no advantages were procured in favor of this state, except that Massachusetts withdrew her claim, on condition that the United States would concede the independence of Vermont; but that if they would not, they would have their snack at the south end of its territory. Still New York and New Hampshire are strenuously opposed to the independence of Vermont: and every stratagem in their power, to divide and subdivide her citizens, are exerted, imagining that their influence in Congress and the certain destruction, as they supposed, of the inhabitants of this state by the common enemy, could not fail of finally accomplishing their wishes.

In this juncture of affairs, the cabinet of Vermont projected the extension of their claim of jurisdiction upon the states of New Hampshire and New York, as well to quiet some of her own internal divisions occasioned by the machinations of those two governments, as to make them experience the evils of intestine broils, and strengthen this state against insult. The legislature, accordingly, extended their jurisdiction to the eastward of Connecticut river to the old Mason line, and to the westward to Hudson's river; but, in the articles of Union, referred the determination of the boundary lines of Vermont, and the respective claiming states, to the final decision of Congress, or such other tribunal as might be mutually agreed on by the contending governments.¹ These were the principal political movements of the last winter.

The last campaign opening with a gloomy aspect to discerning citizens of this state, being destitute of adequate resources, and without any alliance, and from its local situation to Canada, obliged to encounter the whole force of that province, or give up its claim to independence and run away, Vermont being thus driven to desperation by the injustice of those who should have been her friends, was obliged to adopt policy in the room of power. And on the first day of May last, Col. Ira Allen was sent to Canada to further negotiate the business of the exchange of prisoners, who agreed on a time, place, and other particulars relating to an exchange. While he was transacting that business, he was treated with great politeness and entertained with political matters, which necessity obliged him to humor in that easy manner that might save the interest of this state in its extreme critical situation, and that its consequences might not be injurious to the United States. The plan succeeded, the frontiers of this state were not invaded; and Lord George Germaine's letter wrought upon Congress and procured that from them, which the public virtue of this people could not.

In the month of July last, Maj. Joseph Fay was sent to the British shipping, on Lake Champlain, who completed an exchange of a number of prisoners, who were delivered at Skenesborough in September last; at which time and place Col. Allen and Maj. Fay had a conference with the British commissioners. And no damage, as yet, had accrued to this, or the United States from this quarter. And in the month of October last, the enemy appeared in force at Crown Point, and Ticonderoga; but were manœuvred out of their expedition, and are returned into winter quarters in Canada, with great safety, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, 'I will put my hook in their nose and turn them back by the way which they came, and they shall not come into this city (alias Vermont) saith the Lord.'

It remains that I congratulate your excellency, and participate with you in the joy of your capturing the haughty Cornwallis and his army; and assure your excellency that there are no gentlemen in America, who enjoy the glorious victory more than the gentlemen of this state, and him who has the honor to subscribe himself your excellency's devoted and most humble servant,

THOMAS CHITTENDEN.

*Gen. Washington to Thomas Chittenden.*²

PHILADELPHIA, 1 January, 1782.

Sir:—I received your favor of the 14th of November, by Mr. Brownson. You cannot be at a loss to know why I have not heretofore, and why I cannot now, address you in your public character, or answer you in mine; but the confidence, which you have been pleased to repose in me, gives me an opportunity of offering you my sentiments, as an individual wishing most ardently to see the peace and union of his country preserved, and the just rights of the people of every part of it fully and firmly established. It is not my business, neither do I think it necessary now, to discuss the origin of the right of a number of inhabitants to that tract of country, formerly distinguished by the name of the New Hampshire Grants, and now known by the name of Vermont. I will take it for granted that their right was good, because Congress by their resolve of the 7th of August imply it, and by that of the 21st¹ are willing to confirm it, provided the new state is confined to certain prescribed bounds. It appears therefore to me, that the dispute of boundary is the only one which exists, and that, this being removed, all further difficulties would be removed also, and the matter terminated to the satisfaction of all parties. Now I would ask you candidly whether the claim of the people of Vermont was not for a long time confined solely, or very nearly, to that tract of country which is described in the resolve of Congress of the 21st of August last, and whether, agreeably to the tenor of your own letter to me, the late extension of your claim upon New Hampshire and New York, was not more of a political manœuver, than one in which you conceived yourselves justifiable. If my first question be answered in the affirmative, it certainly bars your new claim; and, if my second be well founded, your end is answered, and you have nothing to do but withdraw your jurisdiction to your old limits, and obtain an acknowledgment of independence and sovereignty, under the resolve of the 21st of August, for so much territory as does not interfere with the ancient established boundaries of New York, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts. I persuade myself you will see and acquiesce in the reason, the justice, and indeed the necessity of such a decision. You must consider, sir, that the point now in dispute is of the utmost political importance to the future union and peace of this great country. The State of Vermont, if acknowledged, will be the first new one admitted into the confederacy, and, if suffered to encroach upon the ancient established boundaries of adjacent ones, will serve as a precedent for others, which it may hereafter be expedient to set off, to make the same unjustifiable demands. Thus, in my private opinion, while it behoves the delegates of the states now confederated to do ample justice to a body of people sufficiently respectable by their numbers, and entitled by other claims to be admitted into that confederation, it becomes them also to attend to the interests of their constituents, and see, that, under the appearance of justice to one, they do not materially injure the rights of others. I am apt to think this is the prevailing opinion of Congress, and that your late extension of claim has, upon the principles I have above mentioned, rather diminished than increased the number of your friends, and that, if such extension should be persisted in, it will be made a common cause, and not considered as only affecting the rights of the states immediately interested in the loss of territory, a loss of too serious a nature not to claim the attention of any people. There is no calamity within the compass of my foresight, which is more to be dreaded, than a necessity of coercion on the part of congress; and consequently every endeavor should be used to prevent the execution of so disagreeable a measure. It must involve the ruin of that state against which the resentment of the others is pointed.

¹ As Vermont utterly refused to submit the question of her independence to Congress, she really had nothing to submit, under the resolution of Sept. 24 1779, until the East and West Unions had been effected. By these, questions of boundary were created, which Vermont was willing to refer to Congress.

I will only add a few words upon the subject of the negotiations which have been carried on between you and the enemy in Canada and in New York. I will take it for granted, as you assert it, that they were so far innocent, that there never was any serious intention of joining Great Britain in their attempts to subjugate your country; but it has this certain bad tendency: it has served to give some ground to that delusive opinion of the enemy, upon which they in a great measure found their hopes of success. They have numerous friends among us, who only want a proper opportunity to show themselves openly, and that internal disputes and feuds will soon break us in pieces; at the same time the seeds of distrust and jealousy are scattered among ourselves by a conduct of this kind. If you are sincere in your professions, these will be additional motives for accepting the terms, which have been offered, and which appear to me equitable, and thereby convincing the common enemy that all their expectations of disunion are vain, and that they have been worsted in the use of their own weapon,—deception.

As you unbosomed yourself to me, I thought I had the greater right of speaking my sentiments openly and candidly to you. I have done so; and if they should produce the effects which I sincerely wish, that of an honorable and amicable adjustment of a matter, which, if carried to hostile length, may destroy the future happiness of my country, I shall have attained my end, while the enemy will be defeated in theirs.

Believe me to be, with gr't resp't, sir, &c., GEO. WASHINGTON.

Gen. Washington to Gen. Schuyler.—[Extract.]

Jan. 8, 1782. Enclosing his letter to Chittenden of the 1st, and requesting Schuyler to have it carefully transmitted, Washington added:

This letter I have shown to a number of my friends, members of Congress and others, and they have advised me to write to Mr. Chittenden in my private character, give him my opinion upon the unjustifiableness of the extension of their claim, and advise them to accept the terms offered by the resolve of last August. This I have done fully and forcibly, and perhaps it may have some effect upon Mr. Chittenden and the leaders in Vermont. I would wish you to keep the purport of this to yourself, as I do not wish to have my sentiments publicly known.¹

DEFENSE OF THE EASTERN AND WESTERN UNIONS.

Jan. 11 1782, Lieut. Gov. Payne, Bezaleel Woodward, Ethan Allen, John Fassett jr. and Matthew Lyon were appointed by a resolution of the Governor and Council "to make a draft of the political affairs of this state to be published;" which resulted in the following pamphlet:¹

THE PRESENT STATE OF THE CONTROVERSY between the STATES OF NEW-YORK and NEW-HAMPSHIRE on the one part, and the STATE OF VERMONT on the other. Hartford [Conn.] Printed by Hudson & Goodwin. M.DCC.LXXXII.

IT has ever been the practice of the people of Vermont from their first settlement of this disputed territory, to appeal to the impartial judgment of the public as to the justice of their cause, against the claims and demands of contiguous governments to the jurisdiction and right of soil of this territory, and their natural and inherent right to form into a political society, and emancipate into a regular constituted government, as well to rid themselves from the inconveniences and evils inseparable from a state of nature and anarchy which they had long laboured under, as, to exempt themselves from the usurpation and iron rod of the government of New-York. In those matters the public have most generally favored Vermont with their approbation, but how comes it to pass that Vermont has laid claim to the New-Hampshire Grants East of Connecticut River, to the old Mason line, and to a district of territory to the westward of the New-Hampshire Grants (which had been granted and settled by the former government of New-York) as far to the west as the centre of Hudson's river.

The reasons which induced Vermont to thus extend her jurisdiction, are too prolix to be particularly given in this small publication, and therefore, the bulky part of them, are proposed to be shortly printed in a larger pamphlet; however to observe briefly, it is well known that the government of New-York, both before and since the late revolution, have claimed the jurisdiction and soil of the land comprehended in the territory over which Vermont first erected and extended its governmental jurisdiction, viz. from within about twenty miles east from Hudson's River, to Connecticut River, bounding Northerly on the 45th degree of latitude, and Southerly on the north line of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

For the space of near fifteen years previous to the commencement of the present war, the inhabitants of that territory, for a variety of reasons heretofore published, were in opposition to the jurisdiction of New-York, and great part of the time in arms, against the oppressions, laws and authority of that government, within the said territory; for the subsequent grantees under New-York at law challenged the lands and labours of the inhabitants who had previously purchased and settled the lands under the government of New-Hampshire.

During those conflicts with the government of New-York, a great plurality of proclamations were at different periods given out by the respective Governors of New-York, for the express purpose of apprehending, and (as they phrased it) to bring to condign punishment, those delinquent inhabitants, and large rewards were therein offered for that purpose, so that great part of the inhabitants had, at one time or other, become obnoxious to those proclamations, either as original actors or as accomplices.

The last memorable transactions of the government of New-York, prior to its revolution (from a province to a State) towards those inhabitants, was the passing twelve acts of outlawry against them which had the sanction of their legislative body, which wholly precluded them from the privilege of governmental protection, and amounted to a positive declaration of war against them; upon which the inhabitants of the said district (then called the New-Hampshire Grants) by the authority of their then leaders, published a declaration of a defensive war against the government of New-York, but the present revolution commencing procrastinated the decision of the dispute at arms, as both parties entered the list of opposition to the assumed prerogative of the parliament of Britain over the then colonies.

The United States declared their independence the 4th day of July 1776, and Vermont announced theirs the 15th day of January next following.

The 22d day of August 1778, the State of New-Hampshire made a demand on the State of Vermont of a relinquishment of the jurisdiction of the New-Hampshire Grants to the eastward of Connecticut river and to the westward of the old Mason line,¹ over which, at that time, Vermont had begun to exercise jurisdiction, supposing that the whole of these Grants, on both sides of Connecticut river, had a right to unite in one entire State, in consequence of the annihilation of Kingly power, which alone had connected the Grants east of Connecticut river and west of the Mason line to New-Hampshire, and the Grants west of Connecticut river to New-York, as by the royal adjudication of their boundary line on Connecticut river in 1764, in the determination of which the inhabitants of those Grants were unknowing and wholly passive; and all the pretensions which the Governors of New-York and New-Hampshire ever had from the crown of England, to any jurisdiction over those Grants, were derived in their commissions pointing out their boundaries of jurisdiction, or to some regal decree of the King, as that of 1764; which the State of New-Hampshire principally urged, as a reason why Vermont should recede from their claim of jurisdiction to the east of Connecticut river, for there was no other way of ascertaining the bounds of any of the United States but by the lines formerly established by the English government; their words are these,

“Were not those towns” east of Connecticut river “settled and cultivated under grants from the Governor of New-Hampshire; are they not in the lines thereof as settled by the King of Great Britain, prior to the present æra? Is there any ascertaining the boundaries of any of the United States of America, but by the lines formerly established by Great Britain? I am sure there is not.”

Though this reasoning was not fully satisfactory to Vermont, viewing the whole matter on a large scale, yet as they were previously engaged in a spirited controversy with the State of New-York, the legislature of Vermont complied with the demand of New-Hampshire, and on the 12th day of February 1779 relinquished their claim of jurisdiction to the New Hampshire Grants to the eastward of Connecticut river.

The prolixity of the transactions between the respective States of New-Hampshire and Vermont, in the settlement of their boundary line on Connecticut river, will not admit it a place in this, but may be seen at large in a pamphlet entitled “A concise Refutation of the claims of New-Hampshire and Massachusetts-Bay to the Territory of Vermont.”²

In March, 1779, the legislature of New-Hampshire proposed the laying of their jurisdictional claim to the whole of the New-Hampshire Grants, which included the State of Vermont, against which Vermont strenuously remonstrated at the General Court of New-Hampshire, but to no purpose. They violated their settlement of the boundary line, which a few months before had been amicably settled between them and the State of Vermont (as before mentioned) and laid claim to the State of Vermont, breaking over the royal line of 1764 aforesaid, although that line had been the principle predicate of their arguments with Vermont, to relinquish their claim to the Grants east of Connecticut river, and by which they enforced their right of jurisdiction to the same, and which, upon their own principle, operates with equal weight against their claim to the Grants to the westward of the same river, alias, of the said royal line. But it seems that New-Hampshire will make something, any thing, or nothing, not only with the line of 1764, but with the line which (previous to their claim of the jurisdiction to the territory of Vermont) their government had adjusted with that of Vermont, just as their fancy and ambition may prompt them.

New-Hampshire having laid claim to the State of Vermont, united her efforts with the State of New-York to ruin and overturn the jurisdiction thereof, and began to sow discord and make divisions, on the east side of the Green Mountains and west of Connecticut river; inveigling some of the inhabitants to renounce their allegiance to Vermont and connect with New-Hampshire, while New-York were as industrious in seducing others on the west side of the mountains, to unite with them, but met with less success than their eastern ally. Their joint influence in the Congress of the United States was so great, that they procured from them, on the 24th day of September, 1779, a resolve, appointing the first day of February then next, to adjust the claims of those States to the territory of Vermont, with a proviso that they would enact laws empowering Congress to do it, which they accordingly did, and the inhabitants of the New-Hampshire Grants (in the language in that case adopted) were served with a copy of that resolution. But Vermont remonstrated against the jurisdictional right of Congress to determine their independence which had been previously established by the authority of the people of the territory of Vermont, whose right it was to constitute and organize government, and though those claiming States did not succeed, in procuring of Congress a recognizance of their said jurisdictional claims, or either of them, over the said territory, they nevertheless prevented this State from a federal union with the United States to this day, in consequence whereof this State has been exposed to the whole force of the enemy in Canada, without any alliances [with the neighboring states.]

In December, 1780, Vermont, with written proposals from its supreme executive authority, accompanied by a special agent, solicited those claiming States, and each and every of the New England States, for an alliance against the common enemy, but no answer was returned from any or either of them: In this critical situation Vermont was solicited, by two respectable districts of inhabitants, one from each of those claiming States which lay contiguous to the east and west side of it, to be admitted into union and governmental connection with them, as well to enjoy the privileges of their constitution and laws as by them together with their own mutual assistance to be protected from the common enemy. The legislature of Vermont, taking into their serious consideration the perplexed and embarrassed circumstances of the State, occasioned partly from its local situation to Canada, and partly by the designs and influence of those claiming States, and perceiving it was through their united efforts that this State were precluded a union with the United States, and that they made and fomented schisms among her citizens, and as their numbers and resources were inadequate to oppose the enemy's force in Canada, with a rational prospect of success, and that a union with those contiguous districts would augment their strength, and enable them to make a much better defence against the enemy, and heal those internal divisions among themselves, and give those litigious claiming States to experience the evils of intestine broils, which they had prepared for Vermont: Further considering that these districts, now called the east and west unions, had been principally defended by this State ever since the surrendery of the British army by Gen. Burgoyne, and that those districts had been neglected as to their defence from the common enemy, by the States to which they had previously yielded allegiance, more particularly the western district, which this State have reason to conclude was done by New-York, partly with design to lay them more exposed to the common enemy. That the inhabitants of those districts were, by natural situation to the waters of the northern lakes, and exposedness with the inhabitants of the old territory of Vermont to the incursions of the enemy from Canada, which in this or in future wars would render it expedient and best that they should belong to this State, as well as more remotely so to the United States, as it will make a strong barrier against Canada. But be it in future as it will, at present, self-preservation and mutual defence rendered it indispensably necessary, that the inhabitants of those districts, with those of the old territory, should unite in one entire State, and accordingly, on the 14th day of February 1781, the legislature of Vermont laid a jurisdictional claim to them, in consequence of which they became incorporated into this State.

Nor have the States of New-York or New-Hampshire, or either of them, upon the stating of their own claims, any more right of complaint against Vermont for forming the late Unions than in forming government within its first limits; forasmuch as they denominate the whole of Vermont, unions and all, a usurped government, and call its inhabitants their revolted subjects, and threaten the subjugation of them. However, it is in no ways probable that Vermont would have laid a jurisdictional claim to any part of the jurisdiction of those claiming states, had they not persisted in the prosecution of their unreasonable claims against the independence of this state. Though it is observable, that neither the old territory, or either of its unions, were ever included in any grant or charter from the crown of England, to either of the governments or people of New-Hampshire or New-York, or to their predecessors; but were extra provincial land, without the limits of any original jurisdiction whatever, but was altered from one jurisdiction to another by the sovereign mandates of the king of Great Britain. But if those royal mandates are admitted at this day to be binding, as giving validity to jurisdictional lines; that to his Excellency Governor Philip Skeen, from the same authority, [should be,] which was the best of the sort which affected the old disputed territory of Vermont and its western union, over which it vested him with jurisdictional authority, and which on the position of the validity of royal traditions and boundaries, would fatally operate against the claim of the State of New-York, and wholly frustrate the arguments deduced from the kingly settlement of their boundary line with New-Hampshire of 1764 aforesaid.

The written express condition upon which Vermont admitted those unions was, that provided that Vermont should be admitted into the federal union with the United States, Congress should determine its boundaries (alias its unions) agreeable to the mode prescribed by the Articles of Confederation of the United States.

On the 22d of August last, Congress proposed that Vermont should exclude or nullify their said unions, and then be admitted into the federal union of the United States. But why did not the legislature of Vermont at their sessions in October last dissolve their said unions and end the controversy as Congress proposed? It was not in their power to do it; the previous conditions of dissolving the unions were impossible, as the inhabitants of those unions were in the most solemn manner admitted to all and singular of the privileges and protections of government, in common with those other citizens who first erected it. The faith of government was pledged for their security, and they became incorporated into the same political body, and composed a respectable part of its legislature. Previous to the forming of those unions, had Congress proposed a union of Vermont with the United States, bonfires and public rejoicings would have been displayed as testimonies of their gratitude to Congress, and its legislative body would have unitedly complied with it.¹ Notwithstanding the good intention of Congress, had Vermont abandoned their unions to the vindictive rage of New-York and New-Hampshire, had it been in their power, would have been to their indellible and eternal reproach. Had the legislature of Vermont attempted a dissolution of their unions, it would have flung them, and consequently the whole state, into such intestine broils, that they would have fell an easy prey to their watchful competitors, viz. New-York & New-Hampshire, and not only be damn'd and tantaliz'd over by them, but spurn'd and derided by the New-England States, to whom they have granted a large quantity of land, and incorporated it into townships.

The legislature of the State of New-York, at their late session, renewed their claim to the property and sovereignty of the lands of Vermont, as far to the Eastward as Connecticut river, and to latitude forty-five degrees north; and remonstrated against the said resolution of Congress of the 22^d [20th] of August last—and also against the authority of Congress to determine the Independence of Vermont, which they predicate on the articles of their confederation. So that what effect this peremptory remonstrance, grounded on former compacts, would have had with Congress, relative to the admittance of this State into the union of the United States, provided Vermont were disencumbered of its unions, is uncertain, though most probable it would have prevented it. Congress may now, if they think proper, admit Vermont into union, and then determine its boundaries, or which is the same thing, its unions, agreeable to the condition upon which the unions took place, so that it is in the power of Congress, by taking Vermont into union with the United States, legally to dissolve the unions if they think best; but not in the power of the legislature of Vermont to do it. The legislative body of Vermont at their session in October last, proposed to the legislatures of the States of New-York and New-Hampshire, to refer the disputes relative to their respective boundary lines, to the final arbitrament and decision of indifferent men, and pledged the faith of government to abide their determination; which proposals were officially transmitted to both of those States, but no manner of answer has been returned to this State—And why? the cause is very obvious; for had those States complied with the proposals of this [State], they must have necessarily surceased their respective claims to the old territory of Vermont (an object too dear to them to part with) for there could be no arbitration without parties, and no parties without Vermont was admitted to be a state, which would have been implicitly acknowledged by those states, by arbitrating on its boundaries. But queries may arise in the minds of the reader, Was it honest in Vermont to extend their jurisdiction upon the States of New-York and New-Hampshire? Previous to the solution of this question, it is requisite to determine whether honesty is trumps or not. Sharp is the word. Each of those states had in the first place laid their respective claims to the old territory of Vermont; and though Vermont, prior to extending its claims, had earnestly solicited them to surcease their claim to Vermont—accede to their independence, and make an alliance with them against the common enemy, which proposals were officially transmitted to those States: But no; they would return no answer to revolted subjects—Let them struggle in their insignificant notions of independence, they will answer as a forlorn hope to secure the liege subjects of New-York and New-Hampshire; they are nicely situated to Canada, and when the war is terminated, if any of them remain alive, we old confederated States can easily subject them; but if we think it most prudent, we have a right to call on the whole confederacy of the United States to crush them; so that at most they are but our vassals, and cheag'd [cheated] with imaginary prospects of liberty (a thing greatly talked of in this world and but little enjoyed) will go through the hazards and fatigues of that exposed part of our frontiers better than as though they had some time past been subjugated, which we old and politic states can do any time when it best serves our purposes; we know the length of the tether and can shorten it when we please, and have some time since divided their territory between us; we have them snug enough, and scorn to answer any of their proposals. This is the language of their silence and of their claims; so that the question concerning Vermont's unions, is not so much whether it accords with old homespun honesty, as whether it is politically so; or in fine, whether it was honest for Vermont in their trying circumstances to make any accessions of power against the avowed coercive designs of those states, or the common enemy. Before we leave this subject, we will query whether it was not as honest in this state to lay a jurisdictional claim to the grants east of Connecticut river, as it was for New-Hampshire previously to break over the mutual settlement of their boundary line with Vermont on Connecticut river, and lay claim to the then whole territory of Vermont. So much for honesty.

But, say the enemies to the independence of Vermont, why was there but little or no fighting between them and the enemy in Canada last campaign? Surely there is some negotiation taking place between them inimical to the United States of America—Rouse the whole confederacy and destroy Vermont. But why, what evil have they sustained from the northward? Have the enemy been permitted to pass through Vermont to invade the United States? No, not yet: but it is going to be done—So is the last trumpet going to sound, but not yet, and it is more than probable that neither of these events will take place in our days. But how came all this jealousy and talk in America? It was undoubtedly first promoted by those who were impatient that the inhabitants of this State should have been destroyed by the common enemy (or by weak and self-conceited politicians which are apt to swarm in republican governments.)—To the former it is a mystery that Vermont yet lives; they think that having prevented its union with the United States it must have terminated in their destruction: and inasmuch as they are at a loss about these and those things, it may be best that they remain so: This publication is by no means meant to open their eyes, but leaves them to grope in the dark, conjecturing what to their depraved ideas of politics appears most eligible.¹ However, there are murmurs circulated that the whole confederacy of the United States will join and extirpate Vermont, which is as unlikely as that the tail of the next comet will set the world on fire. What eminent services have Vermont done in the common cause in the course of this war, even to those claiming States who are devoting it to destruction, in order to take possession of the fertile territory; but as it is merely interested views which unite those claiming States to endeavour the ruin of Vermont, which cannot be an inducement to the other eleven United States; it is not supposable that they will be duped to espouse their cause, the reward of which could be nothing but infamy and disgrace. How inglorious would the victorious Continental Troops, just returned from the capture of a proud and haughty army, with a Cornwallis, the pride of England, at their head, appear in arms, puissantly trampling on the rights of a brave and meritorious people, and sacrificing the liberties which they have been valiantly supporting; and all to corroborate the venal and ambitious designs of controverting States; Heavens forbid it! Preserve their laurels, and smile propitiously on Vermont, who want nothing but justice should take place between them and their competitors. Did not Vermont strike a respectable part of the mortal blow towards capturing General Burgoyne, which produced the alliance with France, and in the chain of causes brought the French fleet to Chesapeake, and brought about a second memorable era in America. But notwithstanding what has been said on this subject, we will premise, for it is probable, that New-York and New-Hampshire will urge the confederacy at large to suppress Vermont, and subject it to their jurisdiction; but it is observable, that both of those claiming States claim this territory against each other; so that it will be pre-requisitely necessary for Congress to ascertain and establish the boundary line between those States, prior to any supposed subjugation of Vermont to those jurisdictions, or to either of them; for otherwise there could be no object in view in a supposed conquest of Vermont: But after all, it would still remain a dispute who should share the conquest, whether New-York or New-Hampshire, or whether either of them should extend jurisdiction over the disputed premises; or if over any part, how far either the one or the other, or either of them, should extend jurisdiction: So that the States of New-York and New-Hampshire, previous to the conquest of Vermont, by the confederacy of the United States, must go through a trial at law, agreeable to the articles of confederation or otherwise, in order to settle their boundary line, or else pull off the mask and publicly own the fact, with which they stand indicted by Vermont, viz. That they have some time past clandestinely agreed upon the line of the division of that State, and so produce it to Congress as a line mutually agreed on between themselves; but I advize them to pretend to Congress, and to the world, that it was but very recently agreed upon between them.

But why does not Vermont call on the eleven United and disinterested States to espouse their cause against the oppressions of the other two; because she does not belong to the confederacy of the United States. But how came those claiming States to have a right to challenge assistance from the United States, as predicated on the guarantee of their confederation, to espouse their quarrel with the state of Vermont, which had unremittingly existed many years with New-York and some considerable time with New-Hampshire, before the confederacy of the United States took place, which was on the first day of March, 1781, and in the fourth year of the governmental independence of Vermont, and fourteen days after Vermont had formed the before mentioned unions, which was on the fourteenth day of February, 1781. Will any advocates for the confederacy of the United States be so hardy as to pretend that it could be in force before it existed, or that it could possibly have a retrospective obligatory nature, any more than a law before it is enacted? Every one will determine in the negative; and consequently the State of Vermont, including its unions, cannot come within the reach of the guarantee of the confederation of the eleven United States, to those other claiming United States; nor is there any manner of propriety in any supposable demand of any one, or both of the States of New-York and New-Hampshire, on the guarantee of their confederacy, to interfere with or espouse their controversy with Vermont, previous to the first day of March last, when their confederacy took place.¹

Furthermore, those claiming States, previous to Vermont's extending their jurisdictional claims upon them, were the aggressors, in that they unitedly and spiritedly persisted in prosecuting their respective claims to the territory of Vermont, and made use of any and every indirect measure in their power, to accomplish their designs and frustrate the independence of Vermont, and thereby necessitated her to lay claim to those unions, to preserve herself, so that if there be any wrong in Vermont in laying claim to them, in itself, simply considered, New-York and New-Hampshire were the procuring cause of it, and therefore cannot take advantage of their own wrong to blame Vermont, or have any rightful demand on the confederacy to assist them, so as with or without them to ruin Vermont, who would never have made those claims on them, had not their previous unwarrantable claims against her, occasioned the laying of them.

It seems that those claiming States chuse to be at liberty to claim and vex Vermont, and make what reprisals they can upon her, yet, if Vermont return the compliment, as we vulgarly say tit for tat, they complain of abuse and injustice; and she is threatened with awful desolation from the confederacy at large, if we may credit the reports of the sticklers of those claiming States. Vermont does not mean to be so over-righteous as by that means to die before her time; but for the States of New-York and New-Hampshire, to stand griping their respective claims fast hold of Vermont, and at the same time make such a hedious outcry against the gripe of Vermont upon them, is altogether romantic and laughable.

PROCEEDINGS IN CONGRESS ON VERMONT—DEC. 1781 TO

WEDNESDAY, December 5, 1781.

A letter, of the 24th of November last, from the governor of the state of New-York, was read, together with concurrent resolutions of the senate and assembly of the said state, declarative of their sense on the acts of Congress of the 7th and 20th of August last, respecting the people residing on the New-Hampshire Grants, on the west side of Connecticut river:

² Journals of Congress, Folwell's edition, 1781–82, Vol. VII, p. 189.

Ordered, That the concurrent resolutions be filed in the Secretary's office among the archives of Congress.

On the next day Mr. Floyd of New York, seconded by Mr. Middleton of S. C., moved to amend the foregoing record, by adding the words "And protesting against any attempt made by Congress to carry into execution their said acts of the 7th and 20th of August last." Five states voted aye, and only one, Rhode Island, no; but as a majority of the states did not vote in the affirmative the motion was lost.

The resolutions were as follows:

[From Slade's State Papers, pp. 163-166.]

STATE OF NEW-YORK.

In Senate and Assembly, the fifteenth and nineteenth days of November, in the sixth year of the independence of the said state, one thousand seven hundred and eighty one:

Resolved, That it appears, from sufficient evidence, that Congress did, by their act of the 24th of September, 1779, inter alia, earnestly recommend to the states of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay and New-York, to pass laws, expressly authorising Congress to hear and determine all differences between them, relative to their respective boundaries, in the mode prescribed by the articles of confederation; and also, by express laws for the purpose, to refer to the decision of Congress all differences or disputes between them, relative to jurisdiction, which they might, respectively, have with the people of the district called the New-Hampshire grants; and, also, to authorise Congress to proceed to hear and determine all disputes subsisting between the grantees of the said states, respecting titles to lands lying within the said district; and also, that Congress did, thereby, pledge their faith, after a full and fair hearing of all the said differences and disputes, to decide and determine the same, according to equity, and carry into execution and support their determinations and decisions in the premises.

Resolved, That it appears from the like evidence, that, at the time of passing the said act, and for above a century and an half before, to wit, from the first settlement of the colony of New-York, now the state of New-York, the said colony and this state included, by most indubitable right and title, both of jurisdiction and property, all the lands, among others to the westward thereof, lying north of the north bounds of the Massachusetts-Bay, up to the latitude of forty-five degrees north, and extending between those boundaries, from Hudson's river to Connecticut river, including the waters of the northern lakes, and other waters within those boundaries: that the above extent of territory, which includes the district, called the New-Hampshire grants, was, by a decree of the British King, to whom the sovereignty thereof, as parcel of the colony of New-York, belonged, made in his Privy Council, the twentieth day of July, one thousand seven hundred and sixty-four, between the colonies of New-York and New-Hampshire, declared to be parcel of the said colony of New-York: that, in consequence thereof, the government of the colony of New-Hampshire, expressly ceded and relinquished all claim and title of jurisdiction of the above territory: that, thereupon, the same was, by acts of legislation of the colony of New-York, formed into counties, and such parts thereof as were settled, were represented in the Legislature of that colony: that they were also represented in the Provincial Congress and Convention of this State of New-York; received aids from them, as parcel of this State, both before and after the declaration of the independence of these United States; assisted, by their representatives, in forming the constitution of this state, and fully submitted to the jurisdiction thereof, till in the year one thousand seven hundred and seventy-seven.

Resolved, That it appears of record, that, notwithstanding the above clear and conclusive evidence of right, on the part of this state of New-York, to the territory above described, including, as aforesaid, the New-Hampshire grants, and though the Legislature of this state might, therefore, consistently with the strictest justice, have asserted their dignity and sovereignty over the district of the New-Hampshire grants; yet they, respectfully adopting the sentiments of Congress, that it was essential to the interest of the whole confederacy, carefully to avoid all intestine dissensions and maintain domestic peace and good order, acquiesced in the submission recommended by the said act of Congress, and, accordingly, on the 21st day of October, one thousand seven hundred and seventy nine, passed a law of this state for that purpose.

Resolved, That it satisfactorily appears that, in consequence of said law, the agents, thereby appointed to manage the controversy on the part of this state, at very great public expence, collected the necessary evidence to support the facts asserted in the second above mentioned resolution; and that, after many and repeated delays, they were, at length, on the nineteenth day of September, one thousand seven hundred and eighty, in the presence of all the parties interested (except the state of Massachusetts-Bay, who had not passed the necessary act of submission) indulged with an hearing before Congress; in the course of which, such evidence as above mentioned, was produced on the part of this state, as, in the opinion of the agents of this state, fully proved to Congress, the several facts contained in the said second above mentioned resolution; and that, on the twenty-seventh day of the same month, all parties being present, (except the state of Massachusetts-Bay, and Messrs. Allen and Bradley, agents for the people of the New-Hampshire grants, claiming to be a separate independent jurisdiction, who, though duly notified, then declined any further attendance) the state of New-Hampshire, who had also submitted by their legislative act, had an hearing in Congress, in support of their claim to the jurisdiction over the district, called the New-Hampshire grants; that this state has, on their part, fully complied with every requisite contained in the said act of Congress, of the twenty-fourth day of September, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-nine, and has, accordingly, from that day to this, abstained from the grant of any lands within the said district, and also from the exercise of jurisdiction over any of the inhabitants of the said district, who had not acknowledged the same; that, on the contrary, the revolted inhabitants of the said district having arbitrarily erected themselves into a separate and independent state, unrecognized as such, until this day, by this state, or the other United States, and, having framed a government, they have passed laws, granted lands, and exercised civil and military authority over the persons and property of those inhabitants, who profess themselves to be subjects of this state, in manifest subversion of the right of sovereignty and property of this state, and in direct contempt and infringement of several acts of Congress: that, although they had contented themselves with the exercise of jurisdiction principally up to a line running nearly parallel to Hudson's river, at twenty miles distant therefrom, until the month of June last: yet, at that time, notwithstanding the censure and prohibition of Congress, and in contempt of their recommendation and authority, by an act of their usurped government, they extended a jurisdictional claim over all the lands situate north of the north line of the state of Massachusetts, and extending the same to Hudson's river, then east of the centre of the deepest channel of said river, to the head thereof, from thence east of a north line, being extended to latitude forty-five degrees, and south of the same line, including all the lands and waters to the place where the said pretended state then assumed to exercise jurisdiction; inserting, at the same time, in their said act, a clause not to exercise jurisdiction within their jurisdictional claims, for the time being: that, of all these matters Congress have been fully apprized, and though repeatedly solicited thereto, by the delegates of this state, have not, hitherto, made any decision and determination of the said controversy, according to equity, as by their said act of the 24th day of September, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-nine, they pledged themselves, and by the law of this state they were authorized to do: that, to put an end to this delay, so injurious to the jurisdiction of this state, so subversive of its interests, peace and policy, so promotive of a repetition of those violent acts of usurped civil and military authority, which, in the judgment of Congress, declared in their resolution of the second of October, one thousand seven hundred and eighty, were highly unwarrantable and subversive of the peace and welfare of the United States, and from which they require the people inhabiting the said grants to desist, until the decision and determination of Congress in the premises, they have actually presumed to exercise sovereign authority and jurisdiction, to the full extent of their said jurisdictional claim, by appointing civil and military officers, making levies of men and money, rescuing delinquents from the hands of justice of this state, at the expence of the blood and the loss of the life of one of the subjects of this state, in the execution of his lawful duty, and forbidding the officers of justice of this state to execute their offices, as appears from the papers attendant on his Excellency the Governor's speech, and other due information; that, among these, to shew the actual exercise of jurisdiction by the usurped government of the said grants, by the stile and title of the state of Vermont, over the territory contained within the said jurisdictional claim, is the copy of a certain proclamation, bearing date the eighteenth day of July, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-one, purporting to be under the seal of the said pretended state, signed by Thomas Chittenden, who stiles himself their governor, which, after divers falsities and absurdities therein contained, asserts that commissions, both civil and military, had then been lately issued by the supreme authority of the said pretended state, to persons chosen agreeable to the laws and customs thereof, in the several districts and corporations within the limits of the above mentioned western or jurisdictional claim; strictly requires, charges and commands all persons, of whatsoever quality or denomination, residing within the said western claim of jurisdiction, to take due notice of the laws and orders of the said pretended state, and to govern themselves accordingly, on the pain of incurring the penalties therein contained; and strictly requires, charges and commands all magistrates, justices of the peace, sheriffs, constables, and all other civil and all military officers, to be active and vigilant in executing the laws aforesaid, without partiality.

Resolved, That the Legislature of this state is greatly alarmed at the evident intention of Congress, from political expedience, as it is expressed in a letter from his Excellency the President of Congress, to his Excellency the Governor of this state, of the 8th of August last, and as is evinced in their acts of the 7th and 20th of the same month, enclosed therein, to establish an arbitrary boundary, whereby to exclude out of this state the greatest part of territory described in the second resolution above mentioned, belonging, most unquestionably, to this state, as part, parcel and member thereof, and to erect such dismemberment, possessed by the revolted subjects of this state, into an independent state, and, as such, to admit them into the federal union of these United States; especially as the two last mentioned acts seem to express the sense of Congress, that the territories of this state, by the articles of confederation are, and, as in fact and truth they are, by the second and third articles thereof, guaranteed, and still more especially, as by a proviso in the ninth article, it is provided that no state shall be deprived of territory for the benefit of the United States.

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Legislature, that Congress have not any authority, by the articles of confederation, in any wise, to intermeddle with the former territorial extent of jurisdiction or property of either of these United States, except in cases of disputes concerning the same, between two or more states in the union, nor to admit into the union, even any British colony, except Canada, without the consent of nine states, nor any other state whatsoever, nor, above all, to create a new state, by dismembering one of the thirteen United States, without their universal consent.

Resolved, That in case of any attempt by Congress to carry into execution their said acts of the seventh and twentieth of August last, this Legislature, with all due deference to Congress, are bound, in duty to their constituents, to declare the same an assumption of power, in the face of the said act of submission of this state, and against the clear letter and spirit of the second, third, ninth and eleventh articles of the confederation, and a manifest infraction of the same; and do, therefore, hereby solemnly protest against the same.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forthwith made and certified by the President of the Senate, and the Speaker of the Assembly, in presence of his Excellency the Governor, who is hereby requested to attest the same with the great seal of this state, and transmit it, without delay, to Congress, to the end that the same may be entered on their journals, or filed in their archives, in perpetuam rei memoriam; and that another copy, so certified as aforesaid, be delivered to the delegates of this state, for their use and guidance, and that they be, and hereby are, expressly directed and required to enter their dissent on every step which may be taken in, and towards, carrying the said two last mentioned acts of Congress into execution.

Dec. 20, the committee on Gov. Clinton's letter of Nov. 24 reported in part and Congress ordered that two tons of gun-powder be furnished and charged to the state of New York.¹

FRIDAY, January 25, 1782.²

The committee, consisting of Mr. Ellery, Mr. Randolph, Mr. Law, Mr. N. W. Jones and Mr. Clymer, to whom was recommitted the report of a committee, on sundry letters and papers respecting the district of country, commonly known by the name of the New-Hampshire Grants, delivered in their report; which was taken into consideration and debated.

¹ In October 1781, when preparing to suppress Vermont authority in the "western district" by force, Gen. Gansevort wrote to Gov. Clinton for powder. On the 18th of that month the Governor replied, saying that compliance with this request was out of his power, as, out of the whole supply ordered by Washington for New York in the previous spring, only five hundred pounds had been received.—See ante, p. 328.

MONDAY, Jan. 28, 1782.¹

The report of the committee respecting the New-Hampshire Grants, was debated and referred to a grand committee.

On the 1st, 5th, 7th, 12th, 13th and 16th of Feb. the following letters from the Vermont Delegates were sent to Congress—part of them to the President, and others to the chairman of the committee which had Vermont matters in charge. These papers, with the exception of the first, are not named in the journal of Congress.

PHILADELPHIA 30th Jan. 1782.

Sir—On the fourteenth day of August last, we had the satisfaction to communicate to Congress, a duplicate of our commission to attend on that Hon^{ble}. body for the purposes therein named. We have now the honor to enclose a duplicate of our reappointment together with instructions to further negotiate the business of our appointment.³

Our colleague, who was expected in town before this time, has occasioned the delay of this amount. Whenever he arrives (who is hourly expected) we shall then be ready to lay before Congress such papers and matters as we are, or may be furnished with on his arrival.

We have the honor to be with great respect

Your Excellency's most Obed^{nt} Humble Servants,

JONAS FAY &
IRA ALLEN.

To His Excellency, the President of Congress.

[Endorsed] Read Feb. 1st.

Memorial of Jonas Fay and Ira Allen.¹

The Hon^{ble} Committee of Congress.—The undersigned, Delegates for the State of Vermont by virtue of their appointment and Commission, to repair to the American Congress for the purposes therein named, and in pursuance of their special instructions by the Governor and Council of said State, have the honor to represent,

That, the citizens of that part of America formerly known by the name of the N. Hampshire Grants, did in consequence of certain disputes subsisting between them and some of the British Colonies in America, form themselves into Committees of Safety and Conventions for the preservation of their just rights against lawless power, soon after the edict of G. Britain in July 1764.

That, this kind of Government was continued by adjournments and new elections until after the Grand Era of American Independence, and until the twelfth day of March, A. D. 1778, when it emerged into a Constitutional Legislature.

That immediately after the Battle of the 19th day of April A. D. 1775 at Lexington, those Inhabitants took an offensive part against British usurpation; and have since exerted themselves in common with their brethren in America in the support of the rights, liberties and independence of the United States.

That the existence of the State of Vermont, (upon revolution principles) is at least coeval with any other of the free states of America and founded on the same grand basis of Liberty and therefore (in our opinion) entitled of every blessing and privilege which the united states do or may in the future enjoy by virtue of their stipulated union and convention each with the other.

We therefore take this method to express our wishes, and do in behalf of the said State of Vermont solicit and most earnestly request that the United States in Congress assembled would recognize her independence, admit her into the federal Union of the United States of America and to a seat in Congress—that She may yield and receive mutual aid in the general defense and obtain an equitable settlement of her boundary lines.

Done in Philadelphia, in obedience to the instructions aforesaid, this 7th day of Feb^r 1782.

JONAS FAY,
IRA ALLEN.

Hon. Sam^l Livermore, [Chairman.]

Jonas Fay, Ira Allen and Abel Curtis to Samuel Livermore.²

To the Honorable Committee of Congress.

The undersigned delegates of the State of Vermont beg leave to observe by way of addition that in royal governments in America when regal power ceased the people were then left at full liberty to institute such government as might appear to them to be most conducive to their peace and happiness. In this situation a respectable number of the now citizens of the State of Vermont in the eastern union (so called) formed themselves into Committees of Safety and Conventions; the other part connected with New Hampshire in a temporary compact only which they have since rejected and united with the aforesaid Convention by which they have been since governed, except when in connection with Vermont. And in this situation were those inhabitants when the Convention aforesaid was formed that united the grants east of the river Connecticut to Vermont by which they were admitted into union with her on the two following conditions, viz^t: first, that the existence of Vermont should be held sacred; and secondly that in case of any dispute respecting border lines and jurisdiction, to be settled agreeably to the modes prescribed by the articles of confederation or by such other way as should be mutually agreed upon.

That N. Hampshire by extending her claim west of Connecticut river have extinguished or rendered uncertain her west boundary line by the royal determination in A. D. 1764 which affords a strong plea in support of the right to a fair hearing in the settlement of said line so earnestly to be wished for in order to give satisfaction to so large number and respectable body of people, three fourths part of whom (at least) are firmly attached to the government of Vermont and among whom officers civil and military are duly elected and qualified as the law directs.

That they have many arguments and records (which we are not at present possessed of) to justify their right to a union with Vermont or at least a hearing in the settlement of the dispute, not to mention their universal rejection of the requisition of N. Hampshire to meet in convention in order to form a permanent plan of government, or the late extraordinary act of N. Hampshire which explicitly acknowledges the above assertion, and in its effects particularly tends to alienate the affections of those people from that government, and its neglect of the frontier exclusive of the act of Hon^{ble} Congress of twenty fourth day of Sept. A. D. 1779 recommending to N. Hampshire not to exercise jurisdiction over them etc.

That about the year 1773 a plan was set on foot by some of the inhabitants of the N. Hampshire grants together with Phillip Skeen Esq. for forming a new Colony in such wise as to include the Grants and to extend at least to Hudson river on the West and to the forty fifth degree north latitude on the north and to Massachusetts on the south. And in consequence of this plan application was made to the court of Great Britain by Mr. Skeen for that purpose, who has since been well known among the British by the title of Governor Skeen.

That there are papers now in the state of Vermont under the signature of the said Phillip Skeen on the subject of his appointment to government dated about the month of December A. D. 1774 mentioning among other things that he should soon call on this people to show their loyalty to the king. These papers might reflect much light on this subject and perhaps amount to a satisfactory proof that the said Phillip Skeen did actually succeed in the aforesaid plan. And then on the principle [of] royal lines overturn the pretensions of the claiming States even on their own stating. With respect to what action may have been between the people on the Western union and the state of New York we further observe that as allegiance and protection are reciprocal, when the latter is refused the former is of course void and a people left to provide new guards for their future safety and this is consonant with the declaration of independence of the United States and the constitution of the State of New York. And,

That there is at least eight tenths of the people in this [western] union who are in favor of the government of Vermont and officers civil and military elected and duly qualified.

That many of the leading gentlemen in both the aforesaid unions who are opposed to Vermont have been repeatedly heard to say that they have no objection to unite with Vermont if it were agreeable to the honorable the Congress. And that a vindication of the rights of the people both in the eastern and western Unions, thus to unite with Vermont, is preparing more fully by a committee appointed by authority for that purpose, and will undoubtedly be soon published.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 16, 1782.

Sir,—As it is clearly reasonable (in our opinion) that we should be indulged with copies of any act or resolution of the States of New Hampshire or New York which respect the dispute between those States and the State of Vermont which we have the honor to represent, We therefore wish to be favored with the copies of any such papers as are lodged in the Secretary's office and which bear date since August last, in particular an act of the Legislature of the State of New York bearing date about the middle of the month of October last,

And are with great respect Your Excellency's

Carroll, Mr. Randolph, Mr. Hawkins, Mr. Middleton, Mr. Telfair, [one from each state,] to whom was referred the report of a committee on sundry papers relative to the people inhabiting the district of country known by the name of the New-Hampshire Grants, together with a representation of Seth Smith,¹ and a letter of the 20th [30th] of January,

¹ SETH SMITH appeared as the agent of the towns of Guilford and Brattleborough, with the approval of Gov. Clinton. Smith presented his "Representation" to Congress on the 28th of January, and it was referred to a committee, though the facts are not in the printed journal. Of this document the following account is given in B. H. HALL'S Eastern Vermont, pp. 416, 417:

To excite, if possible, an additional interest in their situation, the New York party in the townships of Guilford and Brattleborough drew up a "Representation" as it was called, of their situation, and committed it to Seth Smith their agent, with orders to present it to the Legislature of New York, and to the Congress of the United States. In this document, which was composed with much care and apparent truthfulness, Smith, as representant, declared that a "very great majority" of the inhabitants of Brattleborough and Guilford, and "at least three fourths" of the people living within the "usurped jurisdiction of Vermont, on the east side of the Green Mountains and west side of Connecticut river," were desirous of returning to the "rightful jurisdiction of the State of New York," from which by the violent measures of the new state government, and the want of necessary protection and assistance from Congress and New York, they had "much against their inclinations, been obliged to appear to depart;" that the towns which he represented, and a majority of the inhabitants of the New Hampshire Grants, were, as he believed, firmly determined to oppose by arms the "usurped jurisdiction of Vermont;" and that there was full evidence of the disaffection of "the leaders and abettors in the assumed government of Vermont" towards the United States, and of a "league of amity" between them and the enemy in Canada. In support of the last statement, he alluded to the fact that Vermont commissioners had held frequent interviews with commissioners from Canada, both in the latter province and on the "Grants;" that the leading men in Vermont had established a neutrality with Canada, publicly disavowed the authority of Congress, and authorized the transmission into Canada of prisoners belonging to Gen. Burgoyne's army, without receiving any in exchange;* that the "staunch whigs and those well affected to the true interests of the United States" were exceedingly alarmed at this friendly intercourse which they could not prevent unless by force of arms, since, as supporters of New York, they were not eligible to office under Vermont; and that the "ill-gotten powers" of the supporters of the new state "were wantonly and arbitrarily" exercised, to the "inconceivable oppression of the best friends of the American cause" in that portion of the nation.

In addition to these charges, he stated that the Vermonters had committed many acts of violence, under color of law, against the well-affected subjects of the state of New York; that they had proceeded so far against him, as to cause him to be charged—in an indictment for high treason against "their assumed government"—with an attempt to introduce a "foreign power" into Vermont, meaning undoubtedly by these words the government of New York and the authority of Congress; that from Jonas Fay and Ira Allen, having delivered in a report, the same was taken into consideration, and some time spent thereon.

Feb. 21, the delegates for Vermont addressed the following letter to the President of Congress, and it was read on the same day. It is not noted, however, in Folwell's printed journal.

*Messrs. Fay, Allen, and Curtis to the President of Congress.*¹

PHILADELPHIA Feb. 21 1782.

Sir:—In pursuance of our appointment and instructions we have had the honor of transmitting to your Excellency and of laying before a Committee of the hon^{ble} Congress sundry official papers which we are informed have been taken into consideration. But when we consider that a multiplicity of business must unavoidably engross the attention of Congress, who are esteemed the guardians of the rights of a numerous and free people, we are not urgent for a hasty determination relative to the State of Vermont. We however cannot doubt but, in due time, that State will be admitted as an additional gem in that Crown which of late, rising from obscurity, has been the peculiar favorite of Heaven and become the astonishment of the world.

Permit us, sir, to mention that as we have no additional matters to lay before Congress at present—as it is probable another campaign is approaching, and as the legislature of Vermont expected our return previous to completing the estimates for the current year, it is necessary we should soon take our leave of this city, inasmuch as no time ought to be lost in attending to that business; and persuaded at the same time that no measures destructive to the peace and tranquility of Vermont they had “debauched” into a union with themselves, portions of New York and New-Hampshire; that, although exempt from the “common burthens of the American war,” they still exercised an “exorbitant power in taxation and arbitrary drafts, to support their usurpations against two of the states in the American confederacy;” and that this latter proceeding was intolerably grievous to the great body of the true friends of America, who were compelled to endure, since they were not able to resist. To support these declarations, the representant offered to adduce the “most regular and conclusive proofs,” provided he and his friends should be protected while collecting the evidence. He also suggested the propriety of sending congressional commissioners to make inquiries and return a full report, and added his assurance that they would be upheld and respected by the majority of the people. In conclusion, he gave as his firm opinion “that unless Congress seasonably and vigorously interpose, the well-affected to the state of New York and the United States will fly to arms in opposition to the usurpation of Vermont.”

Smith's “Representation” was presented to Congress on the 28th of January; on the 11th of February, he asked the interposition of New York to supersede the necessity of a resort to force by the New York party in Vermont; and in just twelve days thereafter, Feb. 23, he petitioned the General Assembly of Vermont for a pardon for his violation of the laws of Vermont, and it was granted on the 26th, on condition of his taking the oath of allegiance to Vermont.—See p. 147.

will be pursued in the absence of the delegates,—that we have the fullest reason to believe the most vigorous exertions will be made by the legislature for a spirited defense of her extensive frontiers and that by the interposition of Heaven and the friendly aid of the Congress she will be able to repel any force which the enemy may send against her. In the mean time every prudent measure will be pursued to cultivate peace and harmony with her neighboring States which may be conducive to the tranquility of the rising empire of America.

We have the honor to be your Excellency's most obedient and Humble servants,

[Endorsed]—Read same day.

IN CONGRESS, FRIDAY, March 1, 1782.¹

The grand committee, consisting of Mr. Livermore, Mr. Patridge, Mr. Cornell, Mr. Law, Mr. Floyd, Mr. Boudinot, Mr. Clymer, Mr. Rodney, Mr. Carroll, Mr. Randolph, Mr. Hawkins, Mr. Middleton and Mr. Telfair, to whom was re-committed their report on sundry papers respecting the inhabitants of a district of country known by the name of the New-Hampshire Grants, together with a representation of Seth Smith, and a letter of the 30th of January from Jonas Fay and Ira Allen, having delivered in a report, and the following paragraph [resolution] being under consideration, viz.

“That in case the inhabitants residing within the limits aforesaid, within one calendar month from the delivery of a certified copy of these resolutions by the commissioner hereinafter mentioned, to Thomas Chittenden, Esq; of the town of Bennington, within the limits aforesaid, or from the time of the said commissioner's leaving such certified copy at the usual place of residence of the said Thomas Chittenden, Esq; shall by some authenticated act recognize the last above described boundaries to be the limits and extent of their claim, both of jurisdiction and territory, and shall accede to the articles of confederation and perpetual union between the states of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, as agreed to in Congress on the 15th day of November, 1777; and shall thereupon appoint delegates in their behalf, with full powers, instructions and positive orders immediately to repair to Congress, and to sign the said articles of confederation, and afterwards to represent them in the United States in Congress assembled, their said delegates shall be admitted to sign the same, and thereupon the inhabitants of the above described district shall be acknowledged a free, sovereign and independent state, and shall be considered as a component part of the federal union, and entitled to the advantages thereof.”

A motion was made by Mr. Wolcott [of Connecticut,] seconded by Mr. Ellery [of Rhode Island,] to strike out the words between the words “inhabitants residing within,” and the word “accede;” and in lieu thereof to insert “or belonging to the territory commonly known by the name of the New-Hampshire Grants, or by whatsoever name it may be called, west of Connecticut river, and to the eastward of the boundary conditionally guaranteed by the resolution of the 20th of August last, in favour of the state of New-York.”

This motion was lost on the following vote: Yeas—Massachusetts, Rhode-Island, Connecticut, and New-Jersey. Nays—New-York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, South Carolina, and Georgia. One member each from New Hampshire and North Carolina voted in the negative, but these votes were not counted.

A motion was then made by Mr. Scott, seconded by Mr. Floyd, [both of New York,] to strike out the whole resolution.

On the question, Shall the resolution stand? the votes were as follows: Yeas—Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Maryland. Nays—New York, Virginia, South Carolina, and Georgia. One member each from New Hampshire and North Carolina voted in the negative. As a majority of the states did not vote in the affirmative, the resolution was stricken out.

A motion was then made by Mr. Clark [of New Jersey,] seconded by Mr. Atlee [of Pennsylvania,] that the rest of the report be committed; which is as follows:

Congress having resolved on the 7th day of August last, that in case they should recognize the independence of the people of Vermont, they would consider all the lands belonging to New Hampshire and New York, respectively, lying without the limits aforesaid, as coming within the mutual guarantee of territory contained in the articles of confederation; and that the United States will accordingly guarantee such lands and the jurisdiction over the same, against any claim or encroachments from the inhabitants of Vermont aforesaid: and Congress having, on the 20th day of the same month required as an indispensable preliminary to their recognition of the independence of the people inhabiting the territory aforesaid, and their admission into the federal union, the explicit relinquishment of all demands of lands or jurisdiction on the east side of the west bank of Connecticut river and on the west side of a line beginning at the north-west corner of the state of Massachusetts, thence running twenty miles east of Hudson's river so far as the said river runs north-easterly in its general course; thence by the west bounds of the townships granted by the late government of New-Hampshire, to the river running from South-bay to Lake-Champlain; thence along the said river to Lake-Champlain; thence along the waters of Lake-Champlain to the latitude of forty-five degrees north, excepting a neck of land between Missiskoy-Bay and the waters of Lake-Champlain. And the people inhabiting the territory aforesaid, not having as yet made the relinquishment aforesaid as above required, and attempting since the date of the above resolutions to extend and establish their jurisdiction over part of the lands guaranteed to the states of New-York and New-Hampshire abovesaid; and it being indispensably necessary to bring all disputes respecting the jurisdiction of the people residing within the territory aforesaid to a speedy issue:

Resolved, That the district of territory, commonly known by the name of the New-Hampshire Grants, by whatsoever name it may be called, is and shall be bounded westward by a line beginning at the northwest corner of the state of Massachusetts, thence running northward twenty miles east of Hudson's river, so far as the said river runs northeasterly in its general course, thence to the west boundary-line of the townships granted by the late government of New-Hampshire; thence northward along the said west boundary-line, to the river running from South-bay to Lake-Champlain, thence along the said river to Lake-Champlain; thence along the waters of Lake-Champlain to latitude forty-five degrees north, including a neck of land between the Missiskoy-Bay and the waters of Lake-Champlain; thence it shall be bounded north by latitude forty-five degrees north, and eastward by the west bank of Connecticut river, from forty-five degrees north to the northern boundary-line of the state of Massachusetts, and southward by the said northern boundary of the state of Massachusetts from the said west bank of Connecticut river, to the north-west corner of Massachusetts above-mentioned.

Resolved, [Here followed the resolution which was stricken out on motion of the delegates of New York.]

Resolved, That in case the said inhabitants, within the above-described district do not desist from attempting to exercise jurisdiction over the lands guaranteed to New-Hampshire and New-York as aforesaid, and shall not, within the time limited as aforesaid, comply with the terms specified in the foregoing resolutions, Congress will consider such neglect or refusal as a manifest indication of designs hostile to these United States, and that all the pretensions and applications of the said inhabitants, heretofore made for admission into the federal union, were fallacious and delusive; and that thereupon the forces of these states shall be employed against the said inhabitants within the district aforesaid, and Congress will consider all the lands within the said territory to the eastward of a line drawn along the summit of a ridge of mountains or heights of land, extending from south to north, throughout the said territory, between Connecticut river on the east, and Hudson's river and Lake-Champlain on the west, as guaranteed to New-Hampshire under the articles of confederation, and all the lands within the said territory to the westward of the said line as guaranteed to New-York under the articles of confederation: provided always, that Congress will consider any other partition, which shall, hereafter, by an agreement between the legislatures of New-Hampshire and New-York, be made between their respective states, concerning the territory aforesaid, as guaranteed to them according to such agreement, saving, in either case, all rights accruing to the state of Massachusetts, or any other state under the articles of confederation aforesaid: and provided always, that for the more effectually quieting the minds of the inhabitants aforesaid, the said states of New-Hampshire and New-York respectively, shall pass acts of indemnity and oblivion, in favour of all such persons as have at any time previous to the passing such acts, acted under the authority of Vermont so called, in any manner whatsoever, upon such persons submitting to the jurisdiction of the said states respectively: and provided always, that the said states of New-York and New-Hampshire, respectively, do pass acts confirming and establishing the titles of all persons whatever, to such lands as they do now actually occupy and possess within the limits of the district aforesaid, under whatever title the same may be held, either from New-York, New-Hampshire or Vermont so called: and also for confirming and establishing the titles of all persons whatever, to such lands within the district aforesaid, as they may be entitled to under grants from New-York, New-Hampshire or Vermont so called, according to the propriety [priority] of such grants in point of time, excepting in such cases where the lands are in the actual occupancy and possession of the claimants, as mentioned in the proviso abovesaid. But inasmuch as some persons claiming in right of grants made under the authority of the district or territory called Vermont, and not actually occupying the same, may be deprived thereof by the interference of other prior grants:

Resolved, That in case the partition aforesaid shall take place, any person claiming and deprived as aforesaid, his or her assignee or representative shall receive full compensation in lands or otherwise, to be provided by Congress.

Resolved, That it be, and it is hereby earnestly recommended to the states of New-Hampshire and New-York respectively, to pass acts of oblivion and indemnity, in favour of all such persons, residing without the limits of the district above described, who shall heretofore have taken part with the inhabitants residing within the same, against the governments of either of those states, upon such persons quietly and peaceably submitting themselves to the government, and jurisdiction of such state respectively, to which they belong.

Resolved, That in case of the neglect or refusal of the inhabitants residing within the district aforesaid, to comply with the terms prescribed in the resolutions aforesaid, the commander in chief of the armies of these United States, do without delay or further order carry these resolutions as far as they respect his department into full execution.

Resolved, That a commissioner be appointed on the part of these United States, whose duty it shall be immediately to repair to the district aforesaid, and deliver a certified copy of these resolutions to Thomas Chittenden, Esq; of the town of Bennington aforesaid, or leave such copy at his usual place of residence; and also to enforce on the inhabitants of the said district, the necessity of their complying without delay with the terms above prescribed by Congress, or submitting themselves peaceably to the jurisdiction of the states of New-Hampshire and New-York, agreeably to the above resolutions.

On the question for committing, the yeas and nays being required by Mr. Boudinot,

The vote was as follows: Yeas—Connecticut, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia. Nays—New-York, South Carolina, and Georgia. Divided—Rhode Island. One member each from New-Hampshire, Massachusetts, and North Carolina voted no. So the question was lost.

It will be observed that in the journal of Congress, above quoted, no mention is made of the attendance of the Agents of Vermont; of course because they appeared before the committee only. The following is IRA ALLEN's account, from his history in Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. I, pp. 446-448.

The Agents of Vermont exhibited their credentials to Congress, and had repeated interviews with Committees and Members of that body, who appeared very much dissatisfied with the Legislature of Vermont, in not complying with their resolves of the 7th and 20th of August. The Agents of Vermont represented, in justification, that having been deprived of continental aid, while acts and resolutions of Congress were passed in favour of the claiming and neighbouring States; and those States, assisted by said acts and resolves, were taking every measure in their power to divide and sub-divide her citizens; that the Legislature of New Hampshire had, against the will of Vermont, laid a jurisdictional claim, prefaced with friendship, when subsequent transactions shewed that the object was to overturn her jurisdiction, and connect the whole territory of Vermont to New Hampshire, for the members of her General Court had, by circular letters, convened a Convention for the ostensible purpose of connecting the New Hampshire Grants on both sides of Connecticut river, into one entire State; then, on the 16th day of January, 1781, at Charlestown, where forty-three towns were represented, procured a vote to unite the whole to New Hampshire; that this was, in fact, to annihilate the existence of Vermont.

In this Convention were twelve Members of the Council and Assembly of New Hampshire; surely Congress could not blame the friends of Vermont, who had been silent spectators of these bare-faced intrigues, in exerting themselves next day, and obtaining a resolution of the Convention to unite that part of New Hampshire, west of the Mason line, to Vermont; this was turning the same trouble on New Hampshire that she had contemplated for Vermont, and was the more justifiable, as it united her citizens, and made her more formidable against her enemies, which was essential, considering the extent of her frontiers. That the claims and intrigues of New York, and self-preservation, had induced the Legislature of Vermont to claim a part of the State of New York; that the people of these territories had, by articles of union, confederated with Vermont, and became citizens thereof; her conduct might be further justified by the articles of union with said districts; in them it was stipulated, that whenever Vermont was acknowledged as a State by Congress, and admitted to a seat in that body, any dispute that might exist respecting boundary lines should be submitted to Congress for decision; that Vermont then was, and ever had been ready and willing to comply with the aforesaid principles, or any other equitable mode that might be agreed upon to settle boundary lines with either of the claiming States; but that she will not, under existing circumstances, dissolve her unions, agreeable to the late resolves of Congress, thereby weakening her strength without gaining an equivalent by a confederation; that if the United States were serious in admitting Vermont into the union, they could not see why it might not be done in the first instance, and then settle the boundary lines on principles that might be equitable and consistent with the articles of the confederacy of the United States, and articles of the unions which necessity had compelled her to make; and further that the Legislature of Vermont, in October last, passed an act, appointing Commissioners, with full powers to agree with like Commissioners from New Hampshire and New York, and they to appoint three or more Commissioners, to hear and determine on boundary lines between the respective States, which line or lines so determined on, should be boundaries between said States, which act was sent to the Legislatures of New Hampshire and New York, with a request that they would respectively pass similar acts, and attend to a settlement of boundary lines. Now had either of these States seriously wished for a settlement of boundary lines, and to admit Vermont into the confederacy, why did they not pass acts similar to that of Vermont, or, at least, withdraw their jurisdictional claim from the ancient territory of Vermont, instead of menacing a State with military operations, who, of all others, were most exposed to the common enemy, and recently deprived of continental aid.

With respect to a civil war, at a time when the liberty of America would thereby be endangered, no people were or could be more averse to it than those of Vermont, who had been eight years longer struggling for their liberties than their brethren of the United States. As to Governor Chittenden's orders to Lieutenant Governor Payne and Colonel Walbridge, so much complained of, extraordinary cases required extraordinary remedies, and these orders, like sovereign balsams, had a salutary effect, as the consequences evince; for at least they prevented the effusion of blood and civil war, as they caused General Gansevoort to retreat, when he saw a force was advancing to reinforce those he was menacing; and the Government of New Hampshire suspended their military operations on discovering the determination of Vermont, while peace was restored without bloodshed, which otherwise, in all probability, would not have taken place. This also evinces the sagacity and independence of the Governor; and unquestionably such a suggestion of facts and cogent arguments had a very powerful effect upon Congress; for on March 1st it was proposed in Congress to pass a resolve, that if within one month from the time in which the resolve should be communicated to Thomas Chittenden, the inhabitants of Vermont should comply with the resolves of August 7th and 20th, 1781, they should be immediately admitted into the union; but if they should refuse this, and did not desist from attempting to exercise jurisdiction over the lands guaranteed to New Hampshire and New York, Congress would consider such neglect or refusal, as a manifest indication of designs hostile to the United States, and that all the pretensions and applications of the said inhabitants, heretofore made for admission into the federal union, were fallacious and delusive; and that thereupon the forces of the United States should be employed against the inhabitants, and Congress would consider all the lands within the territory to the eastward of the ridge of mountains as guaranteed to New Hampshire; and all the lands to the westward of said line, as guaranteed to New York; and that the Commander in Chief of the armies of the United States do without delay or further order carry these resolutions into full execution. But after warm debates, and repeated trials, a vote could not be obtained to adopt these resolutions, and the matter subsided.

DISSOLUTION OF THE EASTERN AND WESTERN UNIONS—FEBRUARY, 1782.¹

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, Feb^y. 11th 1782.

His Excellency the Governor laid before the House a letter from Gen^l Washington dated Philadelphia Jan^y. 1st 1782—a letter from Gen^l Woolcut² dated Philadelphia Jan^y. 18th 1782—one from Benj^m. Henry³ dated Halifax Jan^y. 21st 1782—one from Simeon Olcott dated Charlestown Jan^y. 28, 1782⁴—which letters were directed to the Gov^r.—One from Gov^r Chittenden directed to Col^o. Yates [of New York militia in the “western district,”] dated Arlington 24th Aug^t. 1781.—One from Col^o. Yates dated Cheticoke Aug^t. 27th 1781.—One from Col^o. Sam^l. King⁵ to Gov^r Chittenden dated Jan^y. 5th 1782—the Gov^r’s answer to Col^o. King dated Jan^y. 10th 1782.—One from W^m. Page Esq^r. [of Charlestown, N. H.] to Gov^r Chittenden dated Dec^r. 9th 1781 enclosing a copy of a letter to Col^o. W^m. Haywood and a copy of a letter to Brig^d. Gen^l. Olot.—One from Gov^r Chittenden to Lieut. Gov^r Payne dated Dec. 14th 1781.⁶ One from MONDAY, Feb^y. 18th. 1782.

Ordered that M^r Chandler be requested to wait on his Excellency the Gov^r and desire him to lay before this House a copy of the letter that produced the one from Gen^l Washington of Jan^y. 1st 1782—Likewise the original letter from Gen^l Washington, with the resolution of Congress of the 21st. of Aug^t. 1781.²

On motion made. Resolved that the Governor and Council be requested to join this House in a Committee of the whole at two o'clock in the afternoon to take under consideration the above mentioned letters and resolution and the letter from Gen^l Wolcott &c.

The hon^{ble} Moses Robinson Esq^r. informed the House that it was the request of the Gov^r & Council that the meeting of the Committee of the whole be referred until tomorrow morning—which was agreed to.

TUESDAY, Feb^y. 19th. 1782.

Agreeable to the Order of the day the Gov^r and Council and House of Representatives formed themselves into a Committee of the whole to take under consideration the Resolution of Congress of the 21st of Aug^t. the Letters from Generals Washington & Wolcott &c. and continued on that business from day to day until, THURSDAY, Feb^y. 21st. 1782, when the Committee of the whole having dissolved the House formed and the Speaker resumed the Chair.

Ordered that the Report of the Committee of the whole be referred for further consideration until the meeting of the House in the afternoon.

2 O'CLOCK P. M.

Agreeable to the order of the day the following Report of the Committee of the whole was read viz—

“STATE OF VERMONT, Bennington, Feb. 19th, 1782.

The Governor and Council having joined the General Assembly, in a committee of the whole, to take into consideration the resolutions of Congress of the 7th and 21st of August last,

His Excellency THOMAS CHITTENDEN, Esquire, in the Chair.

The following papers were read by the Secret^y in their order, viz.

1st. The said resolutions of the 7th and 21st of August, and a letter from his Excellency the President of Congress, to his Excellency the Governor, enclosing them.

2^d. A private letter from his Excellency General Washington, to his Excellency the Governor, dated, Philadelphia, January 1st. 1782.

3^d. A letter from General Oliver Wolcott, to his Excellency the Governor, dated January 18th. 1782.

¹ These were all Connecticut officers in the continental army.

² Most often called the resolution of Aug. 20. It was adopted on the 20th, was reconsidered and finally adopted on the 21st, though the printed journal of Congress records it as of the 20th.

4th. A letter from Rev^d Jonathan Edwards, to Noah Smith.

5th. The articles of Union with the eastern and western districts.

Adjourned until 2 oClock P. M.

Met, according to adjournment.

6th. The Proceedings of the Legislature, in October last, upon the said resolutions of Congress, were read.

After some debate, adjourned until to-morrow morning, 9 oClock.

20th Feb^y. 9 o'clock.

Met agreeable to adjournment.

7th. A letter from Col^o Lutterloh, to Maj^r Fay, was read; and after some debate on the business, adjourned until 2 oClock, P. M.

2 oClock, P. M. met according to adjournment.

8th. A letter from Gen^l Pattison to Maj^r Fay, was read.

A motion was made by M^r Chandler, that the sense of the Committee be taken upon the following question, viz:—whether Congress, in their resolutions of the 7th and 21st of August last, in guaranteeing, to the respective States of New-York and New-Hampshire, all the territory without certain limits, therein expressed, has not eventually determined the boundaries of this State?

Which question being put, was carried in the affirmative: whereupon, Resolved, That, in the opinion of this committee, Congress, in their resolutions of the 7th and 21st of August last, in guaranteeing to the respective States of New-York and New-Hampshire, all territory without certain limits therein expressed, have eventually determined the boundaries of this State.

And whereas, it appears to this committee consistent with the spirit, true intent and meaning of the articles of union, entered into by this State with the Inhabitants of a certain district of country, on the East side of the West bank of Connecticut river, and on the west side of a line twenty miles East of Hudson's river, (which articles of union were executed on the 23^d day of Feb^y and the 15th day of June last past,) that Congress should consider, and determine, the Boundary lines of this State—Therefore, this committee recommend to the Assembly of this State, to pass Resolutions declaring their acquiescence in, and accession to, the determination made by Congress of the said boundary lines, between the States of New-Hampshire and New-York, respectively, and this State, as they are, in said resolutions, defined and described, and also, expressly relinquishing all claim to, and jurisdiction of, and over, the said Districts of territory, without said boundary lines, and the Inhabitants thereon residing.

Confiding in the faith and wisdom of Congress, that they will, immediately, enter on measures to carry into effect the other matters in said resolutions contained, and settle on equitable terms, whereby this State may be received into, and have and enjoy all the protection, rights and advantages of a federal union with the United States of America, as a free, Independent and Sovereign State, as is held forth to us in and by said resolutions—

And this committee do further recommend to the Assembly, that they cause official information of their resolutions to be immediately transmitted to the Congress of the United States, and the States of New-York and New-Hampshire.”

The aforesaid Report of the Committee of the Whole was read and accepted & thereupon

Resolved that a Committee of three to join a Committee from the Council¹ be appointed to prepare a Bill or Bills agreeable to said report, and lay the same before this House. The members chosen M^r Tichenor, M^r Chandler, and M^r Knight.

On motion made by M^r Tichenor, Resolved that a Committee of five to join a Committee from the Council¹ be appointed to point out some mode of redress relative to the injuries the people of the Eastern and Western Unions have sustained in consequence of their alliance to this State. The members chosen M^r Jacob, M^r Harris, M^r Powell, M^r Dana, and M^r Styles.

On motion made by M^r Styles, Resolved that this House do Judge that the Articles of Union are completely dissolved—

Ordered that the Clerk of this Assembly be & is hereby directed to make up the Debenture of the members belonging to the late unions, and lay the same before this House to-morrow morning.

FRIDAY, Feb^r. 22^d 1782.

The Clerk requested to be directed particularly respecting making up the Debenture of M^r Page [of Charlestown, N. H.] and M^r [Daniel] Jones [of Hinsdale, N. H.]—therefore, Ordered that the Debenture of M^r Page and M^r Jones be made up for the days only that they answered to their respective names.

A Debenture of the Members belonging to the Eastern and Western Unions that have attended this Assembly the present session, was read & passed the House and Ordered that the Treasurer be and is hereby directed to pay the same.

An Act entitled “An Act to relinquish the claims to territories therein mentioned” was read and passed the House.

The Governor and Council waited on the House and requested that they would proceed to public business of importance to the State, &c.

On motion made, Resolved that this House proceed to choose by joint ballot with the Governor and Council three persons to transact the public business of this State at Congress. The ballots being taken, the honorable Moses Robinson, Paul Spooner Esquires, and Isaac Tichenor Esq^r were elected.

The Committee to whom was referred the mode for redressing the people in the Eastern and Western Unions, &c. brought in the following report, viz—

“That it is the opinion of your Com^{tee} that some proper persons be immediately sent to those officers who are now arresting and making prisoners every person they can find, who have heretofore been active in joining this state, requesting and entreating them to suspend the execution of Law until the aforementioned persons can have time to petition the Assembly of N. York to be restored, and shewing their willingness to return to their allegiance to said State—provided the Legislature should pass an act of grace—And also that a petition be presented by our Agents to the Congress of the United States praying them to interpose by recommending to the States of New-Hampshire and New-York to pass acts of oblivion in their behalf.

JOSEPH BOWKER, for Com^{tee}.”

The above report was read and accepted so far as it relates to the people of the late Western Union, & ordered that a Bill be brought in accordingly.

Resolved that Gen^l Sam^l Safford, Ezra Styles [Stiles,] Esq^r and Gen^l Roger Enos be and they are hereby requested forthwith to repair with suitable Instructions from the Council to the Western District to prosecute the intentions of the aforesaid report.¹

SATURDAY, Febr^y. 23^d 1782.

Resolved that a Committee of five to join a Committee from the Council² be appointed to prepare instructions for the agents that are appointed to wait on Congress—and make report. The members chosen Mr. Chandler, Mr. Townshend,³ Mr. Strong, Mr. Knight, and Mr. Lyon.

The Committee appointed to prepare a Bill agreeable to the Report of the Committee of the whole brought in the following Resolutions which were read and passed into Resolutions of this House, viz—

Here follow the resolution and recommendation embraced in the report of the committee of the whole of Feb. 20, on page 380-81, and also the following:

Resolved that the same be complied with.

And thereupon,

Resolved, That the west bank of Connecticut river & a line beginning at the northwest corner of the Massachusetts state, from thence northward twenty miles east of Hudsons River, as specified in the Resolutions of August last shall be considered as the east and west boundaries of this State; and that this Assembly do hereby relinquish all claim and demand to and right of Jurisdiction in and over any and every district of territory without said boundary lines; and that authenticated copies of this Resolution be forthwith officially transmitted to Congress and the States of New-Hampshire and New-York, respectively.

TUESDAY, Febr^y. 26th. 1782.

Resolved that this House will proceed, at the meeting in the afternoon, to choose three persons to represent this State in Congress, if articles of union can be agreed on between the Agents appointed by this State and the Congress of the United States.

The Committee appointed to prepare Private Instructions for the Agents appointed to negotiate the business of this State at Congress brought in the following Instructions viz—

Private instructions to the honourable Moses Robinson and Paul Spooner, Esq^{rs}. Agents Elected to negotiate the admission of the state

¹ That this committee immediately undertook the task assigned them appears from the following extract from a letter of Judge Robert Yates to Gov. Clinton, dated Albany, Feb. 24, 1782:

I had with me this morning Generals Enox [Enos] & Safford, and Mr. Ezra Stiles, who were directed by the Legislature of Vermont, by a Resolution (a copy whereof I herewith enclose) to endeavor to get an Indemnity for those people [citizens of New-York under arrest for serving Vermont.] I told them, that I conceived, the Legislature of this State, who consider their assumption of Legislative power in Vermont as an usurpation, would not upon the grounds of such Resolutions admit of their application. For these reasons, to which they assented, they intend to return home.—Doc. History of New York, quarto, Vol. 4, p. 604.

of Vermont into the confederation of the United States, and Delegates in Congress, in case of such admission—¹

GENTLEMEN,

You will repair without loss of time to Philadelphia and are to consider yourselves as Plenipotentiaries invested with full power to agree on terms upon which this State shall come into an union with the United States of North America; and in case of such agreement, in behalf of this State, to sign and ratify articles of federal union with the Confederated States of America, and thereupon to take seats in Congress; but that it is not expected that more than one of you will remain in Philadelphia at a time.

In your negotiations it is expected that you will so conduct as to induce the persons you negotiate with to believe that your constituents expect to be admitted free from arrears of the Continental debt already accrued and to discharge their own. If this cannot be obtained it is expected that you will reduce that part of the Continental debt which this state shall have to pay, to as small a sum as possible,—And that you make return to his Excellency the Governor, as soon as may be, of the certain sum which you shall Covenant that this state shall pay.

SAM^L. FLETCHER, for the Committee.

The above Instructions were read and passed as Instructions for the purpose aforesaid.

2 oClock afternoon.

Agreeable to the order of the day, proceeded to choose three persons as Delegates to represent this State in Congress &c. The ballots being taken the hon^{ble} Moses Robinson & Paul Spooner Esquires and Isaac Tichenor Esq^r were Elected.

WEDNESDAY, Feb^y. 27th. 1782.

Resolved that the Treasurer be and is hereby specially directed to lay by for the Delegates to Congress £100.

THURSDAY, Feb^y. 28th. 1782.

Resolved that his Excellency the Governor be and is hereby requested to Commissionate the Agents appointed with Plenipotentiary powers to negotiate the admission of this State into Confederation with the United States three of whom are hereby authorised to transact said business, & if this State is admitted into Confederation any one or two of said Agents are hereby empowered to take their seats and represent this State in Congress.

Resolved that one person be added to the Agents and Delegates appointed to transact the business of this State at Congress. The ballots being taken the hon^{ble} Jonas Fay Esq^r was Elected.

Resolved that the hon^{ble} Paul Spooner, Moses Robinson, & Jonas Fay Esq^{rs}. and Isaac Tichenor, Esq^r be and are hereby requested to repair to Congress without delay on the business of their appointment.

¹ISAAC TICHENOR'S name was omitted on the journal, doubtless by accident. The instructions given officially embraced Mr. Tichenor and Jonas Fay with the above-named.

COMMISSION TO THE DELEGATES TO CONGRESS—MARCH 3, 1782.¹

His Excellency THOMAS CHITTENDEN, Esquire; Captain General, Governor and Commander in Chief in and over the State of VERMONT,

To the Hon^{ble} JONAS FAY, MOSES ROBINSON, and PAUL SPOONER, Esquires; and to ISAAC TICHENOR, Esquire, Greeting.

AGREEABLE to Resolutions of the Governor, Council and General Assembly of this State, passed at their Session at Bennington in February last, electing you Agents and Delegates in behalf of this State to attend the Congress of the United States with plenary powers to agree upon, and ratify Terms of Confederation and perpetual Union with them, and to represent this State in Congress as Delegates for the Year ensuing, or until recalled by act of Legislature—

I DO, in the name and by the Authority of the Freemen of the State of Vermont, fully authorise and amply empower you the said JONAS FAY, MOSES ROBINSON, PAUL SPOONER and ISAAC TICHENOR, Esq^{rs}; or either three of you, to negotiate and complete, on the part of this State, the Admission thereof into a federal Union with the UNITED STATES OF NORTH AMERICA—And in behalf of this State, to subscribe to Articles of perpetual Union and Confederation therewith.

Given under my Hand, and the Seal of this State, In Council, this Thirteenth Day of March Anno Domini One Thousand seven Hundred and Eighty two, and in the 6th Year of the INDEPENDENCE of this State.

THO^S. CHITTENDEN.

By His Excellency's Command.

GOVERNOR CHITTENDEN TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.²

ARLINGTON, March 16, 1782.

Sir,—I had the honor to receive your Excellency's favor of the 1st of January by express. I am not insensible that the delicacy of your station in the empire renders it ineligible for you to address me in my public character. Your noticing us, therefore, in your private capacity, under our circumstances, I beg leave to esteem as the strongest mark of your magnanimity and friendship. While we receive with gratitude the resolves of Congress, of the 7th and 21st of August last, it affords us great satisfaction that your Excellency is willing to consider them as implying the right, which Vermont claims, to be a state, within certain described bounds. And, as the dispute of boundary is the only one that hath prevented our union with the Confederacy, I am very happy in being able to acquaint your Excellency that that is now removed on our part, by our withdrawing our claims upon New Hampshire and New York, and by confining ourselves solely, or very nearly, to that tract of country which is described in the resolve of Congress of the 21st of August last. Since, therefore, we have withdrawn our jurisdiction to the confines of our old limits, we entertain the highest expectations that we shall soon obtain what we have so long been seeking after, an acknowledgement of independence and sovereignty. For this we have appointed Commissioners, with plenary powers, to negotiate an alliance with the Confederated States, and, if they succeed, to take seats in Congress. Should Heaven prosper the designs of their negotiation, we please ourselves much that we, who are of one sentiment in the common cause, and who have but one common interest, shall yet become one nation, and yet be great and happy. The glory of America is our glory, and with our country we mean to live or die, as her fate shall be. I have no need to acquaint your Excellency, that our local as well as our military (not to say political) situation, as an extended frontier, awfully exposed these infant plantations to the power and fury of the common enemy. Might we be so happy as to draw the attention of our country, we hope to be favored with your particular exertion. I have the honor to be, Sir, with great respect,

Your most obed't and humble serv't,

THOMAS CHITTENDEN.

P. S.—This will be delivered by one of our agents, to whom I beg leave to refer your Excellency for the more particular situation of this State, with regard to military preparations and state of defence.

PROCEEDINGS IN CONGRESS ON VERMONT—APRIL 1 TO MAY 21 1782.

MONDAY, April 1, 1782.¹

A letter, of the 31st of March, from Jonas Fay, Moses Robinson, Paul Spooner and Isaac Tichenor, was read, informing, that in consequence of the resolution of Congress of the 20th of August last, the state of Vermont have invariably pursued every measure in order to comply with the said resolution, in a manner that was consistent with the obligations she was under to the people inhabiting the east and west unions, and maintaining the peace and harmony of her citizens with those inhabitants: and enclosing several resolutions of the legislature of Vermont, announcing their compliance with the preliminary required in the said resolution of Congress of the 20th of August last; together with a duplicate of a commission to them, under the great seal of the state, empowering them in behalf of the state of Vermont to subscribe the articles of confederation.²

² The letter was as follows:

[From N. H. Grants, Vol. 2, No. 40, p. 273, in the State Department, Washington.]

Delegates for Vermont to the President of Congress.

PHILADELPHIA, 31st March 1782.

Sir,—We have the honor to inform Congress that, in consequence of their resolution of the 20th of August last, reciting vizt.

“By the United States in Congress assembled 20th August 1781.

“On a reconsideration of the resolution respecting the people inhabiting the New Hampshire Grants, it was altered and agreed to as follows.

“It being the fixed purpose of Congress to adhere to the guarantee to the States of New Hampshire and New York contained in the resolutions of the 7th instant,

“Resolved that it be an indispensable preliminary to the recognition of the independence of the people inhabiting the Territory called Vermont, and their admission into the federal Union, that they explicitly relinquish all demands of Lands or jurisdiction on the east side of the west bank of Connecticut river, and on the west side of a line beginning at

A motion was made by Mr. Clark, seconded by Mr. Scott,

“That the letter of Jonas Fay, &c. with the papers accompanying the same, together with the several papers on the files of Congress relating to the same subject, and received since the 20th of August last, be referred to a committee.”

This motion was agreed to by the following vote: Yeas—Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Maryland—7 states. Mr. Livermore of N. H. voted in the affirmative, but his vote could not be counted as the vote of the state. Nays—New York, Virginia, and Georgia—3 states. Divided—South Carolina. On the 3d of April Mr. Madison moved that the proceedings of Vermont in Oct. 1781 rejecting the conditions required by the resolutions of Congress of August 20 1781, and the resolutions of New York of the 15th and 19th of November 1781, be entered on the journals.

the north west corner of the State of Massachusetts thence running twenty miles east of Hudson river so far as the said river runs north easterly in its general Course, then by the west bounds of the townships granted by the late Government of N. Hampshire to the river running from South Bay to Lake Champlain, thence along said river to Lake Champlain, thence along the waters of Lake Champlain to latitude forty five degrees north; excepting a neck of Land between Missisque bay and the waters of Lake Champlain.”

The state of Vermont have invariably pursued every measure in order to comply with the resolution above recited, in a manner that was consistent with the obligations she was under to the people inhabiting the East and West Unions and maintaining the peace and harmony of her citizens with those inhabitants.

By the earliest opportunity we enclose several resolutions of the Legislature of Vermont, announcing their compliance with the Preliminary required in the resolution of Congress, together with a duplicate of our Commission, empowering us in behalf of the State of Vermont to subscribe Articles of confederation.

Reposing the highest confidence in the wisdom and Honor of Congress; We assure ourselves that not the least obstacle remains to our admission into a federal Union with [the] United States of America.

As we expect the enemy will make their appearance in force on the frontiers of Vermont, as soon as the Lakes will permit, which time we view to be not far distant, and as the union of the United States with the State we have the honor to represent would animate its inhabitants in support of the Confederacy, we therefore wish to be made acquainted that Congress enter on the business as soon as they may find it convenient, that we may transmit the result to our Constituents.

We are, sir, with esteem,

Your most obedient Humble servants,

President Congress.

[Endorsed,]

April 1, Referred with the papers on the files relating to the same subject and rec'd since 20th Aug. last, to Mr. Clymer, Mr. Law, Mr. Carroll, Mr. Clarke, Mr. Livermore.

This motion was rejected, six states to four; but on the next day Mr. Livermore moved that the papers be entered on the journals as a part of the motion made by Mr. Madison, which was agreed to.¹

WEDNESDAY, April 17, 1782.

The committee, consisting of Mr. Clymer, Mr. Carroll, Mr. Clark, Mr. Livermore, and Mr. Law, to whom was referred the letter of the 31st of March, from Jonas Fay and others, together with other papers relating to the same subject, received since the 20th day of August last, delivered in a report, which being read,

A motion was made by Mr. Scott [of New York,] seconded by Mr. Livermore [of N. H.,] that the first Tuesday in October next be assigned for the consideration of the report.²

And on the question the yeas and nays were required by Mr. Scott, the report being as follows:

That Congress, on the 20th of August last, by the votes of nine states, resolved as follows: on a reconsideration of the resolution respecting the people inhabiting the New Hampshire grants, it was altered and agreed to as follows:

“It being the fixed purpose of Congress to adhere to the guarantee to the states of New Hampshire and New York, contained in the resolutions of the seventh instant:

“Resolved, That it be an indispensable preliminary to the recognition of the independence of the people inhabiting the territory, called Vermont, and their admission into the federal union, that they explicitly relinquish all demands of lands or jurisdiction on the east side of the west bank of Connecticut river, and on the west side of a line beginning at the northwest corner of the state of Massachusetts, thence running twenty miles east of Hudson’s river, so far as the said river runs northeasterly in its general course; then by the west bounds of the townships granted by the late government of New Hampshire, to the river running from South Bay to Lake Champlain, thence along said river to Lake Champlain, thence along the waters of Lake Champlain to latitude forty-five degrees north, excepting a neck of land between Missiskoy Bay and

² This motion was made in the interest of the two states which were claiming Vermont; probably in anticipation that Congress would by that time accept the cession of western lands claimed by New York, and change the votes of some states that were, at the above date, favoring Vermont. The cession of New York was accepted on the 29th of October 1782. On this event Mr. MADISON wrote to EDMUND PENDLETON as follows:

Besides the effect which may be expected from the coalition [of sundry states] with New York, on territorial questions in Congress, it will, I surmise, prove very unfriendly to the pretensions of Vermont. Duane [of New York,] seems not unapprised of the advantage which New York has gained, and is already taking measures for a speedy vote on that question. Upon the whole, New York has, by a fortunate coincidence of circumstances, or by skillful management, or by both, succeeded in a very important object; by ceding a claim, which was tenable neither by force nor by right, she has acquired with Congress the merit of liberality, rendered the title to her reservation more respectable, and at least damped the ardor with which Vermont has been abetted.—See Madison Papers, Vol. I, p. 470, cited in Vt. Hist. Soc. Coll., Vol. II, p. 304.

the waters of Lake Champlain;" which resolution was reconsidered and confirmed on the succeeding day, to wit, the 21st of the same month:

That, in the opinion of your committee, the competency of Congress to enter into the above resolutions, was full and complete,—the concurrent resolutions of the Senate and Assembly of the State of New York, of the fifteenth and nineteenth of November last, containing a protest against the authority of Congress in the matter, notwithstanding; these concurrent resolutions, in letter and in spirit, being, undeniably, incompatible with a legislative act of the said state of a preceding day, to wit, the twenty-first of October, 1779, wherein there is an absolute reference of the dispute between that state and the people of Vermont, respecting jurisdiction, to the final arbitrament and decision of Congress: and from which alone would result to Congress all the necessary authority herein:

That on the —— day of ——, the people residing in the district, called Vermont, in considering the said acts of Congress of the 20th and 21st of August, did reject the propositions therein made to them, as preliminary to an acknowledgment of their sovereignty and independence, and admission into the federal union, as appears by their proceedings on the files of Congress: but that, on a subsequent day, the aforementioned resolutions of the 20th and 21st of August being unaltered and unrepealed, and the proposition therein contained, in the opinion of your committee, still open to be acceded to, the said people did, in their general assembly, on the 22d of February last enter into the following resolution:

"That the west bank of Connecticut river, and a line beginning at the northwest corner of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, from thence northward twenty miles east of Hudson's river, as specified in the resolutions of Congress in August last, shall be considered as the east and west boundaries of this state.

"And that this Assembly do, hereby, relinquish all claims and demands to, and right of jurisdiction in and over, any and every district of territory without said boundary lines:"

That, in the sense of your committee, the people of the said district, by the last recited act, have fully complied with the stipulation, made and required of them, in the resolutions of the 20th and 21st of August, as preliminary to a recognition of their sovereignty and independence, and admission into the federal union of the states, and that the conditional promise and engagement of Congress, of such recognition and admission, is thereby become absolute, and necessary to be performed; your committee therefore submit the following resolution:

That the district of territory, called Vermont, as defined and limited in the resolutions of Congress of the 20th and 21st of August, 1781, be and it is hereby recognized and acknowledged by the name of the State of Vermont, as free, sovereign and independent; and that a committee be appointed to treat and confer with the agents and delegates from said state, upon the terms and mode of the admission of the said state, into the federal union.

Mr. Livermore of N. H., and the states of New-York and Virginia voted for this motion; Delaware was divided; and Mr. Carroll of Maryland, and the states of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, and Georgia voted in the negative. Mr. Montgomery of Pennsylvania, seconded by Mr. Ellery of Rhode Island, proposed the third Tuesday of the next June; which was voted for by those two states only. Mr. Middleton, seconded by Mr

Bee, [both of South Carolina,] then proposed the next Monday; for which only the states of South Carolina and Georgia voted.¹

SATURDAY, April 20, 1782.

A letter of the 19th, from Jonas Fay, Moses Robinson, and Isaac Tichenor, was read; whereupon a motion was made by Mr. Jones, seconded by Mr. Madison, [both of Virginia,] in the words following:

Jonas Fay, Moses Robinson, and Isaac Tichenor, stiling themselves agents and delegates from the state of Vermont, having in their letter of the 19th inst. informed Congress, "that in consequence of the faith of Congress, pledged to them in and by a resolution of the 20th of August last, and by official advice from sundry gentlemen of the first character in America, the legislature of Vermont have been prevailed upon to comply in the most ample manner with the resolution aforesaid:"

Resolved, That the secretary be directed to apply to the said Jonas Fay, Moses Robinson, and Isaac Tichenor, and request them to communicate to him the said official advice, together with the names of the gentlemen from whom the same was received.

New York, Virginia, and North Carolina only voted for this resolution, and it was therefore rejected.²

¹Mr. MADISON explained these votes thus:

The consideration of the report will not be called for, however, until the pulse of nine states beats favorably for it. This is so uncertain that the agents (of Vermont) have returned.—See Madison Papers, Vol. I, p. 121, cited in Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, p. 261.

²The letter of the Vermont agents and delegates was as follows:

PHILADELPHIA, April 19th, 1782.

Sir,—The situation in which Congress has been pleased to leave the business of our mission, as agents and delegates from the state of Vermont, renders our attendance, at present, unnecessary.

As the representatives of an independent and virtuous people, we esteem it our duty to inform Congress that, in consequence of their faith, pledged to us, in and by a resolution of the 20th of August last, and by official advice from sundry gentlemen of the first character in America, the Legislature of Vermont have been prevailed upon to comply, in the most ample manner, with the resolution aforesaid.

On the 31st ult. we, officially, acquainted Congress with the said compliance, together with the powers vested in us, in full confidence that, from the integrity and wisdom of that honorable body, no obstacle could prevent our confederation and union with them.

We are disappointed with the unexpected delay of Congress, in executing, on their part, the intent and spirit of the resolve above cited.

We would not wish to urge the attention of the Grand Council of America from matters of more consequence than merely the happiness of a state: but the critical situation Vermont is reduced to, by casting off a considerable part of her strength, in being exposed, as a forlorn hope, to the main force of the enemy in Canada, and destitute of the aid of the United States, in whose cause, at an early period, she freely fought and suffered, will, we presume, sufficiently apologize for being thus urgent, that unnecessary delay may not deprive us of the benefits of the confederation.

We purpose to leave this city to-morrow morning, and expect to be

TUESDAY, May 21, 1782.

Mr. Scott, a delegate for the state of New-York, delivered at the table two papers which he desired to have read; and the same being read, a motion was made by Mr. Scott, seconded by Mr. Middleton, in the following words:

That two papers which have been this day read in Congress, purporting to be certified by Robert Harpur, deputy secretary of the state of New-York, as true copies of two certain original acts of the legislature of the said state lodged in the secretary's office of the said state: the one is in the words and figures following, to wit:

"An act for pardoning certain offences committed in the northeastern part of this state. Passed the 14th April 1782.

Whereas, divers inhabitants, residing in the northeastern part of this state, who have, heretofore, denied the sovereignty and jurisdiction of the people of this state, in and over that part of this state, and, by their unwarrantable combinations, created commotions, to the great disturbance of the peace and tranquility of this state, have, by their humble petition to the Legislature, represented that they were seduced and misled, by artful and designing men, from their duty and allegiance to this state; and have, moreover, professed a sincere repentance of their crimes and misdemeanors, and implored the clemency of government, and humbly entreated the passing of an act of indemnity, oblivion and pardon: and this Legislature being disposed to extend mercy:

Be it therefore enacted by the people of the state of New-York, represented in senate and assembly, and it is hereby enacted, by the authority of the same, That all such of the inhabitants of this state, who dwell and reside north of the north bounds of the state of Massachusetts continued to Hudson's river, east of Hudson's river, south of the latitude forty-five degrees north, and west of Connecticut river, are hereby acquitted, pardoned, released and discharged from all treasons, felonies and conspiracies, whatsoever, at any time heretofore done and committed by them or officially acquainted when our attendance will be necessary and have the honor to be, sir, your most obedient and humble servants.

JONAS FAX,
MOSES ROBINSON,
ISAAC TICHENOR.

The letters of WASHINGTON and OLIVER WOLCOTT were of course the letters referred to by the Vermont agents, both of which had been read in the Vermont Assembly, and were very influential in procuring the assent of Vermont to the terms imposed by Congress. The words "official advice" were liable to criticism, though their meaning is apparent. Vermont was advised by the commander of the continental army, and a delegate in Congress. They held "official" positions certainly, though their letters were private. But more: a copy of Washington's letter to Gov. Chittenden was subsequently sent to the President of Congress by Washington himself, with this statement: "If it should be necessary, a committee of Congress, with whom I was in conference on these matters in the course of last winter, [winter of 1781-2,] can give such further information on this subject as I doubt not will be satisfactory."—See Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, p. 224. A committee of Congress in those days ranked very near to "official" authority.

any of them, against the people of the state of New-York, as sovereign thereof, or against the government and authority derived from, or established by, the said people; all capital, corporal or pecuniary punishment, fines and forfeitures, judgments and executions, to which they severally were liable, in consequence of the crimes and offences aforesaid, are hereby remitted and discharged; and all and every the said persons shall be, and hereby are, fully and wholly restored, in person and estate, to the same state and condition wherein they severally were, at any time before the said crimes and offences were committed or perpetrated.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no person or persons whatsoever, shall have the benefit of the said pardon, for the purpose of pleading the same against any charge of treason or other offence already found, or hereafter to be found, against them or any of them, for adhering to the King of Great-Britain, the enemy of this state, or for any murder; or that such pardon shall be a bar to a conviction, judgment or execution for the said treason or other offence, last mentioned, or for murder as aforesaid."

And the other of the said papers in the words and figures following, to wit:

"An act for quieting the minds of the inhabitants in the northeastern parts of this state. Passed the 14th April, 1782.

Be it enacted by the people of the state of New-York, represented in senate and assembly, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That all charters, patents or grants, for lands within this state, lying within the following bounds, to wit: Beginning at a certain point in the west bank of Connecticut river, where the boundary line between the states of Massachusetts and New-Hampshire, if continued across the said river, would intersect the said west bank, and running from the said point, along the west bank of Connecticut river to the latitude of forty five degrees north, thence westerly, in the said latitude, to the west side of Missisqua Bay, in Lake Champlain, thence westerly, in the said latitude, to the east bank of the waters of the said lake, thence southerly, along the east bank of the said lake and the waters thereof, to the most southerly point where any of the grants, heretofore issued or made, by the late government of the late colony of New-Hampshire, come to the said lake, thence along the south and west bounds of the said grants, or as the said grants are now held or possessed under such grants, so far south, as to meet with a line continued from the first mentioned boundary between the states of Massachusetts and New-Hampshire, through the said place or point of beginning, thence easterly, by the said continued line as aforesaid, to the said place or point of beginning, made or issued by the government of the late colony, now state of New-Hampshire, and which were made or issued, prior to any charter, patent or grant for the same lands, heretofore made or issued by the government of the late colony, now state of New-York, or by the government of any other colony, shall be, and hereby are, ratified and confirmed to the respective grantees, their heirs and assigns forever; and every such prior charter, patent or grant, is hereby declared to be as legal and valid, to all intents, constructions and purposes whatsoever, as if the same had been made or issued under the great seal of the said late colony of New-York, or had been made or issued under the great seal of this state, and as such, may be given, and shall be allowed, in evidence, in every court of record within this state; and no such charter, patent or grant, hereby ratified and confirmed as aforesaid, shall be deemed void, or in any wise injured, by reason of the non-performance of any condition or provision therein contained, or by reason of the non-payment of any quit-rent therein reserved; any law, usage or custom to the contrary thereof, notwithstanding; provided always, that any person or persons who, heretofore, held or claimed lands under grants from the late colony of New-Hampshire, who have, afterwards, obtained grants for the same lands, either to themselves or to others, in trust for them, under the late colony of New-York, operating as a confirmation thereof,—in such case or cases, such person or persons, or their assignees, shall be deemed forever hereafter, to hold the said lands by the latter title.

And whereas, many of the inhabitants residing within the district of country above described, did, in or about the year one thousand seven hundred and seventy-seven, declare themselves an independent people, and did assume a government under the name, style or title of the government of the state of Vermont, or of the state of Vermont; and the said assumed government hath made grants of lands within the said territory:

Be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all charters, patents or grants of lands, so made or issued, before the passing of this act, and which were made or issued prior to any charter, patent or grant for the same lands, heretofore made or issued, by the government of the late colony of New-York, shall be, and hereby are, ratified and confirmed to the respective grantees, their heirs and assigns forever; and such charters, patents or grants, are hereby declared to be as legal and valid, to all intents, constructions and purposes whatsoever, as if the same had been made or issued by the government of this state; and as such may be given, and shall be allowed, in evidence, in any court of record within this state; and no such charter, patent or grant, so ratified and confirmed, as last aforesaid, shall be deemed void, or in any wise injured, by reason of the non-performance of any condition or proviso therein contained, or by reason of the non-payment of any quit-rent therein reserved; any law, usage or custom, to the contrary notwithstanding.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all persons now actually occupying, possessing and improving, lands within the said district of country, or who did, at any time, before the passing of this act, actually occupy, possess and improve lands therein, not heretofore granted by any late colony, shall be, and they, and their legal representatives, respectively, are hereby confirmed in such their respective possessions and improvements, and shall have, and receive, patents therefor, from the government of this state, without paying for such patent any fee or reward, the expence of surveying such lands excepted; provided, that no such patent as last aforesaid, shall issue, for more than the quantity of five hundred acres of land; and where such occupant, possessor or improver, or legal representatives, shall not have possessed the said quantity of five hundred acres of land, he or she shall, respectively, be allowed and granted such additional quantity of land, out of any vacant, unappropriated lands, lying contiguous to such possession, as shall be equal to the deficiency.

And whereas, it is the intention of the Legislature, that such parts of this act as relate to quieting or confirming titles and possessions, within the district of country, as aforesaid, shall not take effect, and that the inhabitants residing within the said district of country, should not have the benefits thereby intended, unless they should agree to renounce the said assumed government, and return to their allegiance to the government of this state:

Be it, therefore, further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That, upon application of commissioners or agents, authorised and appointed by the inhabitants residing in the said district of country, or by the inhabitants of any town or towns, or district or districts therein, to the person administering the government of this state, for the time being, touching or concerning the ratifying, confirming and quieting any titles to, or possessions of, lands within the district aforesaid, in cases not provided for by this act, and of and concerning the mode, manner, terms and conditions, agreeable to, and on which, the inhabitants within the district of country aforesaid, shall agree to renounce the said assumed government, and acknowledge allegiance to the government of this state, it shall and may be lawful for the person administering the government of this state, for the time being, by and with the advice and consent of the council of appointment, to appoint and commissionate, under the great seal of this state, three commissioners to meet, confer and agree with such commissioners or agents, authorised and appointed by the said inhabitants of the said district of country, or by the inhabitants of any town or towns, or district or districts therein, on all and singular the matters and things above mentioned; and all compacts, agreements and acts, entered into, made or done by the said commissioners to be appointed on behalf of this state, or any two of them, of or concerning the premises, shall be finally conclusive and binding on the government of this state; provided nevertheless, that nothing in this act contained, shall be construed to authorise the said commissioners to agree to cede or relinquish the jurisdiction of this state over the district of country aforesaid, or any part thereof, to any people, assemblies of people, or person or persons whatsoever, or to consent or agree that any part of the constitution of this state, shall be altered or changed.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That nothing in this act contained, shall be deemed, construed or taken, to restore any person or persons, or his or their heirs, to his or their estate, within the said district of country, who now stand attainted by the government of this state, for adherence to the king of Great-Britain, or whose estate or estates, have, or shall, become confiscate for such adherence, by virtue of any law of this state."

Be committed to a special committee to report thereon:

On this motion the vote was as follows: Yeas—Pennsylvania, Delaware, South Carolina, and Georgia—4 states. Mr. Scott of N. Y. voted aye, but could not cast the vote of the state. Nays—Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Maryland—3 states. Mr. Root of Connecticut voted no, but could not cast the vote of the state. Virginia was divided. So the question was lost. This closes the record of Congress on Vermont affairs in the period embraced in this volume.

OBSERVATIONS RELATING TO THE INFLUENCE OF VERMONT, AND THE TERRITORIAL CLAIMS, ON THE POLITICS OF CONGRESS.

BY JAMES MADISON.¹

MAY 1, 1782.

The two great objects, which predominate in the politics of Congress at this juncture, are Vermont and the Western Territory.

I. The independence of Vermont and its admission into the confederacy are patronized by the eastern states (New Hampshire excepted) first, from an ancient prejudice against New York; secondly, the interest which citizens of those states have in lands granted by Vermont; thirdly, but principally, from the accession of weight they will derive from it in Congress. New Hampshire having gained its main object by the exclusion of its territory east of Connecticut river from the claims of Vermont, is already indifferent to its independence, and will probably soon combine with other eastern states in its favor.

¹ Madison Papers, Vol. 1, p. 122; Life and Writings of Washington, Vol. VIII, p. 547. Mr. SPARKS in a note states that a copy of this important and interesting paper was given to him by Mr. MADISON. In Early History, pp. 406 to 408, HILAND HALL gives various references on this paper.

The same patronage is yielded to the pretensions of Vermont by Pennsylvania and Maryland, with the sole view of re-enforcing the opposition of claims of western territory, particularly those of Virginia, and by New Jersey and Delaware with the additional view of strengthening the interests of the little states. Both of these considerations operate also on Rhode Island, in addition to those above mentioned.

The independence of Vermont and its admission into the union are opposed by New York for reasons obvious and well known.

The like opposition is made by Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. The grounds of this opposition are, first, habitual jealousy of a predominance of eastern interests; secondly, the opposition expected from Vermont to western claims; thirdly, the inexpediency of admitting so unimportant a state, to an equal vote, in deciding on peace, and all the other grand interests of the union now depending; fourthly, the influence of the example on the premature dismemberment of the other states. These considerations influence the four states last mentioned in different degrees. The second and third, to say nothing of the fourth, ought to be decisive with Virginia.

II. The territorial claims, particularly those of Virginia, are opposed by Rhode Island, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland. Rhode Island is influenced in her opposition, first, by a lucrative desire of sharing in the vacant territory as a fund of revenue; secondly, by the envy and jealousy naturally excited by superior resources and importance. New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland are influenced partly by the same considerations, but principally by the intrigues of their citizens, who are interested in the claims of land companies. The decisive influence of this last consideration is manifest from the peculiar and persevering opposition made against Virginia, within whose limits these claims lie.

The western claims, or rather a final settlement of them, are also thwarted by Massachusetts and Connecticut. This object with them is chiefly subservient to that of Vermont, as the latter is with Pennsylvania and Maryland to the former. The general policy and interests of these two states are opposed to the admission of Vermont into the union; and if the case of the western territory were once removed, they would instantly divide from the eastern states in the case of Vermont. Of this, Massachusetts and Connecticut are not insensible, and therefore find their advantage in keeping the territorial controversy pending. Connecticut may likewise conceive some analogy between her claim to the western country and that of Virginia, and that the acceptance of the cession of the latter would influence her sentiments in the controversy between the former and Pennsylvania.

The western claims are espoused by Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and New York, all of these states being interested therein. South Carolina the least so. The claim of New York is very extensive, but her title very flimsy. She urges it more with the hope of obtaining some advantage or credit by its cession, than of ever maintaining it. If the cession should be accepted, and the affair of Vermont terminated, as these are the only ties which unite her with the southern states, she will immediately connect her policy with that of the eastern states, as far at least as the remains of former prejudices will permit.

APPENDIX I.

THE HALDIMAND CORRESPONDENCE—1779—1783.¹

STIMULATED by the treaties, between France and the United States, of amity, commerce, and defensive alliance against Great Britain, which were signed at Paris Feb. 6 1778. the British government immediately resolved to adopt a conciliatory policy towards the United States. Commissioners were appointed for the purpose, with power "to offer to the colonies at large, or separately, a general or separate peace." The negotiations with Vermont resulted from this policy, and were instituted by Sir HENRY CLINTON, who became chief commissioner when he succeeded Sir WILLIAM HOWE in the chief command of the British forces in America.² His head-quarters were at the city of New York, and from thence the first attempt was made upon Vermont in the letter of Col. BEVERLY ROBINSON to ETHAN ALLEN, dated March 30, 1780.³ To Gen. CLINTON, Gen. FREDERICK HALDIMAND was subordinate,⁴ but in These volumes consist of selections made from the British archives by JARED SPARKS, and were transmitted from London to the late HENRY STEVENS of Barnet by his son HENRY. To exclude all possible suspicion, these papers were published complete, embracing much that does not relate to Vermont, in the second volume of the Vermont Historical Society Collections. It is deemed both proper and necessary, under the editor's commission, to exclude from this volume such of the papers as are clearly extraneous.

⁴ FREDERICK HALDIMAND, born in the canton of Neuchatel, Switzerland, in Oct. 1718, entered the British army Jan. 4 1756, as Lieut. Col. of the 60th Royal American Regiment, and served almost constantly in America until 1784. He was Lieut. General from 1777, and Lieut. Gov. of the Province of Quebec from 1778 to 1784, covering the entire period of the negotiations with Vermont. He died at Yeverden, Switzerland, June 5 1791.—Drake's Dictionary of American Biography.

this business he appears as the principal actor in behalf of the British government, having been specially authorized by LORD GEORGE GERMAINE,¹ by reason of his readier access to Vermont and the position of his army, which hovered on the northern frontier ready to advance upon New York and Vermont.

The papers constituting the negotiation follow, all being from the Haldimand volumes of the Stevens Papers except where otherwise indicated.

Memorandum of letter of Gen. Haldimand to Lord George Germaine.

January 11th 1779.—Your Excellency acquaints the Minister, That the Insurgents of Vermont under Allen continue to give umbrage to what is called the New York Government.²

Lord George Germaine to General Haldimand.

March 3rd. 1779.—The Minister says, “The separation of the Inhabitants of the Country they style Vermont from the Provinces in which it was formerly included is a Circumstance from which much advantage might be derived, and sees no objection to giving them reason to expect the King will Erect their country into a separate Province.”

*Beverly Robinson to Ethan Allen.*³

NEW YORK, March 30, 1780.

Sir:—I am now undertaking a task which I hope you will receive with the same good intentions that incline me to make it. I have often been informed that you and most of the inhabitants of Vermont are opposed to the wild and chimerical scheme of the Americans in attempting to separate the continent from Great Britain, and to establish an independent state of their own; and that you would willingly assist in uniting America again to Great Britain and restoring that happy constitution we have so wantonly and unadvisedly destroyed. If I have been rightly informed and these should be your sentiments and inclinations, I beg you will communicate to me without reserve whatever proposals you would wish to make to the commander-in-chief,⁴ and I here promise that ¹ LORD GEORGE GERMAINE, Viscount Sackville, third son of the first Duke of Dorset, was born 26 Jan. 1716, and died 26 Aug. 1785. In Nov. 1775, he became Secretary of State for colonial affairs, which post he filled through the American revolution. He supported all the rigorous measures against America, and was opposed to offering conciliatory terms to the continental Congress in 1778, proposing rather to tempt the states separately, and thus by dividing them to conquer all. He was so unpopular with the London populace in 1780 that he was obliged to barricade his house.—See Drake's Dictionary of American Biography; and Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, p. 15.

² Many of the papers are only notes of and extracts from original papers, made for the use of Gen. Haldimand. They are given literally in this volume, except that the editor has supplied headings and arranged the documents in chronological order.

³ Ms. Ethan Allen Papers, p. 327.

⁴ Sir HENRY CLINTON, at New York city.

I will faithfully lay them before him according to your directions, and flatter myself I can do it to as good effect as any person whatever. I can make no proposals to you until I know your sentiments, but I think upon your taking an active part and embodying the inhabitants of Vermont in favor of the crown of England, to act as the commander-in-chief shall direct, that you may obtain a separate government under the king and constitution of England, and the men formed into regiments under such officers as you shall recommend, and be on the same footing as all the provincial camps are here. I am an American myself, feel much for the distressed situation my poor country is in at present, and anxious to be serviceable toward restoring it to peace, and that mild and good government we have lost. I have, therefore, ventured to address myself to you on this subject and hope you will see it in a proper light, and be as candid with me. I am inclinable to think that one reason why this unnatural war has continued so long, is that all the Americans who wish and think it would be for the interest of the country to have a constitutional and equitable connection with Great Britain, do not communicate their sentiments to each other so often and freely as they ought to do. In case you should disapprove of my hinting these things to you and do not choose to make any proposals to Government, I hope you will not suffer any insult to be offered to the bearer of this letter, but allow him to return in safety, as I can assure you he is entirely ignorant of its contents.

But if you should think it proper to send proposals to me to be laid before the commander-in-chief, I do now give you my word that if they are not accepted of or complied with by him, (of which I will inform you,) the matter shall be buried in oblivion between us. I will only add that if you should think proper to send a friend of your own here with proposals to the general, he shall be protected and well treated here, and allowed to return whenever he pleases.

I can say nothing further at present but my best wishes for the restoration of peace and happiness to America. And am your humble servant,

BEV. ROBINSON, *Col. Royal Americans.*¹

To Col. ETHAN ALLEN, {
State of Vermont. }

¹ BEVERLY ROBINSON was born in Virginia in 1723, and died at Thornbury, England, in 1792. He settled in New York, where he married Susanna, daughter of Frederick Phillipse, and acquired an immense estate by the marriage. At the opening of the contest with Great Britain he sympathized with the Whigs and conformed to their habits of self-denial in the use of British goods; but on the importunities of friends, and perhaps to save his property when the British army possessed the part of New York in which his estates were located, he accepted a commission as colonel of a loyal American regiment, which he himself raised, mainly in New York. In addition to service in the field, he was employed by the British commander-in-chief in more delicate duties, such as the successful corruption of Benedict Arnold, and the unsuccessful attempt to seduce Ethan Allen and other leading Vermonters. Robinson's estate was confiscated by the Whig government of New York, but the British government made some compensation in a money grant of £17,000 sterling, and offices to his sons.—Sabine's Royalists of the American Revolution, Vol. II; and Drake's Dictionary of American Biography.

Though dated in March, this letter was not received by Allen until July or August following—probably August, as stated in the Ethan Allen Papers, and in Gov. Chittenden's letter to Washington of Nov. 14 1781. In Williams's History of Vermont, Vol. II, pp. 202 and 204, the following account is given:

The wish and aim of the British general in New York was first announced in a letter from Col. Beverly Robinson to Ethan Allen, at that time a colonel in the American service.¹ The letter was dated New York, March 30th, 1780, and delivered to Allen in the street at Arlington, in July, by a British soldier in the habit of an American farmer. * * * * On the receipt of this letter, Allen immediately communicated it to the governor, and a number of the principal gentlemen in Vermont, who agreed in opinion that it was most prudent not to return any answer, but to let the matter pass into oblivion.

Ira Allen, who dwelt in the same house with Ethan, and was thoroughly informed as to all public affairs in Vermont, agreed with the above statement, but added:

Mr. Allen perused the letter, then told the bearer that he should consider of it, and that he might return. * * * General Allen immediately communicated the contents of it to the governor and some confidential friends, who agreed in opinion that it was best not to return any answer: but it was agreed, that in consequence of application to the governor of the friends of some persons that had been taken at Royalton, who were prisoners in Canada, that the governor should address a letter to the commander-in-chief, General Haldimand, on the subject of a cartel for the exchange of prisoners, and send a flag of truce with it to the first British ship stationed on the lake, which was accomplished.²

The attack on Royalton was not made until October 16,³ so a reference by Allen to that event as of July, or August, would be incorrect. Still, May 1781, Allen stated to Maj. Lernoult that "Gov. Chittenden last July sent a flag to the British commodore on Lake Champlain, with a letter to Gen. Haldimand, requesting the exchange of some prisoners, which produced a truce last autumn." This ignores Gov. Chittenden's letter in September, to which Gen. Haldimand replied in October, tendering the truce through Maj. Carleton.

Williams declared explicitly that Gov. Chittenden's letter to Gen. Haldimand was in July, and for the relief of prisoners taken in the spring of 1780.⁴

There is no record evidence that an exchange of prisoners was asked of Gen. Haldimand in July 1780; but there is proof that Gen. Washington was requested, in August of that year, to interpose with Haldimand in behalf of officers of Warner's regiment.⁵ But if it be true that Gov.

¹ Allen was brevet colonel by the authority of Congress. He was not in the continental service, but in the service of Vermont as general.

Chittenden wrote to Haldimand for an exchange in July, it is evident that that was not the letter to which Haldimand responded, but another letter, dated Sept. 27 1780. It is to this probably that Ira Allen referred in the statement before quoted. The proof is in the following memoranda:

September 27 1780: Gov. Chittenden wrote to Gen. Haldimand, asking a cartel for exchange of prisoners.¹

October 20: Gen. Haldimand issued instructions to his commissioners.²

October 22: Gen. Haldimand wrote by Maj. Carleton in answer to Gov. Chittenden's letter of Sept. 27. For abstract of Haldimand's answer see ante, p. 48.

October 24: Maj. Carleton informed Gen. Allen of Haldimand's letter to Chittenden, forwarded by Capt. Justice Sherwood, who was authorized to treat with Vermont officers on the subject. Maj. Carleton promised to commit no hostile act on Vermont during the negotiation.

October 29: Gen. Allen transmitted the letters of Haldimand and Carleton to Gov. Chittenden, and accepted Carleton's proposition to cease hostilities, provided the truce should embrace the northern frontier of New York; of which on the same day he notified Col. Webster of the New York forces.

October 31: This correspondence was read in the Vermont Assembly, when Gov. Chittenden stated "that he had wrote to Gen. Haldimand by advice of his Council making proposals to exchange prisoners, which occasioned the letters from Gen^l Haldimand & Maj^r Carleton, &c." On the same day both Houses advised the Governor "to appoint and empower some suitable person or persons to further negotiate the settlement of a Cartel with Maj^r Carleton agreeable to Gen^l Haldimand's proposals for that purpose."

November 2: Ira Allen and Joseph Fay were accordingly appointed.³

From these facts two important conclusions follow: one is that Gov. Chittenden proposed to Gen. Haldimand simply an exchange of prisoners, and not until he judged the application through Washington would fail; and the other is, that THE TRUCE proposed by Haldimand was used by him as the opportunity for attempting to detach Vermont from the American cause, by his instructions to his commissioners of Oct. 20 and Dec. 20 1780.

While this correspondence was going on, the enemy had been busy and successful in their work of devastation in New York.

² Date in Haldimand's further instructions of December 20 1780, post.

³ For the documents and proceedings here referred to, see ante, pp. 47-50.

October 10, Fort Ann was invested by the British, under Major Carleton, and its garrison surrendered; on the 13th, Fort George capitulated;¹ and after destroying almost all the farm-houses and barns in Kings and Queensborough townships, "they returned to Ticonderoga, in the vicinity of which place they continued until the 22d, and then fell down the lake [Champlain] to about ten miles north of Crown Point. On Wednesday the 25th, the whole embarked in their batteaux, and proceeded towards St. Johns, but were soon met by an express-boat which brought them all back. On the evening of that day a reinforcement arrived—between five and six hundred."²

This report was treated by Gen. Schuyler as evidence of a second invasion in greater force, and it occasioned great alarm, in both New York and Vermont. In fact, however, Carleton returned to propose the truce to Vermont, and having effected that and extended it also to New York, he retired with his forces to Canada.³

The documents next in chronological order in the Haldimand Papers are the following, all of which were furnished by Ira Allen, with the paper of May 11 1781, styled "Col. Allen's Information."

Gov. Chittenden to Gov. Clinton, Nov. 22 1780—see ante, p. 266; same to Gov. Trumbull, Dec. 12 1780—see ante, p. 274; and same to Gov. Hancock, same date—see ante, p. 198.

Gen. Haldimand to Lord George Germaine.

December 16th. [1780.]

Your Excellency mentions to the Minister that you have some reason to believe the Offers you made to the Chief of that district [Vermont] some time since, have been, or may be accepted.

The above is placed in the index to the Haldimand Papers as of December 16 1781, though the year is not named in the memorandum itself. The reply of Gen. Haldimand to Lord George Germaine's letter of February 7 1781 was dated May 23 1781, and referred to Haldimand's letter to the Minister as "of the 16th of December." This therefore fixes the date as given above. The truce with Ethan Allen had then been agreed to, and the Vermont commissioners had entertained Haldimand's agents with "much political conversation, and exhibits of papers took place,"⁴ from which, according to Williams, "the British concluded they were in a fair way to effect their purposes."⁵ Instructions of Gen. Haldimand to Commissioners appointed to negotiate with Vermont, Dec. 20 1780.

(COPY.) INSTRUCTIONS TO¹

Having given you full power in my name to negotiate, in conjunction with M [Major Dundas,²] with the people of Vermont for the Exchange of prisoners by my Letter of the 20th. October, I now instruct you in what you may assure and promise to them as the means of accommodation, and their return to their allegiance. Sensible of the Injustice which Individuals in the New York Government attempted against them, in soliciting and obtaining Grants of Lands which had in consequence of Grants from New Hampshire been cultivated by the labour and industry of the Inhabitants of the Green Mountains, I always regretted the measures which were taken by the Government of New York and felt compassion for the unhappy people who were the objects of them. I have always been of opinion that a people who during the last war were so ready on every occasion to oppose the Enemies of Great Britain, and [would] never have been prevailed upon to separate themselves from a Country with which they were intimately connected by religion, laws and language, had their properties been secured to them. It is therefore with great cheerfulness that I authorise you to give these people the most positive assurances that their Country will be erected into a separate province independant and unconnected with every Government in America, and will be entitled to every prerogative and Immunity which is promised to other Provinces in your [copy of the] Proclamation of the King's Commissioners.³ This I hope will be sufficient to remove every jealousy of Great Britain wishing to deprive them of their Liberties, or of my ever becoming an Instrument to oppress them. I sincerely wish to bring back to their Allegiance a brave and unhappy people, so that they may enjoy the Blessings of peace, Liberty, and an honest Industry. From the report you made me, I consider these people as sincere and candid in their propositions. I will therefore act towards them with the sincerity of a Soldier unpracticed in deceit and chicanery, and you may assure them that I would be sorry to engage them in any enterprise which might prove ruinous to them. I am sensible that their situation is delicate; that the utmost caution is necessary not only with regard to the powerful Enemies which surround them, but with regard to their own people, whose prejudices are great and many, and who cannot, at first view, see the advantage which will accrue to America in general as well as to themselves in particular from a reconciliation with the mother Country. I am so much convinced of the present infatuation of these people, and so far removed from expecting that the people with whom you negotiate, will betray any trust reposed in them, that I agree, that this negotiation should cease, and any step that leads to it be forgotten, provided the Congress shall grant the State of Vermont a seat in their Assembly and acknowledge its independency. I trust that time and other methods, will bring about a reconciliation and a return to their Allegiance, and hope, and expect, they will act

In order to entitle the Inhabitants of the State of Vermont to the provisions of Half Pay which His Majesty has been pleased to make to the Officers of Provincial Corps who take Arms in support of his Government, I propose to raise two Battalions consisting of Ten Companies each, to be commanded by Mess^{rs}. For the further encouragement of the persons who shall exert themselves in promoting the happy re-union, I promise, besides the above appointments, that they shall have Gratuities suitable to their merits.

1st. What Forces may I say Men [Allen] shall expect, and when?

To 1st and 2^d. As soon as the people of Vermont shall declare, either for a Neutrality, or for the King, I will cause to march 3000 or more Troops according as situation of things in the other parts of the province will admit to the lower end of Lake Champlain in order to support them, or to Co-operate with them in any plan which may be Agreed upon.

2^d. How far will they penetrate into the Country?

3rd. Shall the Truce be privately continued with Vermont, and will Neutrality at first be accepted and Trade granted?

3rd. There is the greatest necessity to keep the Negotiation secret and to remove even every suspicion of it, therefore the Truce cannot be privately continued, nor Trade granted. The Correspondence will be carried on by Flags, and these must be conducted with the most rigid precaution. I am equally sensible with the people of Castletown, that there are Spies from New York and other Colonies within this province, and who will be very apt to watch every ¹Although dated December 20 1780, these instructions probably were not communicated to Ira Allen until the meeting with Haldimand's commissioners, May 8 1781. Allen said: "The next day [after his arrival] the commissioners met to settle a cartel for the exchange of prisoners. Major Dundas, Captain Sherwood, and George Smyth, Esq., produced their credentials, as also Col. Allen."—Vt. Hist. Soc. Coll., Vol. I, p. 421.

²These queries may have been suggested by Ira Allen, but evidently they were put to General Haldimand by one of his commissioners. The paper is not dated, but it is numbered next in order to the "Instructions" to the commissioners, and the answers of General Haldimand are instructions in detail on the points raised.

4th. Will the whole of the New Hampshire or Vermont Grants of Land as they now stand be confirmed to the Grantees, or as many of them as return to their Allegiance, & all other Claims invalidated? Will Vermont have a separate Jurisdiction from any other Government under the King?

motion. The Flags from Vermont as well as those from Albany will for the future be stopped at Point-au-Fer, where proper persons will be sent to confer with them.

4th. With regard to the 4th. Query, it appears so reasonable that I can see no difficulty in it; however, as the rights and pretensions of many Individuals, even amongst themselves, may be comprehended in it, of the particulars of which I am entirely ignorant, and having no authority to decide Controversies of that kind, I cannot undertake for anything more than that the Country shall have a separate jurisdiction independent of every other in America, which to me appears sufficient to secure the property of every person belonging to the State of Vermont.

5th. With regard to the 5th. Query, you may say that as their province will be perfectly independent of every other Government under the King, they will have an undoubted right to every immunity, exemption or privilege mentioned in the proclamation of the King's Commissioners.

The 6th: Query is comprehended in the 3rd.

7th. Lieut: Colonel Allen will certainly have the Command of the Troops of Vermont, subject nevertheless to the Orders of the Officers whom General Haldimand will send with the 3000 Men, but who will not interfere with the particular arrangements or detail of the Troops of Vermont.

Gov. Chittenden to Gen. Washington.

ARLINGTON, STATE OF VERMONT, 15 January, 1781.

Sir:—I am extremely unhappy when I view the critical situation of the interest of the United States, and the great evils which attend the people in this quarter by the unhappy internal broils and contentions, caused by the disputes between them and the several adjacent states, which prevent that line of correspondence with your excellency necessary to make the common interest become mutual, and which, I am not insensible, puts it out of your excellency's power to hold such correspondence as, I presume, from your known humanity and warm attachment to the liberties of mankind, would be otherwise granted with pleasure.¹

¹ This is a frank acknowledgment of the fact that, so long as Vermont was not recognized as a state by Congress, Washington could not officially correspond with Chittenden.—Correspondence of the Revolution, Vol. III, p. 209.

Notwithstanding I esteem it my duty to inform your excellency of the perseverance of the inhabitants of this state in the grand cause of liberty in which they have embarked, and of the high estimation they entertain of your excellency's eminent services as commander-in-chief of the American arms, (not to flatter,) I am wanting in language to express their feelings. I can only assure your excellency that nothing impedes their willingness to support your excellency in the important trust of commander-in-chief, at the risk of everything dear to them, but a want of being assured, at the end, of sharing equal privileges with the United States.

It gives me pain to give your excellency any intelligence which may, in the least, add to your burden. But duty to my country, and self-preservation, make it become necessary to present an official account of our situation in this quarter, so far as respects the interest of the common cause; for which I refer your excellency to the enclosed letters, which are copies of them sent as therein specified, and will give a particular relation of the subject.¹

I can only mention further to your excellency, that many prisoners, inhabitants of this state, are in the custody of the enemy in Canada; and that, notwithstanding we have taken more than three times the number from them, it is at present out of our power to return equal numbers, having delivered prisoners so taken, from time to time, to the United States. We are about settling a cartel for the redemption of our men in Canada, as before mentioned.² I must therefore beg your excellency's indulgence with a sufficient number of prisoners to answer such an exchange, should the commissioners appointed for that purpose agree. Should this proposal meet your excellency's approbation, a return of the number shall be immediately transmitted, and a compliance with any reasonable requisition that may be necessary to complete a matter so earnestly wished for by, sir, your excellency's most respectful and most obedient humble servant,

THOMAS CHITTENDEN.

*Beverly Robinson to Ethan Allen.*³

NEW YORK, February 2, 1781.

Sir,—I sent two copies of the above letter [of March 30 1780, ante, p. 397,] the first on the 12th of April and the second the 24th of May last, neither of which I am afraid got to your hands, as I never had any answers from you. But the frequent accounts we have had for three months past from your part of the country, confirms me in the opinion I had of your inclination to join the king's cause, and to assist in restoring America to her former peaceable and happy constitution. This induces me to make another trial in sending this to you, especially as I can now with more authority, and assure you that you may obtain the terms mentioned in the above letter, provided you and the people of Vermont take an active part with us. I beg to have an answer to this as soon as possible, and that you will (if it is your intention) point out some method of carrying on a correspondence for the future; also in ²If this was not a slip of the pen, it implied that Washington had been notified by Chittenden before this date of the proposed cartel; but no previous letter to that effect is found in Washington's correspondence. Doubtless Ethan Allen's letter to Washington, Aug. 1780, was in Chittenden's behalf, and that may be the one referred to.

Memoranda of dispatch from Lord George Germaine to Gen. Haldimand.

February 7, 1781. (N^o. 77.)

The Minister says: The return of the people of Vermont to their Allegiance is an Event of the utmost Importance to the King's Affairs.

General Haldimand has received Instructions to draw them over, and give them support.

Lord George Germaine to Sir Henry Clinton.—[Extract.]

WHITEHALL, [London.] February 7, 1781.

The return of the people of Vermont to their allegiance, is an event of the utmost importance to the king's affairs; and at this time, if the French and Washington really meditate an irruption into Canada, may be considered as opposing an insurmountable bar to the attempt.¹ General Haldimand, who has the same instructions with you to draw over these people, and give them support, will, I doubt not, push up a body of troops, to act in conjunction with them, to secure all the avenues through their country into Canada; and when the season admits, take possession of the upper parts of the Hudson and Connecticut rivers, and cut off the communication between Albany and the Mohawk country. How far they may be able to extend themselves southward, or eastward, must depend on their numbers, and the disposition of the inhabitants; but, if Albany should take part with them, the inducement to attempt to open a communication with them by Hudson's river will appear irresistible to people here.²

On the 23d of February,³ Ethan Allen received the second letter of Beverly Robinson, dated at New York, February 2, and on the 9th of March he transmitted both of Robinson's letters to Congress, with the following:

Ethan Allen to the President of Congress.

SUNDERLAND, 9 March 1781.

Sir,—Inclosed I transmit your Excellency two Letters which I received under the signature thereto annexed, that they may be laid before ¹Washington had entertained such a design at times from September 1778 to December 1779.—Life and Writings, Vol. VI, pp. 56–423. Vermont prepared to aid this proposed invasion of Canada.—See Vol. I, pp. 217–225.

²This letter had been intercepted. It was read in Congress July 31, and published in the Pennsylvania Packet of August 4 1781, and had an immediate and powerful influence upon Congress, tending to settle the long pending controversy in favor of Vermont. It is not in Stevens's Haldimand Papers.

³This date is fixed by the report of the carrier and spy, made to Gen. Haldimand in June following.

Congress: shall make no Comments on them, but submit the disposal of them to their consideration. They are the identical and only Letters I ever received from him, and to which I have never returned any manner of Answer, nor have I ever had the least personal acquaintance with him, directly or indirectly.

The Letter of the 2nd February, 1781, I received a few days ago, with a Duplicate of the other, which I received the latter part of July last past,¹ in the high road in Arlington, which I laid before Governor Chittenden and a number of other principal gentlemen of the State (within 10 minutes after I received it) for Advice; the result, after mature deliberation, and considering the extreme circumstances of the State, was to take no further notice of the matter. The reasons of such a procedure are very obvious to the people of this State, when they consider that Congress have previously claimed an exclusive right of arbitrating on the existence of Vermont as a separate Government, New York, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts Bay at the same time Claiming this Territory either in whole or in part, and exerting their influence to make Schisms among the Citizens, thereby in a considerable degree weakening this Government and exposing its Inhabitants to the Incursions of the British Troops and their Savage Allies from the Province of Quebec.

It seems that those Governments, regardless of Vermont's contiguous Situation to Canada, do not consider that their Northern Frontiers have been secured by her, nor of the merit of this State in a long and hazardous war, but have flattered themselves with the expectation that this State could not fail (with their help) to be desolated by a foreign Enemy and that their exorbitant claims and avaricious designs may at some future period take place in this District of Country.

Notwithstanding those complicated Embarrassments, and I might add, Discouragements, Vermont, during last Campaign, defended her Frontiers, and at the Close of it opened a Truce with General Haldimand (who commands the British Troops in Canada) in order to settle a Cartel for the mutual Exchange of Prisoners, which continued near 4 weeks in the same situation, during which time Vermont secured the Northern Frontiers of her own, and that of the state of New York in consequence of my including the latter in the Truce, although [that] Government could have but little claim to my protection. I am confident that Congress will not dispute my sincere attachment to the Cause of my country, though I do not hesitate to say I am fully grounded in opinion that Vermont has an indubitable right to agree on Terms of Cessation of Hostilities with Great Britain, provided the United States persist in rejecting her Application for a Union with them: for Vermont, of all people, would be the most miserable, were she obliged to defend the Independence of the United Claiming States, and they at the same time at full liberty to overturn and ruin the Independence of Vermont. I am persuaded when Congress considers the circumstances of this State, they will be more surprised that I have transmitted them the enclosed Letters than that I have kept them in Custody so long, for I am as resolutely determined to defend the Independence of Vermont as Congress are that of the United States, and rather than fail, will retire with hardy Green Mountain Boys into the desolate Caverns of the Mountains, and wage war with Human nature at large.

His Excellency Samuel Huntingdon, Esq.

N. B.—From a New York Member of Congress to his Friend:

[Extract, &c.]

March 11th. [12th] 1781.

The Qⁿ. [question] of the N. H. Gr^{ts}. will soon be settled, as the State of that name urges its final decision, and there is great reason it will be great and honorable to this State. The Cession made by Virginia to the United States hath removed the cause of opposition which Maryland gave to our disputes not settled, and the other small States not near us will ease their opinion, as the contention respecting us is now removed.²

Memoranda of dispatch from Gen. Haldimand to Lord George Germaine.

April 30th.—Your Excellency sends the Minister some papers which would give his Lordship the fullest information you had been able to procure of the state of Vermont and Disposition of its Inhabitants, and an Extract of a Letter from Gen. H. which expresses his suspicion that Ethan Allen is endeavouring to deceive both the Congress and Us.

On the 1st of May 1781, IRA ALLEN commenced his journey to Isle aux Noix to meet the British commissioners for the purpose of settling a cartel. He went as sole commissioner for Vermont, attended by a guard, consisting of Lieutenant Simeon Lyman, two sergeants, and sixteen privates. He was politely received by the commandant, Maj. Dundas. ALLEN himself said:

The next day [after his arrival, probably May 6, making this first interview on the 7th.] the commissioners met to settle a cartel for the exchange of prisoners; Major Dundas, Captain Sherwood, and George Smythe, Esq., produced their credentials, as also Colonel Allen, and they adjourned to the following day. Captain Sherwood walking next morning with Colonel Allen, told him that Major Dundas had no knowledge of any business except the exchange of prisoners, and that he [Sherwood] and Mr. Smythe were the commissioners to settle the armistice, and to concert with him [Allen] measures to establish Vermont a colony under the crown of Great Britain. Whether Major Dundas was or not acquainted with the main business, he conducted himself as if he was not [acquainted with it,] for which reason the papers respecting the exchange of prisoners were kept by themselves for public inspection. What concerned the armistice was more verbal than written.¹

WILLIAMS prefaced his account of this mission with the following statement :

New York had withdrawn their troops from the post at Skenesborough; all the continental troops had been ordered out of the territory; and the adjacent states did not afford them [Vermont] any assistance. The people of Vermont were exposed to the whole force of the enemy in Canada, and had neither magazines, money, or an army, to oppose the enemy at the northward, who were seven thousand strong. [Ira Allen said ten thousand.] No way of safety remained for Vermont, but to endeavor to effect that by policy which could not be done by power. The cabinet council concluded that they were designedly forsaken by the continent, to force them into a submission to New York;² and that it was clearly their duty to provide for the safety of the people in the only way that remained, *by managing the British attempts to corrupt them, to their own [Vermont's] advantage.*³

The condition of the New York frontier at this period served to strengthen these convictions. May 4, Gen. SCHUYLER, then at Saratoga, declared to Governor Clinton that it was impossible to keep up a sufficient guard on the frontier for want of provisions; and on the 5th, Brig. Gen. JAMES CLINTON wrote that the troops would abandon the frontier—it was absurd to suppose they could or would exist under their then present circumstances.⁴

Substance of what passed in a Conference with Col. Ira Allen between the 8th and 25th of May, 1781.

8th. Colonel Allen says, he is not authorized to treat of a Union, but is verbally instructed by Governor Chittenden and General Allen to lay their present Situation before General Haldimand, and to inform him that matters are not yet ripe for any permanent proposals: that they, with some part of the Council, are anxious to bring about a Neutrality;⁵

² The ALLENS averred the same, IRA citing in proof the resolution of Congress condemning the grants of land by Vermont—her main resource for keeping troops in the field; and Gov. CHITTENDEN charged New York with withdrawing her forces from the frontier for the “avowed purpose” of exposing Vermont to the common enemy.—See Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. I, p. 419, and post, 416; Chittenden to Washington, ante, pp. 350–353; and Ethan Allen to Congress, ante, p. 407.

³ WILLIAMS'S History, Vol. II, p. 207.

⁴ Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, p. 54.

⁵ The General Assembly authorized negotiations for an exchange of prisoners only. When Gen. HALDIMAND proposed to enlarge the scope of the negotiations, and was humored by the Vermont commissioners, but few Vermonters were in the secret. Gov. CHITTENDEN in 1793 gave being fully convinced that Congress never intended to admit them as a State, but they dare not make any Agreement with Britain until the populace are better modelled for the purpose; wish, however, to settle a Cartel for the Exchange of Prisoners, and thereby keep open a door for further negociation.

9th. Vermont has excluded Jurisdiction [of New Hampshire] 20 Miles East from Connecticut River to the ancient Mason Line, and [of New York] West from the North West corner of Massachusetts to Hudson's River, following up the River to the Head, then due North to the latitude of 45°.

The Eastern Inhabitants are now represented in the Assembly, and the Western will probably be by the 15th. of next June. As this is done at the request of the people, it will probably soon enable Vermont to make proposals for a Union with Britain with more safety than at present.

10th. Walked and discoursed fully with Colonel Allen. He is very cautious and intricate. I urged him to make some proposals, telling him that it is now in the power of Vermont to become a Glorious Government under Great Britain—to be the seat of peace and plenty, with every degree of Liberty that a free people can wish to enjoy: that he must see General Haldimand had, in his instructions to me,¹ conceded everything he could in reason ask or expect. He replied, General Haldimand did not allow them to choose their own Governor, a privilege they never could relinquish with propriety: that when they were ripe for proposals, they could not go farther than Neutrality during the War, at the end of which they must, as a separate Government, be subject to the then ruling power, if that power would give them a free Charter in every sense of the word; but, if not, they would return to the Mountains, turn Savages and fight the Devil, Hell, and Human Nature at large. I told him Vermont could not accomplish those extravagant flights: that hot headed Men might pretend what they would, but that I knew Human nature too well to be easily persuaded that the affectionate Husband, Father, Wife and Mother could ever be prevailed upon to leave their happy possessions, and, with an Infant train, lead a savage, wandering Life, surrounded by Enemies of the human and brute Creation, exposed to every inconvenience attending those un hospitable Mountains, &c., &c. I did not pretend to know how far these Chimeras might intimidate Congress, but I could assure him General Haldimand had too much experience and good sense to take any further notice of them than by that Contempt they merited. Colonel Allen now began to reason with more coolness, and made up a long chain of arguments advanced by General Allen to me at Castleton.² I told him those arguments had been already exhibited to General Haldimand and were then satisfactory the names of eight only—probably the number at the outset. IRA ALLEN gave the same number, but stated that “more were added as the circumstances required.” The names given by the Governor were THOMAS CHITTENDEN, MOSES ROBINSON, SAMUEL SAFFORD, ETHAN ALLEN, IRA ALLEN, TIMOTHY BROWNSON, JOHN FASSETT [jr.] and JOSEPH FAY.—See WILLIAMS'S History, Vol. II, p. 214; and Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. I, p. 421.

to him, but I was certain the General would now expect some further advances; would therefore advise him, if he could not make any propositions in behalf of Vermont, to give his Excellency some reasons why he did not. The conversation again became warm and spirited.

11th. Colonel Allen expressed a great desire to see the General, and his power to treat with Vermont. I told him it would give his own people too much jealousy, and that he might rest assured General Haldimand never will promise more than he is amply empowered to fulfil. Allen observed he did not think the parliament had passed any act in favor of Vermont. I answered, I did not think the parliament of Great Britain has yet considered Vermont of consequence enough to engross the attention of that Assembly. He replied, in his opinion Vermont must be considered of consequence enough to engross the attention of Parliament before any permanent Union can take place between Great Britain and that people.

12th. This day had a long and very friendly Conference with Colonel Allen. He seems anxious to convince me that a respectable number of the leading Men of Vermont are endeavouring to bring about a Union by way of Neutrality. He appeared less reserved, and again repeated the arguments advanced by General Allen respecting the impossibility of an Union with Great Britain until Vermont had fortified herself against the neighbouring States by a firm internal Union, and observed they must firmly unite the extra Territories lately taken in, and form the population into a proper system for such a revolution. He says their best politicians are making every possible effort to bring this about: that they have sent circular Letters to the different States as promised by General Allen. He says they have taken in the new Territories with a view to embarrass Congress and strengthen themselves for a revolution: that many members of Assembly from Connecticut River and East are friends to Government, such as Judge Wells, Judge Jones, Colonel Oliot [Olcott,] and many others:¹ that when the Members for the Western part take their Seats, it is expected that a number of them will be composed of friends to Government, (or Tories.) Colonel Allen has given me the following narrative, as nearly as I can recollect, viz: Vermont having got information that New Hampshire had renewed her Claims to that State, and had summonsed a Convention of one Member from each Town for 20 Miles on each side of Connecticut River, to sit in January, he was dispatched to attend said Convention. On his arrival he found a number of Tories were members. He hinted to them Vermont's plan of Neutrality, and to the others the advantage of joining Vermont, by which they would evade a large burden of Taxes. By those insinuations he soon gained over the Majority of the Convention in favor of Vermont. They adjourned till February, when a Committee was appointed to take this matter under Consideration, and the Committee reported in favour of a Union with Vermont. This Report was carried to the Vermont Assembly, then convened at Windsor, where it was ratified, and Articles of Union drawn up and sent out for the approbation of the people, which was so unanimous that Members were appointed from each town to sit in the Assembly. Colonel Alien was sent from this Convention to the Assembly of New York, then sitting at Albany, with an official demand from Governor Chittenden to relinquish their Claims to Vermont, to which the Senate agreed, but not meeting with the same success with Governor Clinton. He returned to the Assembly of Vermont with his report, who immediately made Articles agreeable to the petitions of the people on the Western part, and recommended a Convention of those people to take the Articles into consideration and join the Assembly in June next. In consequence of the Eastern Union, they have formed three Brigades—the first commanded by General Allen on the West side of the Mountain—the second by B. General Bellows on the East side of the [Connecticut] River, and the third by B. General Olliot [Olcott,] on the West side. On the East side [of] the Mountains resides their Lieutenant Governor Carpenter. Allen thinks when the Western Union is complete, they can raise Ten Thousand fighting men. He says this great and sudden revolution has been brought about upon the principles of an Union with Great Britain, or at least of Vermont being a neutral power during the War. Allen does not agree with Mr Johnson¹ that the Majority wish to compromise with Britain, but says their prejudices are yet so great that it would not be safe to propose it but to a few of the population, and they have not yet dared to mention it to half of the ruling Men.

13th. Colonel Allen still appears desirous to convince me that the principal Men in Vermont are striving to prepare the people for a change in favour of Government. He wishes me to represent everything in the most favorable manner to the General, and hopes he will not be impatient. He says it is as requisite the people should be prepossessed against the proceedings of Congress before they are invited to a Union with Britain, as it is for a Christian New light to be perfectly willing to be d—d before he can become a true Convert. This evening, Mr Allen observed that the d—d bustles among the powers of Europe would, within six Months, change the face of American Affairs, but did not know, nor care, whether for the better or worse. I replied, he must have a predominant wish, as Neutrality was, in principle, in my opinion, inadmissible. He said he should not deny but principle inclined him and Vermont in general for the success of America, but interest and self-preservation (if Congress continued to oppress them,) more strongly inclined them to wish for the success of Great Britain, and fight like Devils against their oppressors, be they who they might.

14th. Colonel Allen seemed immersed in Contemplation in consequence of some News of the advantage the English have already gained over the Dutch; the unanimous and spirited conduct of Great Britain; their raising the yearly supply without the least embarrassment, &c. He says, should Britain, by some d—d turn of fortune gain a victory over the Combined Fleets, all Europe would not be able to contend with her, and he would give almost his Fortune to be able at this time to know what will be the fate of America. He hopes I will not represent any of our Conversation in such a light as to incline General Haldimand to break off the Negociation, for he assures me the leading Men of Vermont are sincerely anxious to continue it in such a manner as to bring about a Pacification.

15th. Colonel Allen seems exceedingly anxious to return, and often says his presence will be very necessary at the next Assembly, as they will not know how to proceed until they hear what he has to report from General Haldimand.

¹ Probably Col. THOMAS JOHNSON of Newbury, who was then a prisoner in Canada, and intimate with Capt. SHERWOOD. Johnson at that time countenanced the negotiation, for the purpose of obtaining liberty to return to his home; and on his return he denounced it in a letter to Washington.—See Vt. Historical Magazine, Vol. II, pp. 928–930.

18th. I endeavoured to persuade Colonel Allen to make some Overtures to General Haldimand, but he still says he is not authorized, and cannot do anything of the kind. He thinks the General will be convinced, by the reasons he has given in writing, that the leaders in Vermont are doing all that is possible to effect an Union or Neutrality, and that General Allen was obliged, for his own safety, to send Colonel Robinson's Letters to Congress, as it was previously known in public that such Letters had been sent to him. This was done by the voice of the Legislature with their public approbation of General Allen's Conduct in not detaining the Man who brought the Letter, which had a great tendency to weaken the prejudices of the people in favor of Congress. Governor Chittenden would have been happy to have had it in his power to give him private instructions for an accommodation, but he is, with his Council, under the Eye of the more popular Legislature, and cannot act as a British General can, for had he given such private instructions, he was not in a condition to support them, nor to keep faith with General Haldimand without the consent of the Legislature, which they are endeavouring to unite in the plan of re-union.

19th. Colonel Allen sends a Letter to the Commissioners with new proposals for an exchange.

20th. Receives an answer, which seems to give him much uneasiness. He says he never shall be able to persuade his employers that General Haldimand wishes to treat on any terms with them, except he is able to shew them some certainty of Exchange when the prisoners shall be produced.

21st. I communicated to Col. Allen his Excellency's Letter of the 14th. instant.¹ He requested a Copy of it, but I refused to give any from the General's Letters. Allen says he is now perfectly satisfied of the General's powers to treat, and acknowledges that His Excellency acts with a noble generosity and candour, which he will endeavour to equal on his part. In justice to His Excellency, he will engage to efface, as much as he can, the idea of a Truce subsisting between Great Britain and Vermont. He is very sorry he is not able to enter upon any proposals for a re-union, declares upon his honor that he sincerely wishes for such an event, will use all his influence to bring it about, and is certain his Brother will do the same, but is much afraid that General Haldimand will not have patience to wait the time it will necessarily require. He observed as usual the difficulty of changing popular bodies, &c. &c. He promised on the honor of a Gentleman to do his endeavours to have Commissioners appointed and properly authorized for treating of a Re-union, by the 20th of next July, provided they can be assured of exchanging what prisoners they can then bring to the Shipping.

22nd. This day I had a long Conversation with Colonel Allen for the heads of which see my private Letter to Major Lernoult, and Allen's note of this date.²

23rd. Colonel Allen expatiates on the dangers and difficulties attending the bringing about a revolution, as a number of the Council and the major part of the Legislature have not as yet the least idea of anything farther than neutrality, and many of them are ignorant of that. He expresses fears that it will not be accomplished, though he sincerely wishes it may. He still thinks the principles on which America first took Arms were just, but he sees, with regret, that Congress has learned to play the Tyrant, and is convinced it is for the interest and safety of Vermont to accept of General Haldimand's terms. I told him he talked well, but I wished he had said as much when he first arrived, for, however convinced I may be of his candour, the change gave some room for suspicion that he now acts from design. He replied, that General Haldimand's candour demands the same from him, and that he has not altered his sentiments, but only throws them out more freely than he at first intended till he had further instructions from his employers; but the candid, open manner in which the General had written, forbid his acting with any disguise.

24th. Colonel Allen much the same in conversation as yesterday, but observes that as he knows the General will very soon hear what reports he makes, and how he conducts himself after he gets home, he wishes me clearly to inform the General with the method he must take to comply with his demand of undeceiving the other States respecting the Truce, &c. He says he must, as far as he dares, possess the minds of the people with the idea of a re-union. He shall therefore tell their own officers commanding at Castletown, that he cannot tell what may take place, but they must keep themselves in readiness for all events. But to the other States he shall positively declare that no Truce nor probability of one subsists between General Haldimand and Vermont, and this he should have done for their own safety. But in compliance with the General's desire he shall be very particular in this declaration.

25th. I communicated C^t Mathews' Letter to Colonel Allen, respecting News.¹ He says the News gives him no further anxiety than to excite in him a desire to know how this War will terminate: for, under the present uncertainty of Vermont, he does not know whether this news is favorable or otherwise. But he well knows that he and his Family have large fortunes which they do not intend to lose, if there is a possibility of saving them. At all risks he is determined that Congress shall not have the parceling of his Lands to their avaricious Minions.

I then showed him C^t Matthews' Letter of the General's sentiments.² He appeared very much pleased with it, and engaged his honor that the General should hear from their Assembly by the 20th. of next July, and as much sooner as possible, but did not think he should be able to send any certain account of the result until that time, as they are not to assemble till about the middle of June, and must sit some time before the Business could be fairly opened to the whole House, after which it would necessarily occasion long and warm Debates, let it turn out as it might in the end. Mr. Allen and myself have agreed on a signal for his Messenger, which we put in writing and both signed. Should General Haldimand find it absolutely necessary to send a private Express to Vermont, Colonel Allen desires it may be by a man of trust, who may be directed to make himself known either to Governor Chittenden, Colonel Allen, or General Allen, or one of the following Gentlemen, Colonel Brownson, D^r Fay, Judge Fassit [Fassett,] or C^t Lyon. The Contents of the Message should be a secret to the Messenger, written upon a small piece of paper, which he should be directed to swallow, or otherwise destroy if in danger of being taken by a scout from New York, and he should be very careful to shun the Vermont scouts. On these Conditions Col. Allen engages that the Messenger shall be immediately sent back. Colonel Allen, after expressing much satisfaction with the polite treatment he had received, embarked about 12 o'Clock.

Indorsed, "No. 1. Substance of what passed and Conversation with Colonel Ira Allen, between the 8th. and 25th. of October¹, 1781."

Colonel ALLEN gave a brief account of this interview, which will be found in the first volume of the Vermont Historical Collections, pp. 420-426. It contained a document which is not to be found in the Haldimand Papers. It was probably written on the 11th of May. Allen's statement in reference to it was, that "he declined writing anything, lest his writings should be exposed;" but "would verbally state the business, which Major Lunno [Lernoult] might write and communicate to the commander-in-chief:"

"Major Lunno at once adopted Colonel Allen's mode to inform the commander-in-chief, and proceeded in the following manner:—

Question.—Did not the people of Vermont take an early and active part in the rebellion?

Answer.—The people of Vermont were informed that hostilities had commenced at Lexington, by an express from the Governor and Council of Connecticut to Colonel Ethan Allen, who requested him immediately to raise the Green Mountain Boys, and, without loss of time, to march and take the forts Tycondaroga and Crown Point, which Colonel Allen complied with, and also took the King's sloop of war with 16 guns, then lying off Fort St. John's.²

Question.—Have the people of Vermont continued their exertions in the course of the war?

Answer.—No people in America have exerted themselves more than those of Vermont; they, with the assistance of the militia from the State of New Hampshire, and from the county of Berkshire, gave the first check to General Burgoyne's army by the victory at Bennington, and by other exertions, greatly contributed to the capture of his whole army at Saratoga.

Question.—What were the motives which stimulated the people of Vermont to such violent measures?

Answer.—The inhabitants of Vermont principally came from Connecticut and the other New England States, and, as brethren, felt for them in a high degree when hostilities first commenced; besides, they were of the same opinion as entertained by their brethren in New England, that the Parliament of Great Britain had no right to bind and control the colonies in all cases whatsoever, and that representation ought to precede taxation.

Question.—On what principles do the people of Vermont act by endeavoring to obtain an amistice, and the privilege of being a colony under the crown, after taking so decided a part as you say, on similar principles to those of their brethren in New England?

Answer.—When the people of Vermont first took an active part against Great Britain, they were in principles agreed with their brethren in the other colonies to oppose the claims of the Parliament on America, and fought in their country's cause, expecting to enjoy equal privileges with their neighbors in chusing and establishing their own form of government, and in sharing with them all the advantages which might result from their united efforts in the common cause. But after all, they have found to their sorrow, by acts and resolutions of Congress, and proceedings of other States, that they intend to annihilate the new State of Vermont, and annex its territory to New York, whose government is perfectly hated and detested by the people of Vermont. To effect this plan, the frontiers of Vermont have been left naked and exposed to the wasting sword of the British troops, with a view to depopulate the country, and give the New York monopolists possession. This usage being too much for human nature to bear, the citizens of Vermont think themselves justifiable, before God and man, in seeking an armistice with the British, and ceasing further to support a power that has too soon attempted to enslave a brave and generous people.

Question—Should the Commander-in-Chief consent to an armistice with Vermont for the time being, and admit it to be a British colony, with as extensive privileges as any colony ever had, what would be an adequate compensation for the inactivity of the army? and how soon can Vermont furnish a regiment to be put on the establishment, and march with the army against Albany, and what other assistance can Vermont give in such an expedition?

Answer.—The advantages to Great Britain by making an armistice, and receiving Vermont as a colony, will be great. After the propositions of Colonel Beverly Robinson, in his letter of March 30, 1780, to General Ethan Allen, the Cabinet Council of Vermont have not been inattentive to a peace and union with the British government. Governor Chittenden last July sent a flag to the British Commodore on Lake Champlain, with a letter to General Haldimand, requesting the exchange of some prisoners, which produced a truce last autumn. General Ethan Allen included the frontiers of New York to Hudson's River with Vermont, which produced very good effects, and made the people, among whom are many loyalists, on that district, friendly and anxious to come under the jurisdiction of Vermont. The Legislature of Vermont, on their petition, and in consequence of measures New York, &c., were pursuing against her, extended her jurisdictional claim over that part of New York; the territory thus added to the State of Vermont is bounded south by a line due west from the south-west corner of Vermont to the Hudson's River, thence up the said river to its source, and by a line due north to the south line of Canada, thence east to the north-east [west] corner of Vermont. Articles of union are forming, and no doubt that district will be duly represented in the next session of the Legislature of Vermont. In like manner has been added to the jurisdiction of the State, on petition of the inhabitants, all the territory lying east of Connecticut River, and west of Mason's patent, which takes away, at least, one-third part of the State of New Hampshire. These additional territories will give strength to Vermont and weaken Congress. The extent of country and the return of such a body of people to their allegiance, with the effects it may have on the people in the other States, many of whom are sick of the dispute, in consequence of the taxes and hardships already experienced, most likely will be of greater consequence than the operation of an army of ten thousand men. As to an army marching against Albany, it will operate against the union of the New York district, and that of New Hampshire, now forming with Vermont. This business requires time and moderation, with the address of some discreet loyalists now in Canada, who may visit their friends in those districts, and let them know that Vermont is on good terms with the British.

In Vermont are plenty of men who would be fond of commissions on the British establishment, and could raise a regiment in a few weeks;

but this, with sundry other things, can be better ascertained after the session of the General Assembly, at Bennington, next June."

ALLEN concluded his account as follows:

A cartel for an exchange of prisoners was completed. Thus terminated this negotiation in May, 1781, after seventeen days, on a verbal agreement, that hostilities should cease between the British and those under the jurisdiction of Vermont, until after the session of the Legislature of Vermont, and until a reasonable time after, for a commissary of prisoners to come on board the Royal George in Lake Champlain, and even longer, if prospects were satisfactory to the Commander-in-Chief.

In the mean time Vermont was to consolidate her unions to weaken Congress, permit letters to pass through Vermont, to and from Canada, and take prudent measures to prepare the people for a change of Government.

The Commissioners parted in high friendship, and Major Dundas furnished Colonel Allen and his suite with ample stores to return home. On Colonel Allen's return to Castletown, Captain Hurlbert and others waited on him, and desired to be advised whether to remain or remove to the interior parts of the country; the Colonel advised them to remain quiet on their farms; that the Governor and Council would provide the best means for their safety; that they must not be surprised if there was not a powerful army to protect the frontiers; should any event make it necessary, for the safety of their families, to move, they might depend on seasonable information: he had a similar interview with Major Hebar Allen, the Rev. Mr. Hibbard, &c., in Poultney.

The Colonel went to Sunderland, and made his report to the Governor and Council, who took measures to carry into effect the stipulations he had made. In June, the Assembly met at Bennington, and received the Representatives from the east and west unions.

The eight documents following were contemporaneous with the interview of May 8—25.

*Beverly Robinson to Gen. Haldimand.*¹

NEW YORK, May 8th. 1781.

Sir,—Vermont deserves our vigilant attention. I have much to say respecting her mysterious Conduct, but the Voluminous Cypher we use permits only a few Hints. We wrote to Ethan Allen last Summer and this Winter. He enclosed both Letters to Congress in a Letter of the 9th of March last, which we have incorporated with another from his Brother Ira, transmitting the Articles of a Union just then formed between Vermont and Cheshire and Grafton, two Counties East of Connecticut River, and also an Act to extend the Claim of Vermont's Jurisdiction West to the Hudson. The design of these may be to stimulate Congress to determine for Vermont against her neighbours, and admit her as a 14th State in the Confederacy. But why then does she widen the Controversy by extending her Breadth on both Sides? She dont deny the Titles in either of the Additions, nor will those Additions validate her own under the New Hampshire Grants.

¹The name of the writer is not given in the Haldimand Papers, but the letter itself indicates the writer, by the reference to Robinson's letters to Ethan Allen. The authoritative tone of this letter, at the close, indicates that it was written by the order, if not in the name, of Sir Henry Clinton.

Colonel Wells of Brattleborough, has sent his Son-in-Law with verbal information that throws great light upon the Conduct of Vermont. We take him to be a Friend, and he says by this Messenger that you know him to be so. Is it true? He offers his services for a Monthly interchange of Letters between Canada and the Coast of Connecticut, where we are to find a friend to give and receive Dispatches. Do you approve of this confidence?

His intelligence is, in substance, that Chittenden and the Allens, with a few others, form a Junto, who apprehend that the Congress and their Independence must fall, and therefore that she [Vermont] can make no stable Agreement, except with the Crown: that she knew at the time of her late Act to expand her bounds East and West, that the Senate of New York had passed a Bill to admit her to become a separate State, and that the Assembly was about to concur, but [were] prevented by Clinton's menacing them with a prorogation. The Messenger learnt in his way here at Albany what may be Clinton's motive, Viz That the French Minister had hinted to the Congress his disapprobation of forming a State, as his Master had contracted with but Thirteen. It may be well enough to suffer Vermont to play a double game in appearance till She can be aided by us, or form internal dispositions within her own limits to be able to act offensively with us. Wells admits that there are many in Vermont opposed to the re-union, and that the majority of Cheshire and Grafton are of such a Cast, at present.

The Western expansion was a project of Ira Allen, perhaps to find a counterbalance against that Majority, and 'tis said he was against the Eastern Union.

Chittenden has been questioned on the report, which took rise last Fall, of a neutrality between Vermont and Canada, and boasted that by declining an Acceptance of Offers he had saved the Frontiers: perhaps they may most incline to join neither the Crown nor Congress, but it concerns us, if possible, to bring them to a decision. If assurances of their being secured from the Jurisdiction of the Province of New York will satisfy them, I should not scruple to give them, but in urging them to decide, I foresee the necessity of yielding to such delays as may prevent a determination against us, and I am now writing for Instructions, that may enable me to come up to any reasonable expectations they may form.

Colonel Allen's Information respecting the State of Vermont.

ISLE AU NOIX, 11th. May 1781.

The Circular Letters of [Gov. Chittenden to] the Neighbouring States¹ enclosed by Major Du . . . [Dundas] were designed by the Cabinet of Vermont as a political stroke to keep the neighbouring States from committing Hostilities on them when they declared Neutrality, as also to embarrass in that respect. And as the Claiming States had done every thing in their power to make a Discord in Vermont, and had, in some measure succeeded, as there had been a large Body of Men living contiguous to Connecticut River [who] for sinister views had ever opposed the River being the Boundary Line between the respective States of New Hampshire and Vermont, and after Vermont relinquished her jurisdiction to Sixteen Towns East side of said River, the people on the two sides of said River refused to subject themselves to either Governments, except in some things respecting the War. They petitioned the General Court of New Hampshire to extend Jurisdiction over them and the whole of Vermont, which was in agitation in Congress, but the three Claiming States could not agree, and the Congress not making a decision at the time they sat in September last, in [on] which the petitioners of New Hampshire thought by raising a Convention from all the disaffected of the two States contiguous to Connecticut River, and by that means get them connected with New Hampshire, when the cabinet of Vermont thought that, considering all the clandestine and unjustifiable proceedings of New Hampshire, they were then ripe for giving to New Hampshire a heavy blow. An Agent was sent to said Convention. A committee was appointed to treat with the Legislature of Vermont, and the Convention adjourned [to meet again on] the same day said Legislature were to convene—and the Legislature, when convened, laid a jurisdictional Claim East to the Mason Line, leaving [being] about twenty Miles east of Connecticut River, and West to Hudson's River. Articles of Union were then Agreed on between the Legislature of Vermont and the Convention, and sent out for the approbation of the people, which was almost unanimous. The Legislature adjourned for a short space and convened again, when the Eastern District were fully represented, and proceeded to Business with great harmony. A large number of Petitions were sent from the people inhabiting within said Western Claims, requesting an Extension of Jurisdiction, &c. when a Committee was appointed to attend a Convention to be held at Cambridge in Instant May, with full powers to agree on Articles of Union. The Legislature adjourned to about the Middle of June next, to be convened at Bennington, when it is expected the Western District will be fully represented, as the people there have been some years wishing for a Union with Vermont, but have been held off, as the Cabinet of Vermont waited a more favourable opportunity when they could justify their Conduct to the world by the ill treatment of New York, &c. Within this Western Claim are a respectable number in favor of British Government.

The reason of Colonel Beverley Robinson's Letters and that of General Allen's being sent to Congress are, some Accounts had arrived from Long Island, purporting that General Allen had received such Letters; they were first promulgated amongst others, and Mr. Robinson's second Letter had not arrived, which was mentioned in his third. It was however necessary that some immediate step should be taken to pacify those of the populace that had taken an active and early part in this War, for many of them thought that after the declaration of Independence Congress was next to God Almighty, both in power and perfection, and it has been with great difficulty that that idea is so far erased and is at present in such a Decline, and as the Scene must be opened to this hot-headed Multitude before Neutrality could be declared, it was judged that the best way of promulgation was to send the identical Letters to Congress with a proper letter from General Allen, that it should go in a Mail from Hartford, and that the copies should be read in the Legislature at their next Session; after said Letters were read, and His Excellency the Governor and sundry Members of the Legislature had advanced arguments purporting the right of Vermont to hold Correspondence with any power, or to offer or accept terms of Cessation of Hostilities with any power, the injustice of the Claiming States and Congress, the unreasonableness of Vermont supposing herself under obligation to fight to support the independence of the United States and they left at full liberty to usurp the rights of Vermont,—that by the Conduct of Congress and the Claiming States it appeared that they were willing Vermont should defend their respective Frontiers so far as they could, and if Vermont should by the War be ever so much depopulated it would still be to their advantage, as their intentions appeared to be to divide said State among the Claiming States at the end of the War, &c.,—the Question being put, whether the proceeders [proceedings] had on said Robinson's Letters and that of General Allen's was approbated by the House, when it passed in the affirmative. There is every reason to suppose that these proceedings will have their desired effects, but it must be a work of time; popular Bodies move slow. The people of Vermont are ripening for Neutrality as fast as the wheels of time can roll; some politicians are of opinion it may be accomplished before the rising of the next Session of Assembly, but in such case it will be expected that Commissioners on the part of Vermont will negotiate such Business with Commissioners in some way duly authorized from the Court of Great Britain to approbate Vermont to be a neutral State to the end of the War. [F]or Vermont at present to consent to be a British Province would be little more than changing the Tables and making Vermont the seat of war. The Citizens of Vermont were of opinion that the demands of Great Britain upon her Colonies were unconstitutional and unreasonable, which induced them to take an active part in the War, nor have they yet altered their opinion in that respect. But the treatment they have met with from Congress and the Claiming States, considering the active part they have taken in this War, has raised a greater resentment in the minds of the more contemplative against Congress and the Claiming States than they have against Great Britain, and considering the extent of their Territory and numbers of Inhabitants are fully sensible that they cannot continue a separate power, but that in time they must connect with some more aged and powerful, and when they consider their contiguous situation to that of the New England States, the Ties of Consanguinity, &c., the Debts contracted by the United States, &c. Vermont are clear of Debt, and wish so to continue. Upon a full consideration of the peculiar situation of Vermont the leading Men are doing everything in their power to bring about Neutrality, but, as it has been before observed, that in order to settle some broils in the State, it was necessary to close said Union, which in some respect tends to postpone a completion of neutrality, yet, when once effected, it would be the more powerful and permanent. Whether Congress or the Claiming States would use coercive measures with Vermont or not at such a Declaration is at present uncertain; however, should they attempt it should choose to try them one Battle before we called for any assistance. Should any Considerable Force be sent to invade the Frontiers of New York before Neutrality could be settled, would propose a Feint to be made towards the Frontiers of Vermont, which would enable the Officers in Vermont that are principal in Command to declare [deceive ?] their other Officers and Men that are so exceeding great whigs.

Colonel Allen's reasons for settling a Cartel are to shew the people of Vermont that the British General will consider Vermont as a State unconnected with the United [States,] and thereby enable them to collect a sufficient number of prisoners that were taken with General Burgoyne and elsewhere,¹ that are now scattered in a [the] Country, to exchange for those in Canada, and to continue an intercourse by Flags. The prisoners taken at Fort Ann and Skenesborough will at a future period when Vermont exercises Jurisdiction there come under Consideration.

QUEBEC, 15th. May 1781.

Sir,—I have had the Honor to lay before His Excellency the Commander in Chief your Letters of the 8th. and 9th. Instant with their Enclosures, from all which His Excellency is clearly of opinion with you, that the Flag is sent more for the purpose of gaining time and influencing the Congress than to forward the Negotiation proposed on our part, and formerly encouraged on theirs, or even for the settling of a Cartel. The extension of their Territory and Jurisdiction, their unreasonable demands respecting a Cartel, and their avowing Ethan Allen's exposing to Congress Colonel Robinson's Letter, evince their unfavorable disposition to the Union we wish for. His Excellency is therefore determined, that unless they open their intentions more fully, and declare the Conduct they mean to adopt, at once to put a final stop to all treaty with them, and it is not unlikely this Declaration may bring them to a decision—in all events it will counteract their views with respect to Congress and prevent our being the instrument of their success. Notwithstanding this resolution, His Excellency, before he entirely relinquishes an object he has so much at heart, wishes they could be fully informed of the favorable terms held out to them, and desires you will, for that purpose, communicate them, at large, to M^r. Allen, unless, by his conduct, you are of opinion of the inefficacy of the measure; but he likewise particularly desires, that you will not, upon any account whatever, leave the paper in M^r. Allen's possession, or trust it where it may be Copied; for tho' it contains nothing which the General would hesitate to publish, yet this precaution is necessary for your protection, and it is sufficiently justified by their having given up Colonel Robinson's Letters. After being fully acquainted with His Excellency's intentions, they may, at any time they shall think proper, communicate their determination, in consequence thereof, by a Flag; but no Truce, or Cartel, as proposed by them, can, in the mean time, be admitted. They have been acquainted with the General's disposition in their favour since last November, and have had sufficient time maturely to deliberate upon it. They should, therefore, have come in prepared to accept or reject his proposals. If all your endeavours should prove ineffectual, His Excellency thinks you would do well to let M^r. Allen understand that a Flag will be sent to Albany to declare to the people that no Treaty or Cartel of any kind exists between us and Vermont State, and that their Overtures made for the latter were rejected, and all negotiations finally at an end, least they should keep up the Farce to engage the attention of Congress.

QUEBEC, 17th. May 1781.

Sir,—Having considered the paper which was dictated by Colonel Allen and transmitted by you to Captain Matthews, for my Information, you are hereby instructed to Assure him that I am fully empowered by His Majesty to offer the Terms which are contained in my former Instructions to you. I declare this upon my Honor.

As I have not authority to make any Treaty of Neutrality, I cannot agree to any. The State of Vermont must either be united in Constitutional Liberty with Great Britain or continue at Enmity with it. I have no desire to deceive, nor wish to engage them in any Enterprize which I do not think equally advantageous to them and to Great Britain, and therefore must recommend to the leading Men of the State of Vermont, who wish that an Accommodation should take place, to lose no time in declaring themselves.

Tho' the most punctual Secrecy has been observed on my part I am not ignorant that Reports have been propagated and suspicions entertained by Congress and the States claiming jurisdiction over Vermont, as if some negotiation was carrying on for a Reunion of the State of Vermont with Great Britain. I am not without apprehensions that the Congress and the Emissaries of these States may by means of such reports and jealousies create such difficulties [and] dissensions in the State of Vermont as may render the good intentions of the leading Men of no effect. However sensible I am of the necessity under which General Allen was of sending Colonel Robinson's Letter to the Congress, yet I do not choose to have my Instructions to you exposed to the same Fate, but I hereby authorize you to pledge my word of honor for the performance of every Article which I have promised to the State of Vermont. You will likewise express clearly to Colonel Allen that as I find the people in the York State have conceived that a suspension of Arms was to take place between me and Vermont (which may lead them into mistakes fatal to some Individuals) I require that on his return he shall declare publicly the Contrary in justice to the Candour I pursue, and that no evil consequences which may arise from the above error may appear to lie at my door, and that as Flags may create jealousies and Embarrassments, I expect none will be sent for the future. But, if after or before the setting of the Assembly in June, Matters can be so far advanced as that the leading Men may come to a decision, Colonel Allen may agree upon some places, for example the Split Rock, where a confidential person may be sent with a Token agreed upon between you and him as a proof that Credit may be given to what he says. If the leading Men of the State of Vermont are as sincere, and mean as well as I do, no objection can be made to this proposal. I am, &c.

Sir,—I have had the Honor to lay before His Excellency General Haldimand your Letter of the 15th. Instant, communicating for his Information Hints and Inuendos thrown out by Colonel Allen respecting a further negotiation with the State of Vermont, of more consequence than the present, and his wish to keep a door open for Intercourse by means of a Cartel. Upon the subject of a Cartel I have already transmitted to the Commissioners his Excellency's determination, and I am now commanded to acquaint you that although he will not consent to the Establishment of a Cartel upon the Ground proposed, yet he wishes to encourage the hope you seem to entertain of that people returning to their Allegiance, either from a sense of their error, or a view to their Interest. His Excellency therefore wishes you to improve such overtures as may be made for that end by Mr. Allen, but at the same time guarding Carefully against the Art and duplicity those people possess, and avoiding delay, which seems to be their favorite object, but which from the present appearance of affairs cannot favor their interest. For if they terminate, as there is the greatest reason to expect they will, Vermont must be considered indiscriminately with the people of America, and their difficulties with the three contending States will still subsist while the other parts of America enjoy peace and tranquility.

QUEBEC, 21st May, 1781.

Sir,—Agreeably to your desire I have communicated to His Excellency General Haldimand the substance of your Conversation with Colonel Allen upon the subject of a Re-union of Vermont State with the Mother Country, and I am commanded to signify to you His Excellency's sentiments thereon.

With respect to the permanent Cartel wished for by Vermont, as proposed by them, the General has already determined, and his reasons for not complying therewith have been communicated to Colonel Allen. He is nevertheless desirous to accomplish the Re-union already proposed to the people of Vermont, but fears that delay will prove fatal to his wishes in their favour. The Terms for reconciliation which His Excellency has held out to them are undoubtedly sufficient to secure to them their Liberties and Properties, and he desires you would communicate to Colonel Allen his ardent wish that the people of Vermont lose no time in acceding to conditions so consonant to their well Being. There is from the last accounts from Europe great reason to think that a general negotiation for peace has commenced under the mediation of the Emperor. Sir Joseph York and Sir . . . Keith are the Plenipotentiaries on the part of Great Britain and are gone to Vienna on that Business. Whatever the Terms of peace may be, the people of Vermont must be left in the same unfavourable situation they were in before the present troubles, except that by a speedy determination to resist the Tyranny of Congress and to accept the Terms offered them, they secure to themselves a separate Government and Jurisdiction independent of the other States.

His Excellency has no wish to deceive, nor any view in proposing to reclaim these States but that of re-establishing the happy Government they once enjoyed, and by its influence redress the grievances imposed on them by their neighbouring States as fully expressed in his original Instructions to you. His Excellency therefore expects that the result of their deliberations in the Meeting to be held in June would be immediately be communicated to him with sincerity and candour.

In the mean time it is to be considered (and it will be publicly declared) that there is not any negotiation or Treaty subsisting between His Excellency General Haldimand and the State of Vermont.

Sir,—Colonel A——n says he wishes to give Major Ler^t a clear idea of the present situation of affairs (in Vermont.) As he means to act with Candour, it would be folly for him to pretend to say officially the exact time Commissioners will be sent, nor can he positively say whether they will come with full powers to re-unite with Britain, as the idea of Neutrality must first be adopted: he foresees that much difficulty will arise respecting the time they are to continue this internal neutrality, for as he wishes to be clearly understood, and to convince General Haldimand that he acts on equal principles of sincerity with him, he will again plainly express the impossibility of bringing over at once a prejudiced populace so fully prepossessed in favor of Congress. At present one half of the Assembly is not acquainted with the designs, a number of the Council yet remain ignorant, nor has it yet appeared safe to open the affair to them. This will be attempted next Session, but must be gently and cautiously managed, and how far it will succeed he is not able to determine: he will, however, engage, that General Haldimand shall hear from them by some means or other by about the middle of July, or sooner; he thinks the Commissioners will by that time be sent to exchange some Prisoners, (provided he has a certainty of their being exchanged,) and will have power finally to determine whether Vermont is to be admitted as a Province, or not. But that his Brother or himself may not be at a loss to convey Intelligence when necessary, he proposes the following Token by his Messenger, Viz^t Three Smoaks on the East side the Lake opposite the Shipping, and at the middle smoke a small white Flag hoisted on a staff. He would propose to have the Commandant on the Lake Instructed to receive such Messenger immediately on Board, and not interrogate him concerning his Business and send him to Canada, or forward his Letters, as the Messenger shall choose, and he would expect the Messenger would be permitted to return as soon as possible, as delays would have a tendency to create jealousy.

Sir,—I am desired by Mr. Allen to inform you that his not coming to any decision respecting an exchange will very much dishearten those who were the most forward for a British Government, and entirely dispirit those who were not so well confirmed in their opinions: he therefore sincerely wishes that the spirit of his last letter to Mr. Dundas may be agreed to, in such a manner, and in such words, that no doubt can raise in their Assembly of Vermont. He declares on the honor of a Gentleman, that he will represent in the clearest view possible, General Haldimand's Instructions to me, and likewise the candour which appears in the General's last Letter, in compliance to which and in justice to the General he promises to undeceive the neighbouring States respecting a standing Truce between Great Britain and Vermont. He is very sorry he cannot have a Copy of the General's Instructions to me, and as he cannot have that would be glad of a Copy of the General's last Letter to me.¹ He says nothing shall be wanting on his part to have Commissioners sent as soon as possible but he knows they cannot be fully furnished sooner than the time he mentioned and is not certain they can be so soon. He therefore hopes impossibilities will not be expected from him. (Signed,)

STATE OF VERMONT.

The opinion of the people in general of this state [New York] is that its [Vermont's] inhabitants are artful and cunning and full of thift [shift ?] and design. About fifteen days ago, Col. [Ira] Allen and a Maj. Fay was in Albany. I made it my particular business to be twice in their company, at which times I endeavored to find out their business; and on inquiring, I understood from Col. Allen that he came down to wait on Governor Clinton, to receive his answer to a petition which the people of Vermont had laid before the Assembly; that he had been twice at the Governor's lodgings, and that the Governor refused to see or to speak with him. Allen then said he might be damned if ever he could court his favor again. Since that time they have petitioned the eastern ² Ethan Allen Papers, p. 349 a. Dr. GEORGE SMITH [or Smyth] of Albany, N. Y., was a Tory and one of the commissioners appointed by Gen. Haldimand to treat with Vermont, though he was not present at Allen's interview, May 8-25 1781. The extracts from Smith's journal and another paper—both supposed to be intended for Gen. Haldimand—were intercepted and sent to Gen. Washington by Gen. Schuyler, May 24 1781.—See Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, p. xxviii. [Fragment.] I do now, in behalf of those distressed captives, (who are principally citizens,) request your excellency to grant me a sufficient number of prisoners of equal rank to redeem those I have above mentioned as soon as I shall furnish a list particularly, which shall be immediately done, when I learn that this shall meet your excellency's approbation, which I flatter myself will, when I consider that I have delivered over to the United States more than four times the number which I have occasion for by this request.

Sent by Capt. Brownson.⁴

June 18, the Assembly of Vermont resolved that an inquiry be made on the 19th into the grounds of the report of a treaty with Canada. The journal of the next day notes the fact of a session in committee of the whole, but does not give the proceedings therein. IRA ALLEN's account is as follows :

The Governor and Council attended in the Assembly, and resolved both Houses into a Committee of the Whole, when the Governor proceeded to state the facts: that in consequence of application from several persons, praying that some measures might be taken to procure the exchange of their friends, who were prisoners in Canada, in the recess of the Legislature, he had, with the advice of the Council, appointed and authorized Colonel Ira Allen to go to Isle-aux-Noix to settle a cartel for the exchange of prisoners, in behalf of the State. That Colonel Allen went to the Isle-aux-Noix, where he met the British Commissioners, and with difficulty had completed the business, in behalf of Vermont, though no such exchange had taken place with the United States, or any other State in the northern department; that if the grand Committee wished for further particulars, respecting the mission and conduct of Colonel Allen, he was then present and could best inform, to whom he referred them.

The Committee then requested Colonel Allen to inform them respecting his commission, and what effects it had produced. Colonel Allen rose, and observed to the Committee, that he had received an appointment and commission from the Governor and Council, to go and settle a cartel with the British, in Canada, for an exchange of prisoners; that he had very happily succeeded in his mission, and made his report to the Governor and Council; but not expecting to be called on by the Committee, had left the commission and all the papers at home; nevertheless, was ready to give a verbal statement of the whole transactions, or, if more agreeable to the Committee, he would, by leave of the Governor and Council, go home, and produce the writings for the inspection of the Committee next day. The Committee desired Colonel Allen would lay the papers before them the next day.

Accordingly he attended the Committee with the papers, and made a short verbal statement, that the papers might be the better understood; they were read, and on the whole it appeared, that the British had shewn great generosity in the business. Colonel Allen then rose and stated sundry things, which occurred while he was in Canada, and mentioned that he had discovered among the British officers a fervent wish for peace; and that the English Government was as tired of the war, as the United States; then concluded with a desire, that if any member of the Committee or auditor in the gallery, wished to ask any further questions respecting the business, he was ready to answer them.

All seemed satisfied that nothing had been done inconsistent to the interest of the States; and those who were in the interest of the United States paid their compliments to Colonel Allen, for his open and candid conduct. In the evening he had a conference with the Canadian spectators on the business of the day, and they appeared to be as well satisfied as those from the neighboring States and Vermont. Is it not curious to see opposite parties perfectly satisfied with one statement, and each believing what they wish to believe, and thereby deceiving themselves.¹

STATE OF VERMONT, June, 1781.

Whereas Col. Ira Allen has been with a flag to [the Province of] Quebec for the purpose of settling a cartel for exchange of prisoners, and has used his best policy by feigning or endeavoring to make them believe that the state of Vermont had a desire to negotiate a treaty of peace with Great Britain—thereby to prevent the immediate invasion or incursion upon the frontiers of this state, as appears by the letter he sent to Gen. Haldimand dated May 8, 1781,³ enclosing a copy of Col. Beverly Robinson's letters to Gen. Ethan Allen and Gen. Allen's letter to Congress, and the resolutions of the Assembly of Vermont approving the same, as also the circular letter to the several states delivered to Dundas, according to his verbal report made to us this day:—We are of the opinion that the critical circumstances this state is in, being out of the union with the United States and thereby unable to make that vigorous defense we could wish for—think it to be a necessary political manœuver to save the frontiers of this state.

At the time of Col. Allen's report to the General Assembly of the negotiation for an exchange of prisoners, two or more British agents or spies were at Bennington seeking information. Their reports follow.

Report of a British Agent.

(COPY.) [June 1781.] Mr. * * * * Reports that he broke out of Northampton Jail the 23rd. of last December, [1780.] and got into New York the 10th. of January, and on the 5th. of February was sent to General Allen with Letters from Colonel Robinson, and arrived in Arlington the 23rd. of February: returned again to York the 18th. of March without any order from Allen. After his arrival Mr. . . . came in with a Letter from Allen to General Clinton with proposals (as was reported) to join Britain, provided they could have their Eastern and Western New Frontiers confirmed as part of Vermont. On the 28th. of May Mr. . . . was sent out with another Letter from Colonel Robinson to Allen, which he has left with a trusty man to deliver to him. Was in Bennington when Colonel [Ira] Allen returned from Canada, and employed Mr. . . . to find out what report [Ira] Allen made, and the resolution of the Council in consequence of his report, but from many Hints that he gathers from the leading Men, he suspects that General Allen is gone to solicit Forces from Connecticut and Massachusetts to ensnare General Haldimand's Troops, if possible. Colonel Robinson and Colonel Stafford [Safford] both Declared to Dr. Fay that they did not approve of the Correspondence between Vermont and Canada, and they would sacrifice themselves and all the Forces they could raise rather than come to any settlement separate from the other States. Captain Lyon (one of the Council) told . . . that Governor Chittenden would settle with Britain if the present leading Men in Vermont were allowed to continue such under Britain, their old and new Grants confirmed—the East and West new Territories confirmed—all their Laws and Acts confirmed, and nothing revoked; that the Tories' Farms must (he supposed) be given up to them; but Vermont would not make good any other damage to them. The Governor said those were the only Terms Vermont would agree to, and if General Haldimand would not agree to them, it was the Business of Vermont to spin out this Summer in Truces, and in the mean time fill their Magazines as fast as possible with arms, ammunition and provision, by which, with the continual increase of the Inhabitants, he hoped to be able next Summer to defend Vermont against invasion from Canada. Mr. . . . says a Flag from Vermont will set off about the 17th. of July for Canada.

Report of the Party sent by the [British] Commissioners to learn the report of the Rebel Flag.

[June 1781.] A. and B. say that as soon as Colonel Allen returned, a select Body of the Council was convened at Arlington, consisting of twelve Men; they sat 3 days, at the expiration of which General Allen was dispatched to Connecticut and Massachusetts. Colonel Allen's report to the Council was kept so profound a secret that no man of the King's friends nor of the Rebels of high or low degree could come to the knowledge of a syllable of it from the Council, except a few words dropped from Captain Lyon to the following purport, viz: Vermont would never make up the Tories' losses, and if they could not settle with General Haldimand pretty much on their own Terms, they would baffle him with Flags and prolong the time till they were better able to oppose him. The people in general on the West side the Mountain are very jealous of the Allens, Fays, and Chittendens: the Rebels (who are the bulk of the people) suspect they are about to sell them, and these seem determined to sacrifice everything rather than submit to any terms with Great Britain, short of independence, and the Tory party suspect that the above leading Gentlemen are endeavouring to lead the British Troops into a Snare, and then betray them to the Rebel Troops. It is reported in that Country that another Flag will be sent from Vermont about the middle of July.

Indorsed "Copy (N^o. 15.) Report of a Party sent by the Commissioners to learn the reports of the Rebel Flag."

The next paper in chronological order was the letter of President Weare to the New Hampshire delegates in Congress, June 20 1781, for which see ante, p. 309.

June 29 1781, after Ira Allen's report had been made to the General Assembly of Vermont, the Governor and Council resolved to issue warrants to the several sheriffs to collect the British prisoners who were in Vermont and convey them to headquarters at Castleton by the 10th of July. Maj. Joseph Fay was at the same time appointed commissary-general of prisoners.—See ante, p. 111.

Memorandum of letter of Lord George Germaine to Gen. Haldimand.

N^o. 87. 7th. July [1781.] The Minister says,—If we succeed at the Southward, I shall not be afraid of a failure in our Negotiation with the people of Vermont, for Washington must in that case, make still further Detachments from his army on the Hudson's River, if not carry away the greatest part of it: ¹ and as General Haldimand will have a Body of Troops to throw in among them, their apprehension of the resentment of the Congress must be removed, and they will see it to be their wisest and safest course to declare for His Majesty, for I confess that I rely more upon their finding it to be for their Interest than upon their loyalty, for their taking part with us.

Gen. George Washington to Gen. James Clinton.—[Extract.]

July 9 1781. I can give no countenance to any cartel which may have been settled between the people of Vermont and the Governor of Canada, and so I lately informed Mr. Chittenden ² by an officer sent down by him to me. ³ I wish there may not be other business transacted under the cover of a flag from Vermont to Canada besides the exchange of prisoners. ⁴

Next followed the commission, issued by Gov. Chittenden July 10 1781, to the Vermont delegates to Congress, for which see ante, p. 316, note 1.

¹On the 25th of June 1781, Gen. Washington did notify Gen. James Clinton that the continental troops would be withdrawn from the north as soon as a suitable number of militia should be sent to relieve them. On the same day he appointed Gen. John Stark to command in the northern department.—See Life and Writings of Washington, Vol. VIII, p. 82.

²As Vermont was not recognized as a State by Congress, Washington never addressed Chittenden by his title as Governor.

STATE OF VERMONT, Sunderland, }
July 10th. 1781. }

Sir,—This State has become the topic of discourse through the United States. Various are the conjectures and prognostications of the populace abroad. I have authentic accounts from Congress, that they spent several days last Spring on the question of Vermont; that it was the sense of Congress (after lengthy debates) to make no determination respecting it this Campaign, or to the end of the War. The Legislature of this State convened at Bennington in June last. By Emissaries from the other States, or otherwise, the very great Whigs in this State were much alarmed on account of Neutrality, &c. When it was found, on a political Scrutiny, that there were a majority of that Denomination, the Legislature, who together with the influence of some others that attended, crowded for an Enquiry to know from whence the reports of Neutrality &c. originated, requesting that all papers that had passed to and from the province of Quebec, might be laid before the House, when the Governor, Council and Assembly resolved themselves into a Committee of the whole for the aforesaid Enquiry, and to determine on the expediency of sending Agents to Congress. When I was called on for information, I affected a willingness to give them every information in my power, observing, that on my arrival from the Isle au Noix, I exhibited my Papers, &c. to the Governor and those of the Council that were then present, who appeared well satisfied with my proceedings: that not knowing that the Assembly would wish to see the papers, I had left them at home; that I was willing to give them a verbal account, or go and fetch the papers, as they might chuse. When the Committee adjourned, I went and fetched the papers, when the Letters that had passed between General Haldimand and Chittenden, General Allen & Major Carlton, Major Dundas and myself were read and I made a Speech to the audience in such a manner as gave satisfaction to the Spies from the Neighboring States and the great Whigs in this State that there was no Truce or Neutrality intended by this State, yet that the British Governor was willing to grant Vermont Charter privileges for a Colony, if they would accept them: then it was agreed that three Agents should be appointed to attend on Congress with full power to make and receive proposals for Articles of Union between the United States and Vermont, and to take Seats in Congress; when Jonas Fay, Ira Allen and Beza. Woodward Esq^{rs}. were elected—(it is to be observed that they are not all on one footing.) It is expected that said Agents will make offers to Congress that will not be accepted, by which means those in favor of Government will be able to evince to the people of this state that Congress means nothing more than to keep this State in suspense, to the End of the War, and then divide the Territory amongst the Claiming States (which is doubtless the intention of many:) this, together with such other matters as may be safely intrusted, will be in agitation before the next Election. These matters are ripening as fast as the nature of the Case will permit. It is exceedingly difficult and somewhat dangerous attempting to change the opinion of large and popular Bodies, nor can any possible advantage arise by any of those in power to publish their sentiments in that respect until the proper Crisis shall arrive for this is a popular Government and her Officers annually elected by the suffrages of the people; therefore carrying these matters in some measure under the Rose until the next Election, when in all human probability a large majority of the then Officers of the Government will be well disposed, and then by the advantage of another denial from Congress and having the reins of Government in their hands for one year, they will make a revolution so long wished for by many.

A very considerable part of the Citizens of this State are Emigrants from Connecticut, and would choose Charter privileges similar to that Government and would expect to remain a reasonable time in a State of Neutrality. However, I hope that there will be no difficulty on these accounts. General Allen has resigned and taken to his old studies, philosophy. General Bellows declined serving. Colonels Stafford¹ and Fletcher are elected in their steads. General Enos commands this States Troops in service. These three Generals are acquainted with my proceedings at the Isle aux Noix, &c. The result of whatever may take place at Congress, shall transmit to you. The Agents are to set out on the first of August and will probably return the fore part of September. Request that the signal agreed on by Captain and myself be continued, as that may be the best way of Conveyance.

I am with Sentiments of Esteem, &c.

Whereas this state is not in union with the United States, although often requested, etc. This the British power are acquainted with and are endeavoring to take advantage of these disputes thereby to court a connexion with this state on the principle of establishing it a British province. From various accounts we are well assured that the British have a force in Canada larger than this state can at present raise and support in the field, and this state have no assurance of any assistance from any or either of the United States however hard the British forces may crowd on this state from the province of Quebec by the advantage of the waters of lake Champlain, etc. Although several expresses have been sent by the governor of this state to several of the respective governors of the United States with the most urgent requests to know whether any assistance would be afforded in such case, yet no official answer has been made to either of them.

Wherefore we the subscribers do fully approbate Col. Ira Allen sending a letter dated Sunderland, July 10, 1781, and directed to Gen. Haldimand, and another letter to Capt. Justice Sherwood, purporting an intention of this state's becoming a British province, etc. This we consider a political proceeding to prevent the British forces from invading this state, and being a necessary step to preserve this state from ruin, when we have too much reason to apprehend that this has been the wishes of some of our assuming neighbors, in the mean time to strengthen the state against any insult until this state receives better treatment from the United States or obtain a seat in Congress.

Sir,—* * * All the Intelligence we had received of the designs of the Enemy leave Canada out of their plan, and, therefore, as you will have nothing to apprehend for the safety of the Province, I trust you will appear in considerable Force upon the Frontier, which will be the surest means to give efficacy to the Negotiations with the Vermont people. Nothing indeed should be omitted to attach them to his Majesty; and I can assure you, that no expense that shall be found necessary for that purpose will be grudged. I am sorry that you should have cause to doubt their sincerity, but I flatter myself that when they see a Body of Troops sufficient to protect them near at hand, they will readily yield to the force of the weighty arguments you will have it in your power to urge. The private Accounts which I have seen give me reason to understand that the New England Provinces had relinquished their Claims to the whole of Vermont, and that New York had allowed it to extend to the old Boundary Line of Connecticut, which was 20 miles from the Connecticut River, and that upon this ground Congress were willing to acknowledge Vermont so described a separate State.

The Leaders in Vermont had however enlarged their Demands upon this acquiescence in order, as these accounts insinuate, to prevent an accommodation with the Congress, and insisted that their Western Boundary should extend to the Hudson's River, and as low down as the mouth of the Mohawk, which has provoked New York, and the Treaty is broke off accordingly. If this Information be well founded, it affords good reason to believe the Leaders really mean to Close with you at a proper time, and I should make no difficulty of recommending to His Majesty the extending of the boundary to the Hudson's River, as it perfectly corresponds with my views of cutting off the Communication

2nd. August, '81. We have very cautiously perused Allen's Letter and compared it with the general Intelligence and with his conduct at the Isle au Noix. We find ourselves perplexed, and much at a loss what to think of him. If he is sincere, and his declaration to the General be truth, he is the only proper person to be sent to Congress to make proposals, which, if sincere, he will not fail to do in Terms he is sure will meet with such a denial as will alienate the minds of the Vermont Populace from that Rebellious Assembly, and incline them to place confidence in their Leaders, and look to General Haldimand for protection. On the other hand, the apparent studied stile of Allen's letter does not appear to us like the undisguised sentiments of an honest heart.

9th. We have been busily employed with Major Fay. We are sorry to find him as unprepared as Colonel Allen was, to Close with the proffered Terms. He has no written Instructions on this subject owing (he says) to their not being able in the last Assembly to procure a Majority although they came within two or three of it, and he is confident they will have a great majority in the next Assembly. He appears candid, sincere and open, and declares the Governor, Council, and Leading Men are bringing about the revolution as fast as time and circumstances will permit. That nothing has been omitted that could be done with safety, by the Governor, Council, and well wishers to Government. Those have entered into a written combination which they cause every one to sign that is let into the secret. This Combination, with the doings of the last Assembly, the Agents' Instructions to Congress, and any other papers, or doings, respecting this affair, which His Excellency desires to see, Major Fay engages to forward by the first safe opportunity. In short, the Major expresses the greatest anxiety to remove every reason for suspicion. He laments that he could not be authorized by the voice of the people to close with the General's terms at this time. He avers that Colonel Allen's Letter to His Excellency contains the true sentiments of the Governor and Council.

10th. August. We have not spared pains, the short time M^r. Fay has been with us to endeavour to find him out. He professes so much honesty, accompanied with so many gestures of sincerity, that he seems to overact his part. He certainly is perfectly honest, or a perfect Jesuit: we have too much reason to fear and believe the latter: however, it appears plain that he wishes to continue the negotiation till next November, for what reason is uncertain: he declares solemnly that they will be then able to join us, &c. Allen declared the same would happen in July: to us it appears they wish to have two strings to their Bow, that they may choose the strongest, which they cannot determine till Mr. Washington's success in the present Campaign shall be known. We do not think Vermont expects by procrastinating to strengthen herself as a State, but we believe sincerely they design to secure to themselves this Campaign from invasion of King or Congress, by spinning out the Summer and Autumn in Truces, Cartels and Negotiations, by the expiration of which they expect to hear the result of the negotiation at Vienna, and other matters, by which they may be enabled to judge of the strongest side, the only motive (we believe) by which they are influenced.

Major Fay's private Letter to the General is perfectly of a piece with his conversation. Should His Excellency have a better opinion of Vermont from Fay's Letters than we have from his conversation, we shall be happy in having made a mistake on the right side, for our fears at present are that we shall be too much inclined, by our anxious wishes for Vermont, to believe what is said in favor of her reformation.

15th. August. If the enclosed report is true, it plainly shows that notwithstanding the present negotiation and pretended sincerity of the Vermonters, they are as ready as they ever were to assist their rebel neighbors: we have hinted this to Major Fay, but he positively declares it is an untruth, and that Vermont never will assist New York on any pretence whatever. We have read to him that part of your Letter mentioning His Excellency's determination steadily to pursue the candid system avowed to Colonel Allen and promised by him to be adopted by the Leading Men in Vermont, to which he observed it was expected General Haldimand would be somewhat impatient, as he was not acquainted with the difficulties and necessary delays attending large and popular Bodies, situated as they are, in bringing about a revolution; but he hoped the next October Assembly would clear all doubts.

15th. C^t B's. report will be communicated to you: it differs essentially from that of ———. We have acquainted Major Fay with as much of the intelligence as we could with propriety, and his observations serve more to evince his candor and sincerity than otherwise. He wishes much that we should meet him at East Bay in about ten days after his return, where he engages to give us a correct account of the reception his report shall meet with, and to give us any other accounts or papers that may be thought necessary to reflect light on the negotiation. We have of late entertained hopes of success, but that shrewd old Gentleman Mr. ———, giving his opinion as he has, staggers us Much—still we have Charity for the Leading Men, but have too much reason to fear their influence is not sufficient to bring about the rebel populace. In this our fears are strengthened when we consider that the majority of those Leaders were men of low character and no consequence in the Country until they made themselves popular in the present Rebellion by actions, at which a Man of honor and integrity would revolt. Upon the whole it appears to us that interest, not loyalty, induces the Leading Men to wish a Union with Canada; that about one fifth part of the populace wish it from the same motive; near another fifth from principles of Loyalty; and that the remainder are mad rebels, under very little, if any, subjection to their nominal Leaders, and so accustomed to domineer over those who from any motive whatever wish favorably to the King's Government that the latter dare not make known their wishes in public.

QUEBEC, August 2nd. 1781.

Sir,—The difficulty and uncertainty of communicating with your Excellency I have always much regretted. It is peculiarly distressing at a time when there is every reason to believe some serious attempt against New York or this Province is in agitation, which early intelligence might avert. Uncertain as the present conveyance is, I eagerly embrace it to give this dispatch a chance of reaching your Excellency. It goes by a very small vessel, whose insignificancy and fast sailing are my only dependence. The most which can happen is the disappointment I shall feel should you not receive it: for it never can fall into the Enemy's hands, as I shall commit it to the care of an intelligent Man in whose approved fidelity I have unbounded confidence. He will keep it always about him, and if necessary sink it. I am particularly anxious that your Excellency should receive this Letter as it will fully communicate to you my whole transactions with Vermont to the present date, which never could have been done by cypher, tho' I gave you a general idea by that means, dated the 6th of June, a Duplicate of which I [have] here enclosed, and I have now the honor of transmitting to your Excellency the proceedings with the Flag therein mentioned from N^o. 1 to 17, a reference to which will be more satisfactory than enlarging upon the subject in this letter.

I have perused with much attention your Excellency's Letter upon it of the 8th of May,¹ and I am aware of the danger you suggest in not yielding to the delays they require, but from the best information I can procure concurring with suspicions of which I cannot divest myself, the alternative is infinitely more to be apprehended. There is no doubt they are industriously and with success forming Magazines and raising Men. These they avow are for the purpose of defending themselves against whatever power shall invade them. They have likewise acknowledged a preference for Congress provided they are admitted in alliance as a 14th. State. The necessity of a Compliance with this demand is obvious and must take place as soon as Vermont is in strength to assert it, for without her assistance or assent nothing can be carried on against this province by that route, and the obstacle will equally affect us in acting against the Colonies. If this contest should evidently point to a favorable termination for Great Britain, Vermont will become loyal, and offer assistance we shall not stand in need of, but if unhappily the contrary, she will declare for Congress, being actuated as well by interest as a heartfelt attachment to their cause. In six Months she will be a respectable Ally to either side. These considerations induced me to press that people to come to a speedy determination, and it appeared to have the desired effect with Ira Allen when here. An intelligent person was sent to wait his return that I might be informed of the report he made: that knowledge could not be obtained, but the opinion of the friends to Government in consequence of it I transmit to your Excellency, marked A. This and similar reports give strength to my suspicions. The Flag promised by the 20th. July is just arrived and by it a letter from Ira Allen marked B.² It is fraught with much sincerity, or much duplicity, the latter I fear is the real sense of it, which I am the more inclined to think from his not coming with the Flag. Bad as he may be, he could not stand the test of the discovery this interview must lead to, but I shall detain my Letter until arrival of the post to inform your Excellency what Major Fay, who conducts the Flag, has to propose.

¹The letter here referred to as Clinton's is Beverly Robinson's, ante, p. 417. This confirms the supposition that Robinson wrote for Sir Henry Clinton.

From your Excellency not having received any Despatch by Ensign Drummond, and an Account lately received here that pieces of a Wreck, a Light Infantry Cap and Uniform, and other matters with which the Vessel he sailed in was loaded, being found upon the Magdalen Islands, I fear that Gentleman unfortunately perished, and Ensign Prentice of the 84th. sailed at the same time. By him I sent Duplicates. We hear that he was cast away, and it is probable my Despatch lost. I therefore send you a Triplicate of one of my Letters—the rest related to the situation of Affairs at that time, now altered, and the Letters of no consequence.

Various Scouts have brought a report from the Colonies that a part of the French Army on their way from Rhode Island with some Continental troops were completely routed by your Excellency on White Plains. I sincerely hope it may prove authentic, as it will probably frustrate the design against New York currently reported here.

In regard to Affairs in this Province, the prospect of a want of provisions is an alloy to every pleasure I should derive from my exertions in defence of the Provinces, or in projecting measures to act offensively, should the exigencies of the service demand a diversion in Your favor, or any other movement in force. I am now living upon a cargo which fortunately arrived from Cork to a Merchant here about a fortnight ago—this is but a temporary relief—the Season for Westerly winds is set in, and we have not heard a word of our expected Fleets. There are five or six stout Privateers cruising in the Gulph [of St. Lawrence,] and there is too much reason to fear all our Victuallers should they get so far safe cannot escape their vigilance. There is no great Quantity of last year's Grain remaining in the Country, (that sold at an extravagant price) and the present Crop considerably injured by Caterpillars. The Hay so much so that the Inhabitants are disposing of and killing their Cattle. This is a momentary advantage but its bad consequences will be severely felt in the Spring.

I have the Honor to be, &c., &c.,

Sir Henry Clinton to Gen. Haldimand.

NEW YORK, August 2nd. 1781.

Sir,—Having wrote to your Excellency on the 23rd. Ultimo, by General Reidesel, I have little now to add, but to acquaint you that he sailed from hence a few days since for Canada with a considerable number of Officers and Men belonging to the Army under your Command.

General Knyphausen being anxious to have that part of his regiment which was sent to Canada returned here, I mentioned in my Letter by General Reidesel, that if your Excellency would send them back, I would replace them by an equal number as early as possible.

The French and Rebels only wait for a Reinforcement from the West Indies to make an Attack upon this post, which I think they certainly will attempt upon its arrival and it is hourly expected. I need not therefore say of how much importance a Diversion upon the Frontiers of this Province and the speedy decision of Vermont in our favor, would be.

The Enemy's Force opposed to me in this quarter is about 4000 French and 7000 Rebels. The latter do not increase very fast, tho' it is a favorite object, what they now meditate.

Next in order were the Memorial of the Delegates of New York to Congress of Aug. 3 1781, and the resolutions of Congress of Aug. 7 and 8, for which see ante, pp. 312-316.

ON BOARD THE ROYAL GEORGE,
LAKE CHAMPLAIN, 9th. Augst: 1781.

Sir,—Having done myself the honor to write you on the subject of an Exchange of Prisoners, I beg leave to address your Excellency on another subject more interesting and important for the mutual happiness and well-being of both parties, could the happy event be soon brought about. I have been favored with the perusal of sundry letters on said subject from you to Captain A. and B.¹ as also conversing very freely with them. It gives me pain to find any apprehensions in your Excellency's Breast that the Gentlemen of Vermont, who are all acquainted with your good intentions, are wanting in sincerity, and am at the same time sorry to mention the jealousies which arise from the distance you have been pleased to keep the proposals made to them through your Commissioners at different times, from which they are ready to conclude the design is no other than to involve Vermont in a War with the other States, and then they would become an easy prey.

I am happy to find by the Letters shewn me by your Commissioners that your good intentions towards the people of Vermont are honorable and upright. I am convinced for myself, and would sincerely wish proper measures to be taken to remove every jealousy which may subsist on both sides, which I am confident your proposal, and assurance of your having competent authority from the Court of Britain therefor, would effect, on the part of Vermont. I shall, however, acquiesce in your determination on that head.

Colonel Allen's Letter to you of the 10th ultimo expresses nearly everything I can conceive interesting in the present negotiation; a repetition of which would be [un]necessary. I can only assure your Excellency that his Letter expressed the sense of the Governor and Council, as I was present when it was read, and by them, and General Allen, approved. As Colonel Allen mentioned the three General Officers being made acquainted with his proceedings, I need only mention that a number of other principal Gentlemen are entrusted, whose influence will be very serviceable in bringing about the change of Government hoped for in October next, and for the purpose of being assured of each others Fidelity, on being made acquainted with Colonel Allen's proceedings, freely subscribed their Names to a paper declaring their approbation, which, together with any proceedings which concerns this subject, will be communicated at any time to you, or such as you shall substitute for the purpose, if the present proceedings meet your Excellency's approbation, which I hope to be honored with in your answer to this.

I wish it was in my power to remove every suspicion you may have against the good Intentions of the people of Vermont, but I can only assure you of my own, and that I have not the least doubt you may rest equally assured of the sincerity of such of the others as are made acquainted.

I am not unapprised of your Excellency's anxiety to close the present negotiation, nor of your being much disappointed at my not being fully authorized for that purpose. I must entertain that good opinion of you, that you will not come into any hasty or unreasonable determinations.

I refer you to Colonel Allen's Letter aforesaid for the reasons why I was not fully authorized: any Instructions short of competent authority could only prove a deception, and, consequently, fatal. Captain A. and B. will be more particular to you in their Letter.

I am, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

Gen. Haldimand to his Commissioners, for Major Fay.

(PRIVATE. COPY.)

QUEBEC, 16th. August 1781.

Sir,—You will please to acquaint Major Fay that I am favored with his Letter (private) of the 9th. Instant, and that I cannot help feeling concern and disappointment that he is not vested with powers to be more decisive upon the subject of it, the former arising from a motive of humanity and a desire as well to recall to the Mother Country her natural right as to restore happiness to a Brave people, whose distresses I have really felt for: the latter from an expectation founded upon the assurances of Colonel Allen that the present Flag should bring sufficient authority finally to negotiate and settle a re-union of Vermont with the Mother Country. I have been so little accustomed to deceit or intrigue that it is painful to me to suspect, yet from the breaches of Faith which have been exhibited by the opponents of Government in this Province (both in public and private instances,) from the delays and obstacles in the present affair thrown in the way of my endeavours for reconciliation, from unreasonable expectations and demands upon the subject of the exchange of prisoners, from the diffidence discovered by the unheard of practice of sending strong Guards or rather detachments with Flags of Truce, but above all from the acknowledged construction of my views that they are to involve in war with the other States a people whose interest I have with every sentiment of Candour manifested my inclinations to promote, I confess I am taught to entertain doubts which it will give me pleasure to find have been ill-founded but which the nature of my situation cannot fail to justify. The distance complained of in this transaction proceeded, you must remember, from the express desire of the parties on the side of Vermont, and mutually agreed to by my agents when the affair was first agitated, that the strictest secrecy should be punctually observed. Under these circumstances I could not think of risking my sentiments in writing amongst a people who whether from necessity or inclination had given up similar Letters to Congress. It would have been infinitely more suitable to my ideas to have promulgated my wishes by proclamation, which I should still do, could I think it would reach the Ears of the people in its real sense, but every attempt of that kind has been so industriously counteracted from the commencement of the unhappy conflict, that in the present situation of affairs it would be in vain. Much pains were taken with Colonel Allen to make clear to him my sentiments and determination. He took his leave seemingly impressed with a conviction of my candour and friendly offers, and promised a similar reception of them from Governor Chittenden, General Allen and other leading Men in Vermont, to whom they have of course been fully represented by him: yet nothing has been done; the same system of procrastination prevails, and the affair stands upon the departure of Mr. Fay, just where it did last May. The papers alluded to in Mr. Fay's Letter could surely have been entrusted in his hands for the perusal of my Agents in this affair, and it would have been no more than has been done from the beginning on my part; to leave these behind was to come without his errand.

It is with much reluctance that I should relinquish the pleasure of being the instrument of recalling to allegiance the people of Vermont, and restoring to them peace and happiness; yet I foresee that my Duty will require it of me. I have, with much difficulty and management, avoided everything but the appearance of hostilities. While their Country might have been ravaged by continual parties, it was still my wish to forbear upon the faith of Colonel Allen's and Mr. Fay's professions, but it is not in my power to say more. Were that people but half as desirous of a Union with Great Britain as with the Congress, they would now be a happy people, independent of every power on Earth except the parent one. The Congress has repeatedly denied them the Territory they contend for, and by temporizing they may fatally become the dupe of both parties; for should America prevail, they cannot suppose Congress will, in prosperity, grant what they have so repeatedly refused when their alliance would have been serviceable. On the other hand, should America be disappointed, they cannot, with any degree of reason, expect from Great Britain Terms so cordially preferred, which they have so coldly rejected for a shadow of Independence, and it is too romantic to suppose that in the general conclusion of the Wars which now subsist, in which the powers of Europe are materially concerned, Vermont will ever be considered. In short, I do affirm, (and I hope I shall be believed,) that, if it is the intention of Vermont to trifle with me, she will find herself deceived. If, to accept the Terms proposed, so strongly disinterested on the part of Government, and so evidently generous and consonant with the interest of Vermont, I shall receive her with open arms, and I hope she will avoid too late and an ineffectual repentance.

The prisoners, or the greatest part of them, being now exchanged, I shall not expect a Flag of Truce from Vermont upon any other Business than to signify her acceptance of my offers, and at all times to consist of no more than five persons who will keep their Flag constantly flying.

Major Fay will be so good to acquaint Colonel Allen that I received the favor of his Letter.

I am, &c.

Third Interview between the Vermont and British Commissioners.²

Sept. 1-20, 1781. In the month of September, and previous to the 20th, the Vermont and British Commissioners met at Skenesboro' [Whitehall] to exchange prisoners, when the Vermont Commissioners delivered to the British the several Vermont, New Hampshire, and Congressional documents, bearing dates between the 20th of June and September, which are embraced in the Haldimand Papers. The plan of government for Vermont as a British colony was discussed, and it was agreed that it should be essentially the same as that established by the constitution, and similar to that of the colony of Connecticut, except that the king in council should appoint the Governor. The British Commissioners suggested the capture of Vermonters who were most violently opposed to the negotiation, which the Vermont Commissioners rejected, and the matter was reserved. The British Commissioners then insisted that Vermont should declare itself a British colony, and offered to put several leading Vermonters on the British military establishment, as Brigadier General, two Colonels, and other officers. The Vermont Commissioners "treated this proposition with candour and deliberation," and stated fully their objections, such as the locality of Vermont, adjoining thick settlements in the United States—the staunch whigs among the body of her people—their ties of consanguinity with people of the neighboring States, and the difficulty Great Britain would have in defending Vermont, especially in the winter. They urged that time, during an armistice, was necessary to prepare the people for such a change, and suggested that the inability of New Hampshire to furnish her full quota of troops to the continental service, and the possibility of annexing Berkshire county, Massachusetts, to Vermont, with the influence of these things on the people of the State, might be of more service to the King than any thing Vermont could accomplish. The British Commissioners took down in writing the heads of these objections, and "then suggested an instruction, which they said they were not at liberty to deviate from without putting an end to the armistice, which was, that His Excellency General Haldimand should, in pursuance of full powers vested in him by His Majesty in Council, issue a proclamation, offering to confirm Vermont as a colony under the crown."³

² Vermont Historical Society Collections, Vol. II, pp. 172-174.

³ IRA ALLEN in Vt. Hist. Soc. Coll., Vol. I, pp. 433-435. Gen. Haldimand declared to his commissioners, Aug. 16, that it would be most suitable to his ideas to promulgate his wishes to the people of Vermont by a proclamation.—Ante, p. 887.

In the next document, Sept. 20, the Vermont Commissioners "propose whether a proclamation from His Excellency General Haldimand" "might not answer a valuable purpose;" and the British Commissioners, in their report of this conference, wrote on the 30th of September that the Vermont Commissioners "requested (as the last resource) that Gen. Haldimand would issue a proclamation," &c. The apparent discrepancy between IRA ALLEN and the British Commissioners is removed on the supposition that the latter had suggested a proclamation at some preceding time in the conference, which the Vermont Commissioners then objected to, and that subsequently, "as the last resource," the latter renewed the proposition. Allen's account is consistent with this explanation. He went on to say that "the Agents of Vermont were unpleasantly situated," but they reinforced the previous objections [to the proclamation proposed by the British Commissioners,] by suggesting the lateness of the season, bad roads, want of fortifications and preparations for defense, and that one winter would have great effect in changing the minds of the people. Gen. Haldimand might change his opinion as to a proclamation on these considerations; "but should be not, they [the Vermont Commissioners] hoped the General, who brought forward such proclamations, would learn the temper and disposition of the people before he distributed them. On these principles they consented to have the proclamations brought up the lake, rather than break the armistice." To concede that Allen was mistaken in his statement that the first suggestion of a proclamation came from Haldimand's agents, is equivalent to a charge that these objections in the name of the Vermont Commissioners were merely Allen's afterthoughts. A strong motive would be needful to prompt such a misstatement; and Allen in England in 1798 certainly could have no such motive. His interest then was to represent Vermont and himself as having been well disposed towards the British Government, and he would hardly omit so important a fact as that the proposal to invite Vermont to become a British province, by proclamation, was made by Vermont, and by himself as her Agent, instead of by Gen. Haldimand.³

From Commissioners of Vermont, suggesting a Proclamation by Gen. Haldimand.

(COPY.) The Commissioners on the part of Vermont propose for Consideration, viz^t:

That in our opinions the first proceedings of the New Legislature of Vermont will be to form into a Committee of the whole to hear the report of their Agents from Congress, and then to take into Consideration the proposals from Congress, when we have every reason to expect them to be rejected, when the Legislature will proceed to business. As the Members are from all parts of the State, and many of them Strangers to each other, it will not be amiss for them to be a few days together before a public Litigation of a Change of Government, and in order to that we would propose whether a Proclamation for [from] His Excellency General Haldimand to be then exhibited to the Legislature might not answer a valuable purpose, as it would lay a Foundation for them to proceed upon. Such Proclamation to contain the Terms the Court of Great Britain have authorized His Excellency to give Vermont, which we could wish, as Citizens of Vermont are principally Emigrants from the New England Governments, that their privileges might be as near those they have been accustomed to as may be. That there should be no undue advantage taken by such Proclamation, we propose that it be lodged with the General Commissioners on the Lake: that as soon as the Legislature have rejected the Offers of Congress, that a confidential person be forwarded to said Commissioners with that information, when a Flag should be sent to Castleton with such Proclamation sealed and directed to the Legislature, when General Enos will forward them unopened, by Express to the Legislature.

QUEBEC, Sept^r 27, 1781.

Sir,—The Letter which accompanies this I had the honor to prepare for your Excellency the 2nd. Ultimo, but was disappointed in my expectation of conveying it to you. The present with its enclosures is in continuation of the former. These contain the fullest information in my power to communicate to your Excellency upon the interesting subject of Vermont affairs.¹ The very strong assurances of sincerity, made by Colonel Allen and Major Fay in behalf of the Governor and Council and the obvious difficulties they represent in the way of a sudden Revolution where the prejudice of a people is so violent, demand some credit and attention, yet there is something in their whole conduct so obscure and mysterious, and so very correspondent with opinions of approved Loyalists who live among them that sanguine as I am for the success of this Business, I cannot help entertaining very unfavorable suspicions of it. My Agents have at present an interview with Major Fay agreeably to his desire expressed in N^o. 21. I hope I shall be informed of the result before I am obliged to dispatch this Letter. In conformity to my own sentiments and the request of those Loyalists in whose judgment I have the most confidence, I have determined to shew a strong detachment upon the Frontier about the 1st. of October, when their Assembly is to meet. It will take post at Crown Point and remain there as long as the Season will permit. I have likewise directed that strong parties be sent from Niagara to appear at the same time upon the Mohawk River and Frontier of Pennsylvania. The former if found necessary will co-operate with parties from Crown Point. Circumstanced as I am, my offensive views from this province are confined alone to that object: if it should not produce the effect hoped for with the people of Vermont it cannot fail to alarm and distress the Enemy by ravaging the Frontiers, and diminishing their supplies. It will likewise be the means of drawing to the Royal Standard a number of Loyalists, who only wait, as they say, for an opportunity to escape from the oppression they labor under; and if your Excellency should have any operations in view which can be facilitated by this resolution, I shall feel an additional pleasure in having taken it. I have for that purpose dispatched a Messenger through the woods to communicate my intention to you.

The very high respect I have for the Judgment of General Robertson, the Interest he must have in the conduct of Vermont, as it may affect the province of which he is Governor, and my personal Esteem and regard for him, induce me to request your Excellency will communicate to him my transactions with that people, contained in my present Dispatches.² I have the honor to be, &c.

Sir,—By the arrival of Major General Reidesel I am honored with your Excellency's letter of the 23^d of last July.

For Vermont affairs I beg leave to refer your Excellency to my letter upon that subject which you will receive by this opportunity. [The remainder of this letter does not relate to the Vermont question.]

Report of British Commissioners to Capt. Mathews for Gen. Haldimand.

(COPY.)

QUEBEC, 30th. Sept. 1781.

Sir,—In behalf of B [Dr. Geo. Smith] and myself, [Capt. J. Sherwood,] I transmit to you (for His Excellency's Information) our proceedings with the Vermont Commissioners. Although the different papers marked from N^o to N^o contain the essential part of our Negotiation, I beg leave to trouble you with a few remarks of my own founded on the closest Observation and scrutiny that I was able to make on the words and actions of Messrs. Allen and Fay, while I was with them Viz: I am fully of the opinion that Messrs. Chittenden, Allen and Fay, with a number of the Leading Men of Vermont, are making every exertion in their power to endeavour to bring about a re-union with Government, and that at least one third part of the populace sincerely wished for such a change. But I find that Congress are much alarmed, and have lately at great expense employed a number of Emissaries in Vermont to counteract underhand whatever is doing for Government. The principal of those are General Bailey, Colonels Chas. Johnson, Moron, Brewster and Major Childs, on Connecticut River.¹

¹ Gen. JACOB BAYLEY of Newbury. In a letter to President Weare, Nov. 22 1780, (in Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, p. 81) he wrote:

I understand General Allen has made peace for Vermont till that time [Feb. 1781]; but as we don't own that State, we shall be their only butt. If the United States, and your in particular, do not take notice of such treasonable conduct, we had better let this cause drop. If you had the jurisdiction of the whole Grants, which I am sure you could if you only desire it, the country would be safe; but if you split at the [Connecticut] river, you keep all in confusion, and must still defend for your own safety and reap no benefit, neither by tax [upon the people of Vermont] nor by vacant [Vermont] lands which is very considerable. While the matter hangs in suspense, the enemy may take possession, (they claim it by the Quebec bill, as well as part of your State;) then where is your State? For my part I am determined to fight for New Hampshire and the United States as long as I am alive and have one copper in my hand: but if our exertions are not greater and more effectual, another year will end the dispute, [and] not in our favor.

In a letter to Gen. Washington on Vermont in 1781, Gen. B. said, "there are six or eight rascals there."—See Index to Stevens Papers, p. 15. Col. THOMAS JOHNSON of Newbury concurred with Gen. Bayley in opinion.—See his letter to Gen. Washington, May 30 1782, in Vt. Historical Magazine, Vol. II, p. 929. It is doubtful, however, whether Capt. Sherwood counted Col. Thomas Johnson in this list, as the Colonel was, at the date of Sherwood's report, a prisoner in Canada, and professedly cold in the

This Junto of which General Bailey is the soul are endeavouring to set the Populace against their present Leaders by insinuating to them that they are Tories, and intend to sell Vermont, &c. I believe that Congress intend to bring the populace of Vermont to a General Vote whether they will relinquish their present Claims or not, at which time they hope by the influence of Bailey's Party to turn out the present Leaders and at least have their own Creatures appointed, whom they will endeavour to support, by establishing a considerable Force somewhere on the Frontiers of Vermont next Spring. Mess^{rs}. Allen and Fay very sincerely acknowledge to me their Embarrassment and their fears that the populace could not be easily gained, and in a very sensible manner, pointed out the difficulties and dangers attending such an attempt while the Rebellious part of the populace, however few, had reason to expect so much more assistance from the Southward than the friends to Government could at present expect from the Northward: they observed, that, so long as these motives emboldened the former and depressed the latter, there would be but little hopes of Success: they, however, requested, (as the last resource,) that General Haldimand would issue a proclamation, pointing out, in a very particular manner the privileges he was authorized to grant Vermont, mentioning their extent of Territory, the Security of their Title of Lands, and Charter privileges as near to the former Charter of Connecticut as possible; the protection they might expect against their Southern Neighbours, and the advantage of a [free] Trade with Canada, &c. to conclude with placing to their view, in soft but spirited terms, the evil consequences and misery which must necessarily follow the refusal of such equitable and humane offers. This proclamation they hoped would be acceptable to so large a part of the people that by the ensuing Spring with the assistance and protection of General Haldimand, they could effectually establish a British Government, but if this failed, they know of no other method at present. I am Sir with much respect,

Your Most Obedient and Most Humble Servant,

Gen. Haldimand to Sir Henry Clinton.

QUEBEC, 1st. October, 1781.

Sir,—The Intelligence, for which I have some days detained the Frigate, is at length arrived. My Agents are returned from their conference with Ira Allen and Major Fay, and I here enclose a Continuation of their proceedings from N^o. 22 to 33. These and Conversations (I am forbid to commit to paper) which passed between those Gentlemen, have almost, if not entirely, removed my suspicions of Allen's party; but I see, with much concern, that the wished for Revolution very little depends upon their interest, at least as things are at present circumstanced. The prejudice of a great Majority of the populace, and the prevailing influence of Congress, are too powerful to admit of a change cause of his country.—See same magazine, p. 928. The editor knows of no Col. Charles Johnson. Col. "Moron" was doubtless Col. ISRAEL MOREY of Orford, N. H.; the other gentlemen named were Col. EBENEZER BREWSTER of Hanover, N. H., and Maj. JONATHAN CHILD of Lyme, N. H.

(within any given time from one to three years) by Negotiation. The Leading Men in our Interest advise, as a last resource, my issuing a Proclamation confirming to Vermont the late assumed Territory and other privileges, (contained in a Letter marked A.) thinking that from the late refusal of these by Congress, the people may be inclined to accept of Terms from Government.

This proclamation, they desire, may be followed by a Force equal to support the friends of Government who wait for an opportunity to declare themselves, and to awe those in opposition. In so critical a Juncture, I most sensibly feel the want of particular instructions, fearing, on one side, to let an opportunity escape which may never be recalled, and, on the other, taking upon myself a decision of such importance. A firm disinterested Zeal for the King's Service which has hitherto, will, in this instance, guide my conduct, and in acting for the best I shall hazard the consequences with the generosity of my Royal Master. How far encroachments by Vermont on New York and New Hampshire may affect future politicks, I know not. At present I conceive them indiscriminately engaged in rebellion, and if, by sacrificing a part of one to the interest of the other, a Re-union of the most valuable with the Mother Country, can be effected, I think it my duty to make the attempt. In this faith I shall issue the Proclamation, worded with as much caution as is consistent with my hopes of its success. It is to precede the detachment, and as the preparations to receive it cannot be made before the 12th or 14th Instant, to which time the Meeting of their Assembly is put off, the Troops will necessarily not move so soon as mentioned in my other Letters to your Excellency.

Reports brought by my agents from good authority, respecting the Enemy having laid aside their intention against New York, makes this delay less painful to me.

Your Excellency will not understand that any offensive measures against Vermont are to be undertaken by the Detachment from Crown Point. On the Contrary every appearance of Hostility will be carefully avoided, while parties will be sent to distress the other Frontiers. It is hoped this conduct will convince the people of Vermont that it is the intention of Government to protect them, and facilitate the endeavours of the Leading Men in our favor to gain the populace in the course of the Winter to make preparations for a more effectual Essay in the Spring, which, if mutually carried on, I should hope might prove successful. I have the Honor to be, &c.

QUEBEC, 2nd. October 1781.

Sir—The Transaction, of which the particulars are here enclosed, was undertaken and is carrying on upon a solemn and mutual promise of Secrecy, for the performance of which as well on my own part as in behalf of the Agents I employ, I have pledged my honour.

The Service we are mutually interested for requires I should impart this matter to your Excellency, and I do it in perfect Confidence that you will not entrust it to the knowledge of any other person, except General Robertson, to whom I have in another Letter signified my wishes it should be Communicated. I have the Honor to be, &c.

QUEBEC, October 3^d 1781.

Sir,—I have the honor to enclose to Your Excellency a Sketch of the Proclamation mentioned to you in a Letter of this date.¹ I persuade myself Your Excellency will have that indulgence for me in regard to it which the necessity of the measure will dictate, and that you will do me the justice to believe no other motive could have induced me in the smallest degree to trespass upon the limits of your Command, a necessity to which my local situation has reduced me.

With respect to the thing itself, many happy, no evil (that I can foresee) Consequences, can result from it. Should it have the desired effect, I need not point the advantages. If it fails, the Boundaries of the Provinces remain as before, and the Mysteries of Vermont will be seen through. I have the Honor to be, &c.,

His Excellency Sir Henry Clinton.

Form of Proclamation proposed by Gen. Haldimand..

FREDERICK HALDIMAND, &C. &C.

Whereas, his Majesty, persevering in his humane endeavours to prevent the Calamities of War, Hath been Graciously pleased to grant unto me, in general Terms, permission to treat with, and to propose to His Subjects in the District of Country called Vermont such Terms for accommodation as might appear to me best calculated to recall them to their Allegiance, and to rescue them from the oppression of their interested deluders, by re-uniting them upon a respectable and permanent footing, with the Mother Country—Happy in the prospect of being Instrumental to so desirable an event, I embrace this mode, as the most public, of declaring to the people of Vermont, that upon their cordially and effectually re-uniting themselves, as a Government under the Crown of Great Britain, they shall be considered by the same a separate province, independent of, and unconnected with every Government in America, and will be entitled to and shall enjoy every prerogative and immunity promised to the other provinces in the Proclamation of the King's Commissioners, comprehending Charter rights, as formerly enjoyed by the province of Connecticut, the right of appointing a governor excepted, which must rest in the Crown.

In order the more effectually to remove every jealousy on the part of the people of Vermont (industriously infused by designing Men into the minds of the Ignorant) of Great Britain's wishing to deprive them of their liberty, and to curtail their Interest by limiting their possessions—and in order to remove the injuries said to have been exercised against them by the New York Government, in obtaining Grants of Land which had, in consequence of Grants from New Hampshire, been cultivated by the labour and industry of the Inhabitants of the Green Mountains—I hereby further promise, that, until such time as His Majesty's pleasure shall be signified to me, or that I shall have authority from one of the King's Commissioners (for which I have already made application) to confirm to the said people of Vermont their late acquisition of Territory, together with their Landed Property, as granted under New Hampshire, Viz^t—From the North Line of Massachusetts, North, to the South Line of Canada, and from the Hudson's River, East, to the Mason Line, I shall consider the same, to all intents and purposes, belonging to the Province of Vermont, and I shall afford to them the same protection, privileges and Immunities herein promised to the Inhabitants of the original District.

A free Trade with Canada will likewise be granted and encouraged, and the more effectually to protect the said people of Vermont in their possessions, a co-operative Force sufficient for that purpose will, at all times, be provided by the Crown, and the Vermont Troops shall have every present and future Advantage in common with the provincials now serving with the King's Army.

Thus, it is hoped, Terms so eminently humane and generous will not leave a doubt remaining with the people of Vermont of the sincere and friendly intentions of Great Britain, and dispose them, tho' late, to give a virtuous Example to their Countrymen by acknowledging, tho' late, their Error, and putting a stop to a ruinous and unnatural War, destructive to the harmony and mutual affection, which, until its fatal Commencement, constituted the happiness and Strength of both Countries, and successfully defended their religion and Laws against the baneful Influence of Despotism.

Sir Henry Clinton to Gen. Haldimand.

NEW YORK, October 2nd. 1781.

Sir,—I am honored with your Letters Nos. 5 and 6—and agree entirely with you, that Vermont should declare immediately.

By Letters of the 16th. and 17th. Ultimo, from Lord Cornwallis, he acquaints me that the Enemy's Fleet, supposed to be 36 Sail of the Line and One 50, are in the Chesapeak, and had landed about 3500 Men to join Lafayette, and, as Washington is gone thither with those under Rochambeau and 2000 Rebel Troops, Lord Cornwallis' Situation is become alarming, which is rendered still more so by the necessary delays in refitting our Fleet, which is only 23 Sail of the Line and 3 Fifties.

All agree that the only way to succour his Lordship is by going to Chesapeak. I hope to sail about the 12th. Every exertion will be made to penetrate and form a junction with him. Should that fail, a move will probably take place through Jersey against Philadelphia. A very early Effort towards Minisink, going Southward with the season, would be of great use.¹ If Lord Cornwallis is relieved, and the French Fleet quit the Chesapeak, operations will go on in the Chesapeak all Winter.

CAMP BEFORE YORK, Oct. 6, 1781.

Sir,—I yesterday received your favor of the 26th August, and am glad to find that matters are like to be accommodated to the mutual satisfaction of the people of Vermont and those neighboring States, whereby the strength of a numerous body will be thrown into the general scale,

¹ Following this letter in the Haldimand Papers is a letter of Oct. 3 1781 to "Dear Joseph"—supposed to be the Mohawk chief, Col. JOSEPH BRANDT—requesting him to "make a move upon Minisink and the East Branch of the Susquehanah as soon as possible." The letter was without signature, but a reference was made which enabled Brandt to identify the writer.

It will be necessary also for you to keep a communication with Brigadier Stark, who commands at Saratoga and in that district.

October 8. I have promises, in case of an attack, that the Vermonters shall once more come to my assistance. I am in hopes to give you an account of a small acquisition in the course of a few days. Any thing extra you must not expect, as I am only prepared to act on the defensive.

Lord George Germaine to Sir Henry Clinton for Gen. Haldimand.

N^o. 92. Oct. 12th.

The Minister says, I am anxious that General Haldimand should receive my Dispatch, that was intended to have gone by the Cerberus, as it contained Instructions which, by his Letter to you, appear to be all that is wanting to effect an accommodation with the Vermont People, and I send you Enclosed herewith, an unsealed Duplicate of my Letter, that you may forward either the whole, or Extracts, by such Conveyances as you can confide in, and if you have a proper Opportunity, acquaint Ethan Allen with the King's Gracious Intentions to make the Boundary of the New Province as extensive as he can desire.

Indorsed, "Extracts from the Minister's Correspondence respecting Vermont."

*Gen. Roger Enos to the Speaker of the Vermont House of Representatives.*²

Mr. Speaker,—I take the Liberty, through your hands, of communicating my Sentiments, to the Hon^{ble} the General Assembly upon a Subject which greatly concerns the Interest and Safety of this State.

The Hon^{ble} House I presume are in some measure sensible of the Motives, which have induced the Enemy to withhold their Force from the Frontiers of this State. At the Close of the present Session, such measures probably will be adopted, as will open the Eyes of the Enemy, who will then be more fully sensible, that notwithstanding their political Intrigues, Vermont ever has, and will support the American Claims in common with the United States. At that Period we have every reason to apprehend the whole Force of Canada will be exerted for our Destruction. Should this be their Object, I would recommend that 1500 Men be raised, in the manner following, & ready to take the Field by the first of Ap^l.

1^t. To continue in service during the War, or for three Years.

2^d. To be clothed, armed and accoutred by the State.

² Vermont State Papers, Ms., Vol. 24, p. 4. This letter has come to the editor's notice since the Haldimand Papers were printed in the second volume of the Vermont Historical Society Collections. The letter is pertinent and important, as it shows the views entertained by Gen. Enos, and it seems by all parties in the Vermont Assembly also, as to Vermont's part in the Haldimand negotiations. Enos, according to Ira Allen, was "fully acquainted with the negociations."—See ante, p. 130.

3^y. Their pay, Discipline and Government to be established as in the regular Army of the United States.

The Advantages arising from an Army established upon this footing, will appear obvious, by a just computation of the Expence and Inconvenience, this State has been at in the present method of raising Men for its Defence. The Bounty we have given to Two and three different Classes of Men, raised for Two, three and Nine Months, in the Course of a Year has been sufficient to have enlisted an equal Number of Men during the War. Besides the Advantages [disadvantages] arising from an Army raised for a short Period, as has been the Case, is not only attended with great Expence and constant trouble, but very precarious and uncertain. It is a Truth that the Powers of Government have never been able to raise more than one half the Number of Men assigned for its Defence; and as the Troops are obliged to cloath themselves, they at the Close of the Campaign, are in a manner naked, incapable of Fatigue—subject to sickness, which ends in the Furlow of one half the Army, at the very time their services are most wanted. Should the Enemy make a severe attack upon our Frontiers in this Situation, the Consequences must prove fatal to many of our Towns not only on the Frontiers, but even in the interior parts of the State. Whereas—a well Disciplined Army Cloathed and Accoutred in a Soldier-like manner, which are essentially necessary for the Health, Spirit and Vigor of a Soldier, would give such a Confidence to the Inhabitants on our Frontiers, that instead of being employed in securing their Effects they would readily unite their force, which would give a Check to the Enemy until the Strength of the State could be drawn out against them if needed.

This mode of Defence would secure the able Farmers in their labour, at those times when it would be ruinous for them to be called from their Fields—it would encourage the Settlement of our Frontiers, which would also increase our Strength, and [is] absolutely necessary to gain the Aid and Confidence of the United States.

I am Sir with due Respect

Your Ob^t Hum. Serv^t

ROGER ENOS.

HEAD-QUARTERS, Castleton, October 26, 1781.

Dear Sir,—Captain Salisbury this instant returned as a scout from the Mount [Independence,] which he left last evening. He lay in sight of the enemy's works the chief part of the day. They are repairing the fortification [at Ticonderoga,] and have covered the long barracks. Nearly two hundred cattle were employed in drawing cannon, &c., from British Commissioners to Gen. Haldimand.—Extracts concerning Vermont.

1781. 27th. October. The Enclosed Papers I received by the Hands of . . . who had Directions to deliver them privately to me.

Mr. A—'s Letter, and the manner of its Conveyance, with the correct Account he gives of the Proceedings of the Assembly, serve to convince me of his sincerity and loyal intentions, but I cannot see anything in the enclosed papers to induce me to think, with him, that "these matters may yet crown our most sanguine expectations:" on the Contrary, I am much disappointed to find our trusty friends are left out of the Council and Assembly of Vermont.¹

Mr. A—'s Messenger has not yet appeared. We cannot account for the delay, for every account we have from Vermont is favorable. They have chosen Mr. C. Governor, and their Lieutenant Governor and Council are of such men as favor a Re-union; but notwithstanding these flattering prospects, we do not chuse to send His Excellency's proclamation until we are better able to judge of the acceptance it will meet with: this we hope soon to learn by pretty certain means we have taken for that purpose. Colonel St. Leger has sent back one of their Scouts taken by surprise with a declaration signifying his amicable intentions to them. This was an idea of the Colonel's and I think cannot fail of having a good effect at this time, if that people have the remotest wish for a Re-union.

As soon as I can learn that the Proclamation will not be despised, I shall send it, and wait as long as the weather will permit for an Answer.

[ENCLOSURE.]

(COPY.) Letter from [Ira Allen.]

I received yours of the 3^d. Ultimo, and marked well the Contents. You are no doubt impatient waiting a return from me, but I must inform you that every matter has not operated as was expected yet in confidence and pursuant to my engagements I transmit the heads of facts that you may lay the same before the General for his Information.

A few days before the present Session, there was news from various quarters that Admiral De Grass had arrived at Chesapeak with 28 Ships of the Line and 3000 Land Forces exclusive of the Fleet at Rhode Island, which it is said are gone to Charlestown to act in conjunction with General Green: That Admiral De Grass and the English Fleet had had a severe Engagement, in which the English were defeated, and the accounts appear to me so exaggerated that I shall not pretend to give you them. But by the New York papers it appears that the English were second best, and that the French keep the Bay, which prevents Lord Cornwallis's retreat. General Washington, with a division of his allied Army, has joined the Marquis who commanded in Virginia, and some report, that Lord Cornwallis, with his Army, are prisoners. These Accounts whether true or false have their effect on the people. By the Enclosed List of the Officers of Government for the present year, and by the mark of the number of new ones, you will see there has been a great change which in many instances I find favorable, but these matters are so delicate & so many Strangers I have not sounded them all yet. It is to be observed there are Spies from the other states watching our motions. By the enclosed Extracts of the proceedings of the Committee of both Houses, you will see how we have dispensed with the resolutions of Congress.¹ The proposals to settle with the neighbouring States we view, in present circumstances, a polite way of Closing the Treaty with Congress and which will tend much to strengthen internal Connexions. There were but two dissenting Votes in the whole. It is with regret I am necessitated to request that you do not send the proposed Proclamation at this time, as the before recited Southern Accounts seem to forbid it for the present yet the time will come when they will answer the design intended. There is an account of Admiral Digby's arrival at New York, and that he has only three ships of the line. I however expect more favorable News from the Southward soon—movements in these parts but too much depend on success to the South, as this people do not feel themselves able to oppose the world which makes it hard and somewhat dangerous making the first public move—& to publish these matters before they are fully ripe might at least endanger the whole system, so well calculated for the happiness of this people & on which I have placed my ambition. You may depend this people do not feel themselves under that obligation to Congress that they once did, but are losing sight of that object fast; and should the General's patience hold out, and the Frontiers not be invaded to rouse that spirit which there has been so much pains taken to lay, these matters may yet crown our most sanguine expectations. In full confidence of this, I submit the whole matter to those whose right it is to determine.

I am, &c. ———

Sir Henry Clinton to Gen. Haldimand.—[Extract.]

INTELLIGENCE.

27th. October [1781.]

As for Affairs at Cornwallis' Army, you must not be offended if I tell you I cannot give you any satisfactory accounts: those I have received are such as induce me to believe His Lordship is very much Crowded on every side: how it will turn out Lord only knows; a short time will determine the point.

As to the disposition of the Vermonters, it is almost as difficult to satisfy you about them as it is about Lord Cornwallis, for their minds will be actuated entirely by the Southern Affairs. But if the Leading Men in Vermont should agree to any thing that favored Canada, I am perfectly satisfied the populace would oppose it.²

¹The "proceedings" were of the Vermont Assembly, Oct. 16–19 1781, which are in the Haldimand Papers. For these proceedings see ante, pp. 321–323.

²The remainder of this letter is on military affairs.

Oct. 27. Col. Walbridge wrote to Gen. Stark, detailing information received from a deserter, that Gen. St. Leger arrived at Ticonderoga on the 25th, with four gun-boats, two ammunition-boats, thirty batteaux, a number of shipping, and two thousand men. Ten batteaux and one whale-boat were taken over to Lake George.

Oct. 29. Lord Stirling, at Albany, wrote to Maj. Gen. Heath that he and Gen. Schuyler were to visit Gen. Stark, who was making repeated calls for militia; but Lord Stirling suspected the enemy would give no opportunity for the use of them.

Oct. 30. Gen. Enos, at Castleton, wrote to Gen. Stark that he had no doubt the enemy would pass Lake George for Stark's quarter. "For want of provisions has been obliged to discharge the greater part of the militia of Vermont, which greatly disappoints my intended operations with you. On Thursday night [Nov. 2] I will be at Fort Ann with four hundred men, where I shall wait your directions, with intelligence where the enemy are." Wants ammunition. The account sent by Col. Walbridge on the 27th was confirmed. Not more than four or five hundred [British troops] remained at Ticonderoga. Thinks the movement made [via Lake George] with two or three thousand men.

St. Leger reached Ticonderoga on the 25th of October, and about that time, in a skirmish between British and Vermont scouts, sergeant Tupper, of the Vermont militia, was killed. It was an accident, as neither did St. Leger on the part of the British, or General Enos and Colonels Fletcher and Walbridge on the part of Vermont, intend to have any violation of the armistice.¹

October 31, 1781.

Dear Sir,—Thanks for the Furs, Your Letters and the great pleasure I have in being continued in your Friendship.

¹ For IRA ALLEN's account, see ante, pp. 129-130. ARCHELAUS TUPPER was a sergeant in "Capt. Joseph Safford's Company of Militia in Col. Eben^r Walbridge's Regiment in an Alarm to Castleton, commencing the 14th October 1781, and ending the 31st, both days included." "A Petition of Lt. Col. Sam^l Robinson, dated Feb^y. 13, 1782, stating that about the 25th of last Oct. Col. Fletcher, then commandant at Castleton, ordered the pet^r to send a scout out of the reg^t commanded by Col. R. to Mt. Independence, and that he, Lt. Col. R., 'sent sergeant Archelus Tupper, Silas Walbridge, Joseph Willoughby Jr., Nath^l Grave, Ammi Fuller, and Jesse Bruster, who [were] on their way [when] one was killed, the rest taken prisoners and lost their guns, accoutrements & ammunition, and praying the Gen. Assembly to pay them for said articles: and the Gen. Assembly resolved to make good said articles to sd persons, except Tupper, and that Ezekiel Brewster should have a gun in lieu of the one by him lent to serjeant Tupper."—See Revolutionary Service, State of Vermont, ms. volume in the Secretary of State's office, pp. 306, 525.

Sir Henry Clinton with about 6000 Men, went on board a Fleet of 25 Sail of the Line, to try to relieve Lord Cornwallis: He was forced to surrender on the 29th, [19th]—the very day our Fleet sailed. We have not heard from Sir Henry, nor of our fleet. Sir Henry and Mr Digby, who is a secret Commissioner, on that [their] arrival will consider, and Answer the Letters about Vermont. I will willingly give up a very good Estate in that Country and every provincial interest to fix these people in the interest of the Crown, but I doubt this secret event¹ will defeat all your trouble and pains. General Arnold says, Pere Floquet is an inveterate Enemy, Jacob Rove no better—and indeed the gross of the Boston Traders little better, he had no friendly Acts from any of the noblesse. TYCONDEROGA, 2nd. November.

British Commissioners to Gen. Haldimand.

TYCON^D. 2^d. NOV^R.

Sending back the prisoners with the Letter from Colonel St Leger has been attended with as much success as could be expected. The leading Men were much pleased with it, and as soon as the Militia at Castletown, Pittsford and Skeensborough learned the Contents of the Letter, they returned to their Homes, saying they saw no reason to risk their lives and fortunes in the defence of New York. From every intelligence that can be obtained, it appears that nothing more can be done with Vermont to any effect until it is known how matters turn at Chespeak, as the attention of these people seem anxiously fixed upon that Quarter. I cannot but flatter myself that N. Y. and Vermont will soon be at War with each other.³ I am certain their former Enmity and Jealousy will be much augmented by the management of the present expedition, sending back the Vermont Prisoners, &c.—In consequence of which they have finally denied General Stark any Assistance. In-closed I send you a few Articles of Intelligence just received from a friend on whom I can depend.

In the Haldimand Papers, the succeeding letter, apparently referred to above, is marked "Intelligence," but it was a letter from Sir Henry Clinton to Gen. Haldimand, Oct. 27 1781, an extract from which is given ante p. 452. Possibly Gen. H.'s Secretary by mistake put Sir Henry Clinton's letter under that head, and omitted the "intelligence" sent as above from Ticonderoga.

FORT ANN, Nov. 2, 1781.

Dear Sir,—I arrived at this place last evening with the number of men as mentioned in my last, with five days' provisions of beef, and one of bread; was disappointed in every way of procuring the latter article, of which I am now destitute. I am extremely sorry and much disappointed that you did not furnish me with the number of cartridges required. As the Hampshire forces are destitute of ammunition, I judge it improper to proceed to Fort Edward, unless there shall be absolute occasion. I have this instant heard a firing of cannon and small arms at Fort Edward,² and shall immediately send a scout to that place for intelligence. If no discovery of the enemy be made, I shall be under the necessity of returning to Castleton.

I am, dear Sir, your obedient servant,
Hon. Brigadier Gen. Stark.

ROGER ENOS.

Nov. 3. Lord Stirling wrote from Saratoga to Maj. Gen. Heath that there was no appearance of an enemy that side the narrows of Lake George, and but a few at Ticonderoga. It being the opinion of Stark, Schuyler, and others, that there was no longer any necessity for the militia, they were discharged. The same to Gov. Clinton.³ In fact, Col. St. Leger had at this time received intelligence of the capture of the army of Cornwallis, and he at once withdrew his force to Canada. IRA ALLEN's statement was this:

The packet containing Colonel Allen and Major Fay's letter⁴ was delivered at Ticonderoga about ten o'clock in the morning. About an hour after, an express arrived from the southward, which was supposed to contain the news of the capture of Lord Cornwallis and his army; for before evening, the troops, stores, &c. were embarked, and with a fair wind returned to Canada. Thus ended the campaign of 1781, with the accidental loss of only one man, on the extensive frontiers of Vermont, exposed to an army of ten thousand men; yet she did not incur any considerable debt. Such were the happy effects of these negotiations.⁵

General Stark to Governor Chittenden.

SARATOGA, Nov. 5th, 1781.

Sir,—Ordered by his excellency, the commander-in-chief, to assume the command of the northern department, and to call, if necessary, upon the militia of this state, [meaning New York, though Vermont then claimed Saratoga, and that town was represented in the Vermont General Assembly,] and those of Vermont, for protecting the frontiers of both states, I have observed, with great satisfaction, the alacrity with which both have taken the field on every requisition; but, accountable as I am to superiors, and inexcusable as I should be if I neglected to advise them of any circumstances which carry the aspect of iniquity, I wish to receive the most authentic information respecting the sergeant of the Vermont militia who was slain, and his party captured by the enemy.

I expect your excellency will enable me to furnish a minute detail of it to Congress, by affording me a perusal of the original letter, which the British commanding officer is said to have written to you upon the occasion. This will be returned to you by a safe hand, and a copy transmitted to Congress.

The report, as brought to me, is that, upon the party's arrival at Ticonderoga, the British officer expressed great displeasure that the citizens of Vermont had been disturbed; that he sent for the corpse of the deceased sergeant, caused it to be interred with military honors, and then dismissed the captured party with what liquor and provisions they chose to carry away, and delivered them a letter of apology to your excellency. If this be true, it indicates a deep stroke of policy on the part of the enemy, to raise a suspicion in the minds of all Americans that the Vermonters are friendly to them, or that they really have some encouragement from some people in Vermont.

That the principal portion of the people of Vermont are zealously attached to the American cause, no honest man can doubt, but that, like every other state, it contains its proportion of lurking traitors, is a reasonable supposition; and if these, by their machinations, have brought upon the people injurious suspicions, there is no doubt but the latter will severely punish the miscreants as soon as their misdeeds are fully developed.

No exertion on my part shall be wanted to eradicate every suspicion injurious to the people of Vermont. Your compliance with my request will probably afford me one of the means, and I pray most earnestly your acquiescence, that I may detail the whole business in its true light.

I congratulate you, with the most heartfelt satisfaction, on the glorious event which has placed another British army in our power, which was announced on the third instant by a discharge of fourteen cannon,¹ and yesterday by that of a like number of platoons, in honor of the United States of America.

I am, Sir, respectfully, your humble servant,

JOHN STARK.²

November 9, 1781. }

The General has the pleasure of acquainting the army that the enemy have been completely disappointed in their designs on the northern frontiers of this state, in consequence of the measures adopted to receive them in the vicinity of the lakes, in which the General is much indebted to Major-General lord Stirling, Brigadier-General Stark, and the officers and soldiers both of the regular troops and militia, who, with great zeal and alertness, pressed forward to meet the enemy.³

¹ Note by editor of Memoir of Stark.—Vermont was not at this time a state. The fourteenth cannon was however fired, as a compliment to her good services in the war, and a hope that she might soon become a state of the Union.

*Sir Henry Clinton to Gen. Haldimand.*NEW YORK, Nov. 6 [12¹] 1781.

Sir,—I received your several Dispatches by His Majesty's Ship Garland, and as there was a Packet upon the point of Sailing for Europe when they arrived, I transmitted to the Minister a Copy of your Letter of the 1st of October, of your Proclamation, and of the Letter marked A., not having had time to prepare Copies of the whole; but they shall be sent by the next opportunity, and also laid before Admiral Digby (who is joint Commissioner with me) as soon as he arrives in Town.

You will not expect more from me by this Conveyance respecting your measures with the Leaders of Vermont, than a general declaration of my Confidence in your endeavours to separate that District from the Revolt, and my wish for its Success.

The extent of the expectations of the people and of your promise to meet them, will, I apprehend, make it necessary for the Crown to resort to parliament, for the truth is, that the powers of the present Commissioners extend only to granting pardons and restoring Provinces or Districts to the King's Peace: and this alone is the reason of my sending to the Secretary of State these Transactions, and I hope you will find no difficulty in preventing our Enemies from practicing upon the Jealousies of the Inhabitants of Vermont before the result of the public deliberation can be transmitted.

ARLINGTON, November 14th, 1781.

Dear General—Your kind favor of the 5th inst. was received on the 10th, but through the extreme hurry of business, and for want of a proper conveyance, I have neglected to answer till now.

The particular account you have requested me to send you in regard to the slain sergeant of the Vermont militia, and the return of the party with him, who were discharged by the British officer commanding, I have thought it my duty to transmit to his excellency, General Washington, together with every other public movement in this vicinity, that in any manner relates to the welfare of the independent states of America. This I doubt not will be satisfactory.

I take this opportunity to return my thanks for the honor done this State, by your directing the discharge of the fourteenth cannon, on your late public day of rejoicing, occasioned by the capture of Lord Cornwallis and his army. A like day will probably be observed in this State on the same occasion. I am, dear General, Dispatch. By the Garland Frigate I had the honor of communicating to you at large my transactions with the people of Vermont. I hope the safe arrival of that Dispatch has made Duplicates unnecessary, as I have not time at present to prepare them, but lest a misfortune should have happened to the Garland, I herewith send a Duplicate of my Letter dated 1st of October which will give Your Excellency a general idea of the situation of the Vermont Affair, and of my intentions at that time, which are at present in execution, but which I am sorry to find must have been expected by Vermont, from Lord G. Germaine's Letter N^o. 77, to your Excellency of the 7th. of last February, which, by some strange fatality, fell into the Enemy's hands. It is easy to imagine the advantage that might be taken of this circumstance by an artful people who are acquainted, from such good authority, with the Consequence of which they are considered in the political scale.

Enclosed are Extracts &c. lately received from my Agents for that Business. By these you will perceive they have not found the minds of the people sufficiently prepared to receive the proclamation eventually to be issued, tho' no change has appeared in the favorable Dispositions of the leading Men who profess their wishes for a Re-union. The interests of these people so much depend upon the turn affairs will take in the Chesapeak, the state of which I have not the least knowledge of, except by Rebel papers, which accidentally fell into my hands, that until they are decided, it cannot be expected they will, however well disposed, ultimately declare themselves, should that event prove favorable, but not till then.¹ I have reason to expect from the train in which things are, that Vermont will decide for and take an active part with Government, which will open a field for future Consideration, but if unfortunately the contrary should happen, adieu to all hopes of negotiation, for the populace, already enthusiastic, will never be gained by persuasion. The Season being so far advanced, I every day look for the return of the Detachments from the Frontiers. My anxiety to learn the situation of affairs to the Southward induced me to dispatch a Messenger to your Excellency overland. He left this yesterday and will I hope arrive safe. I shall anxiously wait his return tho' I have every day hopes of being honored with a despatch from your Excellency. I have lately had the mortification to learn that the principal Channels I have used to Convey Dispatches and procure Intelligence are almost entirely broken up, in so much that whole settlements have been removed at a time across the N. River owing to the imprudence of recruiting parties of the Corps of Loyalists, and discoveries by Emissaries, and the desertion of Rebel prisoners enlarged upon Parole. This will make our Intercourse still less frequent than it is, and I have to request your Excellency, should you have any matter of import to communicate to me, that you will send Duplicates by way of Niagara, or to strike upon Carleton Island, for tho' more tedious, it is, at present, the most certain, route.

Herewith enclosed a Duplicate of a Cypher which I had the honor to propose to your Excellency by the Garland Frigate.

The Trade Fleet and Victualling Transports, under Convoy of the Dedalus, Brune, and Hind Frigates, sailed from hence the 25th. Ulto. and have been put back twice by adverse winds to the Island of Bie, where they now are.

*Gen. Stark to Gen. Washington.*¹

Dec. 21, 1781, Gen. Stark reported to Gen. Washington his view of the condition of affairs in Western Vermont. He noticed the affair of Sergeant Tupper, and his correspondence with Gov. Chittenden thereon, requesting Washington to inform him whether the Governor sent to him the original letter of St. Leger. "If he sent you the original, it must be satisfactory; otherwise, the case will still be doubtful in my opinion. I shall think that they dare not produce the original."² After reporting the then late affair with New York, and the East and West Unions, Gen. Stark proceeded:

I believe, sir, that I may venture to predict that unless something decisive is done in the course of this winter, with respect to these people, we may have every thing to fear from them that they are capable of, in case we are under the disagreeable necessity of making another campaign. This may be considered as strange language from me, who have ever been considered a friend to Vermont; and, indeed, I ever was their friend, until their conduct convinced me that they were not friendly to the United States. Were I to judge by their professions, they are more mine and the [United] States' friend now than ever; but their actions and their words appear to carry a very different meaning. During my command, I have been promised every thing from their government and their leading men that I could wish for; but they have taken particular care to perform nothing; while, on the other hand, the militia of New York, and those of Berkshire, attended to my requisition with alacrity and uncommon spirit; and I believe the northern and western frontiers are in a great measure indebted to them for the protection of their houses, &c. I most sincerely wish that matters may turn out better than I expect.³

Aug. 9, 1781. In compliance with your order, I arrived at Bennington on Friday last, and on Saturday made a visit to their Governor [Chittenden,] who, together with the leading men of the country, have promised me every assistance in their power to repel the common enemy. I have reason to believe, from their conduct, that their promises are not fallacious; for, before I came to Bennington, Maj. McKinstry, who has command of the troops at Saratoga, sent an express to apprise them of the enemy's advance for his post. The alarm was spread, and in a few hours one hundred and fifty men, on horseback, marched to his assistance. The alarm proved false, and next day they returned, but not till they had visited Saratoga. On Monday last, at sunrise, a party of eleven was discovered in the south-east part of Bennington, supposed to be a party of tories from Hoosac, passing into Canada. The people were instantly in arms, pursued them until one o'clock, when three of the pursuers came up and made them prisoners. They were instantly marched to Bennington. Upon examination, I find them to be a party from Can-

WHITEHALL, [London,] 2nd. Jan^y. 1782.

Sir,—I was well pleased to find by a Copy of your Letter of the first of October to Sir Henry Clinton, and of the papers enclosed in it, which he transmitted to me, with his last Dispatches, that your negotiation with the Vermont Leaders was in so fair a train as to afford good ground to expect that Country would speedily be restored to the King's obedience. I have since learned by private Accounts that a detachment of your Army had arrived at Crown Point and that a considerable Force was assembled at Sorel under General Reidesel in readiness to protect them from the resentment of the Congress, should they declare for his Majesty.

Lord Cornwallis's misfortune will I fear deter them from taking that step at present, but I trust they will not be intimidated into a submission to the Congress, but that you will find measures to encourage them to persevere in their former purpose, and to restore their confidence in our ability to support them, for, as you have now put Quebec into a state of security and established at Sorel, I should hope you will be able to carry with you early in the Spring a much larger Body of Troops than M^r. Washington can spare from his Army to go against them. I therefore must repeat to you my recommendations to make the recovery of Vermont to the King's Obedience, the primary object of your Attention, and I can assure you, that whatever expense you may incur in effecting it will not be grudged.

Gen. Schuyler to Gen. Washington.—[Extract.]¹

Jan. 15 1782. Yesterday, I received advice that the people on the Grants had generally assembled in town meetings, had declared their apprehensions that a criminal intercourse prevailed between some of their people and the British, and determined on an examination of the conduct of the suspected persons; and had, by a great majority of the towns, voted that a relinquishment should be made of their late extended claim, both on the east and west. The latter part of this intelligence is this moment confirmed to me, in such a manner that I have not a doubt remaining of its truth; and I have reason to believe that the former part is not without foundation.

Dear Sir,—I have received your favor of the 9th, and am very well pleased with the account you give of the disposition and behavior of the people of Vermont. The party [Howard's] you mention to have been captured by them. I think must be considered as prisoners of war, and ought to be closely confined, to prevent all possibility of escape, until they are exchanged. I hope the militia have arrived before this time, as I have been obliged to order the remainder of the continental troops to join the main army.

Gov. Clinton to Gen. Washington.—[Extract.]¹

Jan. 21 1782. The Governor transmitted correspondence between himself and Gen. Haldimand, being an unsuccessful attempt to procure an exchange of prisoners, and then adverted to Vermont affairs:

I lately transmitted to Congress two affidavits,² proving a traitorous correspondence between the leaders on the New Hampshire Grants, and the enemy; and one of them, that an actual league of amity was settled between them; which, I presume, have been communicated to your excellency. There are many other circumstances tending to establish the facts contained in those affidavits, which would be too tedious to relate. The well-affected in this state, and I believe I may venture to say in some of the neighboring states, begin to be exceedingly alarmed at their conduct. Added to this, the violent and oppressive measures pursued by them against some of the most respectable citizens, to support their late extension of jurisdiction, will, I am persuaded, before the opening of spring, occasion our having recourse to arms to oppose their usurpations.

Will it not be well to consider the many chances and vicissitudes of War? However brilliant the last Campaign may appear, the next may wear a very different aspect. Add to this, the great probability of your being ruined by your haughty Neighbour, elated by (what they call) a signal victory; and I hope you will see, as I do, that it is more than ever your interest to unite yourself with those who wish to make you a happy and free Government. route, of communicating with your Excellency, and expressing my concern at having been so long deprived of the Honor of hearing from you, notwithstanding the many efforts I have made to obtain that satisfaction. My Letters in Cypher dated the 13th. and 24th. of September, and the 3rd. Oct^r. and 14th. of November I am fearful never reached you: those of the 27th. 28th. and 29th. of September, the 1st. 2nd. and 3rd. of October by the Garland, and of the 15th and 16th. of November, by the Pandora, have, I hope, been more fortunate.

Your Excellency's favor of the 2nd. of August, which I received so long ago as the 21st. of September, was the last that has come to my hands. I am therefore apprehensive that Dispatches from you must have miscarried, persuaded that, feeling for the anxiety expressed in my Letters to hear from you particularly upon the subject of Vermont Affairs, your Excellency would not have denied me that pleasure. I am most anxious for the return of my last Messenger, dispatched on the fourteenth of November, having been for many Months without having received the least Intelligence from any authority that can be depended on, and finding, by Reports brought in by the last Scouts, that preparations are making at and in the neighbourhood of Albany which indicate a renewal of the Enemy's design against this Province by the plan discovered by the Capture of M^r. Lawrence. It is unnecessary to write the particulars of these reports, as they of course prevail with you, and from your authentic knowledge of the state of things in the active scenes, it will be in your power to judge if they have any foundation.

The Conduct of the Canadians obviously discovers that they are in early expectation of some revolution from which they expect to derive advantage, and tho' all my efforts have proved ineffectual in making any material discoveries, there is not a doubt that an intercourse is supported between them and the French, and that it is from that source their hopes are fed, and their Conduct is influenced. A report now prevails amongst them that the Pope has issued a Bull, absolving them from the Oath of Allegiance to the English on their returning to that of France: it is likewise said that the Congress have issued a Proclamation, declaring pardon to all Americans who, having been induced to join the King's Army, will acknowledge and support the Independence of the States. Whether these reports are true or false, they have their effects.

Thus circumstanced, it is needless to express to your Excellency, how very acceptable any Information upon a subject so nearly concerning the King's Interests, and my own Happiness must be to me: and I rely on your Excellency's goodness in communicating to me, with all the dispatch that may be necessary, such Information as shall come to your knowledge, should it appear to you that the Enemy's Intention is to Invade this Province.

To provide against accidents, I take the liberty to Inclose to your Excellency a Duplicate of my present Dispatch to Lord George Germaine by Halifax, and request you will have the goodness to forward it by the first safe opportunity.

I have the Honor to be, with great respect and regard, Sir, your Excellency's Most Obedient and Most Humble Servant,

NEW YORK, March 10th. 1782.

It was scarcely to be expected that the January Mail could contain powers adequate to the accomplishment of the wishes of the people of Vermont, because, as to some of them, the Executive will want the Legislative Aid.

I am accordingly only desired to Continue the intercourse and Correspondence with them, and to encourage them to expect that if they adhere to his Majesty, their Interests will be properly attended to.

Aware of the necessity of observing the utmost secrecy in these Negotiations, I resolved that what they may be anxious to know, should pass through you, and by channels themselves may have directed as most safe.

This compelled me to apprise you as speedily as possible overland of the contents of my Dispatches as well as yours and that I might not trust to one hand to break the seals of those to you, your original I shall forward by the first Ship for Quebec.

If our Intelligence from the North Country is to be relied upon, the usurpers of this Province are meditating force against the Vermonters, but it is said, that, among others, General Schuyler, and Mr. Scott one of their own Delegates [in Congress,] disapprove of the design.

You will find under this Cover a printed protest, by what is called the State of New York, against the Congress,¹ which may lead to consequences that magnify this object, and render it more and more worthy of our Attention.

Notwithstanding the Intelligence that has been sent you respecting an intended attack on Canada, I think it more likely that the Enemy will attempt one against this Post.

*Extract from Gov. Clinton's Message to the Assembly of New York.*²

March 21 1782. I cannot forbear recommending to your particular attention, the affidavits and other papers, which prove a treasonable and dangerous intercourse and connexion between the leaders of the revolt in the north-eastern part of the state, and the common enemy. In order that you may form a competent judgment of the matter, such of the original papers respecting it as are in my possession will be delivered to you. Your own prudence will however suggest that these communications, as far as they relate to the names of the persons from whom the intelligence is derived, ought not to be divulged. I have only to observe that these proofs are corroborated by a variety of circumstances, which equally tend to show, that these criminal transactions are not confined to individuals, but have been conducted under the sanction of that usurped government.

Papers transmitted by Gov. Clinton to the Assembly.

Here followed the first affidavit of John Edgar, which was not given in the copy furnished, and the editor cannot supply it. William L. Stone gave the substance of both affidavits, and noticed no material difference, except that Edgar stated that Vermont was to furnish to the king two thousand men.¹

DAVID ABEEL'S AFFIDAVIT.

State of New York, ss. David Abeel of Kattskill, in the county of Albany, yeoman, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that some time in the month of April last past, he was taken prisoner at his own house by a party of Indians and tories, and carried to Niagara, and from thence to Montreal.

That on his way to the latter place, at the Cedars, he saw one Johnson [of] Fort Herkimer, who informed this deponent, that the people on the New Hampshire Grants, headed by Col. Allen, would join the British with 1500 men; that a Major Allen was then gone down to Quebec for that purpose; that at Montreal it was the general report that the New Hampshire Grants would join them; that this deponent saw at the Isle l' Noix, a Major Fay, on board a vessel called the Royal George, and who this deponent understood was an inhabitant on the Grants; that on board the said vessel was one Dr. Smith, Capt. Sherwood, and another person, whose name the deponent does not recollect, who were appointed commissioners to treat with the said Major Fay; that the said Fay brought with him upwards of thirty Hessians, deserted from Burgoyne's army, for exchange, as this deponent was informed, and which he delivered to the British, and further this deponent saith not.

Extracts of a Letter from ———, dated January 5, 1782.

A gentleman of intelligence, who left New York on the 23d ult., and in whom I can place full confidence, gave me the following particulars, which I conceived your excellency entitled to; I therefore do myself the honor to transmit them:

That some time since, commissioners had met with persons appointed by Gen. Haldimand, and offered to become subjects to the crown and government of Great Britain, upon the following terms, viz:

First, that the territory as claimed by the Vermonters, be constituted a separate government.

Secondly, that the same form of government be granted unto them, as was formerly enjoyed by Connecticut, excepting that the governor of the province should, from time to time, be nominated and appointed by the crown.

Thirdly, that they be allowed to remain neuter during the present contest, unless the war is carried within their own territory.

Fourthly, that they would raise two battalions properly officered, for their internal defense. These troops to be in British pay, &c., but not to be called into service, unless in defense of the province.

That they be allowed a free trade to Canada and be protected therein.

These are all the particulars that could be obtained respecting the terms held out by said commissioners. The papers were delivered to Gen. Haldimand, who, considering the matter of too important a nature for him to decide upon, transmitted them to Sir Henry Clinton, as one of the King of Great Britain's commissioners for restoring, &c., by whom they were laid before Justice William Smith, who gave his opinion, that the powers vested in the king's commissioners did not authorize them to determine a matter of so much consequence, and of so singular a nature; that nothing short of an act of parliament would be sufficient for the purpose; the papers relative to this matter should be laid before the king in council, that the necessary steps may be taken; which was accordingly then done, and the result is expected.

I am also informed that Mr. ——— of the city of New York, who claims land in Vermont, has it in contemplation to go thither by the way of Connecticut. What commission he may possibly be charged with, is not in my power to determine. This however is certain, that the enemy form great expectations from the apparent temper of Vermont.

The foregoing are true copies of two affidavits, and an extract of a letter, delivered to the legislature of the state of New York, with his excellency the Governor's message, at their present meeting, except as to the names of certain persons and places mentioned in the originals, which it would be improper to divulge, and are therefore omitted in the copies. Copy of a Letter from A. B. to E. Dated April [22,¹] 1782.

Gentlemen.—In Confidence we take this opportunity to Acquaint you, by the Authority of his Excellency General Haldimand, that he is still inclined to treat amicably with the people of Vermont, and that his generous and humane inclinations are now seconded by much stronger powers from His Majesty than he has hitherto enjoyed for that purpose. His Excellency still retains that generous confidence in your repeated professions of sincerity, as well as your solemn promises to endeavour to unite Vermont to Great Britain, which, (abstracted from all party and political views,) is due to the sincerity of Men of honor. Upon this principle we do in confidence officially assure you that every Article proposed to you in his Excellency's former Offers will, as that which was contended for by Vermont, viz^t the Confirmation of the East and West Unions in their utmost limits, be amply complied with. This Information is more intended for the ears and advantage of the leading people of Vermont who have manifested a desire for a re-union, than for public knowledge, and it is expected you will make it subservient to that purpose, and the success of that object only, if still wished by you. But should the Lord Cornwallis's misfortune, or any other circumstance, or view, have inclined you to alter your opinions and inclinations, we request and conjure you, by that candour and honor which you have so repeatedly declared to be the ruling motives of your whole conduct throughout the negotiation, to signify the change by the return of the Messenger, as the continuance of a negotiation attended with so much trouble, and from which nothing is to result, cannot be expected. It will however in the [any] event afford his Excellency infinite satisfaction to reflect that every effort which humanity, moderation and generosity could dictate has been employed on his part to rescue from the general calamity so principal a District of His Majesty's Colonies. His Excellency expects (if you remain in the opinion you held last Autumn) to hear from you in the fullest manner every transaction that has passed in Congress and the Vermont Assemblies relative to this Affair, the determination of these meetings, and your sentiments on the ultimate resolution of your people respecting the wished for re-union. He likewise expects, that if you declare an Intention to pursue such measures as justify a continuance of negotiation, that you will meet A. at any convenient place you will appoint in the vicinity of Crown Point as soon as possible, a personal Interview being in his Excellency's opinion the most effectual and safe method of negotiating.

We made an attempt last February to hear from you by the Bearer, but failed: we hope this will be attended with better success, and that your Answer may be such as to unburthen our anxious minds knowing as you do how much our characters and reputation depend on your closely adhering to the promises and encouragement you have been pleased to give us. As we have at your desire represented to his Excellency your candour and honor in so sanguine a manner as to induce him to entertain the highest opinion of your veracity and upright intentions, consequently, should he have reason to alter his sentiments, he must in some measure consider his Confidence in us to have been ill placed. We are assured your Sentiments of honor are too delicate to admit of this when in your power to prevent it, and that from your knowledge of business you will readily conceive how painful such Apprehensions must be to an honest Soldier, honored with the confidence of his General in a matter of so great importance. We therefore still flatter ourselves that you will not suffer anything to be wanting on your side to bring it to a just and happy conclusion, or if that cannot be done, to give us such well-founded and permanent reasons as may enable us to satisfy his Excellency not only of our veracity, but of yours likewise.

We are, &c.

April 23, 1782. The London Courant of this date gave, almost word for word, the letter communicated to the Assembly of New York by Gov. Clinton, with his message, March 21.¹ It was republished in a hand-bill, [probably at Albany,] and a certified copy was made by JAMES BREAKENRIDGE of Bennington.² It was a very correct statement of propositions entertained by the commissioners in the secret negotiation. How the secret was revealed, unless by one of the commissioners, and how it came to be revealed to both the Governor of New York and the British officers at New York at the same time, are questions more interesting to the curious than important. Gen. HALDIMAND complained of treachery in the letter following.

Your Excellency's Dispatches of the 22nd. February³ with an extract of Lord George Germain's, I received the 6th. Inst. and that of the 10th. March and Triplicate the 15th. together with Copies of Lord George's to me by the January packet. The Latitude for negotiating with Vermont is so differently expressed in his Lordship's Letter to me of the 26th of July and his subsequent Dispatch to your Excellency, communicated in your Letter, that it is difficult to act with any prospect of success, on one hand, without hazarding blame on the other, more particularly as his Lordship has not touched upon that material part of the subject in his Letter to me, as I am totally uninformed of the plan of operation for the ensuing Campaign. To continue any Intercourse, &c. with the Vermonsters, encouraging them to expect that their Interest will be attended to, proving a too general and ineffectual a doctrine before Lord Cornwallis's misfortune, now it would be matter of ridicule, which is sufficiently manifested by their Concessions to the Congress, etc. relinquishing their late assumed Jurisdiction, on which our hopes were founded, notwithstanding the encouragement I gave of its being confirmed. To attempt to treat with them upon conditions short of that would be adding to our lost time, nor will they ever be accepted if not attended with an apparent prospect of our Affairs on this Continent taking a prosperous turn. The Crisis is arrived when coercion alone must design [decide] the part Vermont will take, and that measure should be determined upon from the minute the Troops directed by Lord George to appear upon the Frontiers shall take post, and must be carried into execution, as far as possible, after giving them sufficient notice, by laying waste their Country if they do not accept the Terms offered, otherwise the Troops will only serve to confirm them in the prevailing and too just idea that we want abilities to force them to compliance and will enhance their merit and influence with Congress. As I dare not hazard a Dispatch for Lord George by the return Messenger, I beg leave through the Channel of this Letter to acknowledge the receipt of his Lordship's Dispatch forwarded to me by your Excellency, and request you will have the goodness to send a Copy of it deciphered. The minute I can form any certain judgment that this provision [expedition] is not to be attempted by the River and agreeably to Lafayette's proposal communicated in your Letter, I shall not fail appearing with as great a Force as my strength and circumstances will admit of upon the Frontiers for the purpose expressed in his Lordship's Letter for which I have already made preparations but the impossibility of penetrating far into the Country with so inconsiderable a Force as that will be too evident to require enlarging upon, and our expectations of success should be proportioned to immediate [danger of] misfortune. 3000 [men] were assembled and 3000 more in readiness to cut off Colonel St. Leger's Retreat last year had he ventured any longer in the Country, in which case they would have infallibly have succeeded. Author[ities insist that it] is not the number of Troops M^r Washington can spare from his army [that is] to be apprehended; it is the multitude of Militia men in Arms ready to turn out at a quarter of an hour's notice upon the Spic of a single Regiment of Continental Troops, that would oppose this Attempt, the facilitating [facility] of which has been fatally experienced.¹ This movement [I] cannot effect before the middle of June, not only from the uncertainty of what may happen here, but from the want of Flour, having lived seven weeks past upon that destined for the Upper Country which must be replaced from a purchase of wheat I have made to provide against the usual delays of the provision Fleet; and that wheat cannot be ground before. In consequence of the Information contained in your Excellency's Letter of the 22^d of February concerning the attempt intended by *Clarke*¹ against Detroit, I have sent Orders eventually to reinforce that place with two Companies of Butler's Rangers, which is all I can at present do for it, and these must be drawn from Oswego, where I hope a Post is by this time taken; preparations have been made for that purpose in the course of the winter at Carleton Island, from whence a Detachment was to proceed the moment Lake Ontario became navigable. I have more to hope from the Secrecy with which this has been conducted, and the activity of Major Ross, who Commanded, than from the strength of his Detachment, which is inadequate to this necessary undertaking, but proportioned to my force and circumstances. I with much concern refer your Excellency to a rebel Newspaper printed at Fishkill, where the substance of all that has passed in my negotiation with Vermont and is communicated to you, is related. This proves that our Confidence has been somewhere betrayed, and God knows what bad effect it may have in that affair, particularly if Allen and Fay have been sincere. About 2 Months ago I sent a message to Allen to learn what had passed in Congress relative to Vermont Affairs: the messenger was taken on his way out but fortunately destroyed his Dispatch:² this has prevented my forming so good a judgment as I might have done of their late Transactions, but I have with great difficulty procured two Men who are now on that Business. These obstacles oblige me to request that your Excellency will not as you have mentioned in your Letter [be] confined or entirely dependent to a channel through me [as to] the Interest pursued of reclaiming Vermont: that I shall make every effort in my power may be relied on, but I am so circumstanced as to require every Aid that can be given. The 20th of May I shall send a Field Officer of the Provincials by appointment of a Colonel Beadle to confer with him at Havrel in Connecticut.³ He has promised to propose to me some matters of Importance. The Character I have of him from many Loyalists who know him is not flattering to my hopes, but as something may be discovered by the Interview explanatory of Vermont affairs, I have embraced the offer. I send you two fast Messengers with this, and shall detain the last a few days in hope of Communicating some news to your Excellency from Europe. The ice having broken up much earlier than usual, arrivals are looked for in a few days.

Gen. Haldimand to Sir Henry Clinton.—[Extract.]

MONTREAL, 27th. [29th.] May, 1782.¹

Your Excellency will now receive a Duplicate of my Letter of the 28th. of April. I send this Messenger to learn certain Intelligence in the Affairs of the rebel Country, and, as he finds it, he will proceed to you with it or forward it, and return immediately. The difficulties of Collecting wheat at different places, and conveying it to different Mills, has been so encreased by Eastwardly Winds that I shall not be able to appear upon the Frontiers as early as is mentioned in my last to you, but I do not look upon this as unfortunate, having since received Letters from our friends in Vermont that gave me greater reason than I have yet had to believe them sincere in their desiring to effect a Revolution, but they say they are too powerfully opposed to make a rapid progress. They however gain influence, and expect in the course of time, to accomplish it, provided we are successful in other quarters. They refer me in proof of their fidelity, and for particular information, to a person of consequence well known to me last war, who they purpose sending to me in three weeks, as they wish from the late discoveries, to avoid writing as much as possible. The Officer I sent to Colonel Beadle [Bedel] is returned without having seen him, although two days within a league of him. He sent him word that the Country was so watched that he could not risk an Interview, but promised every assistance in his power at all times: his fulfilling them no doubt depends upon the general success of the War to which they all naturally look, and wait to determine.

A private Ship from London brings accounts of the total change of the Ministry: this may produce some in the system of the War. I have not received any Letters, but naturally look for these daily: I shall nevertheless proceed, with all possible despatch, to carry into execution the Instructions I have received from Lord George Germain to make the recovery of Vermont to the King's Obedience the primary object of my attention. I kept the last Messenger for the arrival of Instructions from England and the person from Vermont. Two of my most active Messengers for Intelligence were hanged lately at Albany.² F. H.

² One of these was JOSEPH BETTYS of Ballston, N. Y., who performed extraordinary feats of valor as a Whig under Arnold in the battle with Carleton on Lake Champlain. From that time he was an inveterate Tory and a very efficient messenger and spy—"a shrewd, intelligent, daring and bad man." He was detected

Copy of a Letter from C.¹ to His Excellency General Haldimand, the morning of the 16th. of June, 1782.

Sir,—I have to acquaint your Excellency that I had a long conference with . . . last night. He tells me that through the channel of A. [Sherwood] he had to request me in your name to repair to the Shipping on Lake Champlain to hold a personal Conference with His [your] Excellency. But as the Bearer is now going to get out of my House to His Excellency, and would have set out yesterday had not the Intelligence of the arrival of . . . postponed it until to-day. I thought it expedient to wait your Excellency reconsidering the matter after discussing the peculiar situation of both the external and internal policy of this State with the Gentleman who will deliver this to you and shall have, by the time your Excellency has been acquainted with the State of facts now existing, time to bring about a further and more extended connexion in favor of the British Interest which is now working at the General Assembly at Windsor near the Connecticut River.

The last refusal of Congress to admit this State into Union has done more to awaken the Common people to a sense of that Interest and resentment of their Conduct than all which they had done before. By their own account they declare that Vermont does not and shall not belong to their Confederacy: the consequence is that they may fight their own battles. It is Liberty which they say they are after, but [they] will not extend it to Vermont; therefore Vermont does not belong either to the Confederacy or the Controversy but are a neutral Republic. All the Frontier towns are firm with these Gentlemen in the present Administration of Government, and, to speak within bounds, they have a clear Majority of the rank and file in their favour. I am, &c.

N. B.—If it should be your Excellency's pleasure after having conversed with the Gentleman who will deliver these lines that I should wait on your Excellency at any part of Lake Champlain, I will do it, except I should find that it would hazard my life too much. There is a Majority in Congress, and a number of the principal Officers of the Continental Army continually planning against me. I shall do every thing in my power to render this State a British Province.²

QUEBEC, 22nd June [1782.]

I was last night honored with your Letter of the 21st. May, communicating his Majesty's Appointment of you to the Chief Command of the Southern Department, on which occasion I beg leave to congratulate your Excellency, and to offer my sincere wishes for your prosperity and Success. Your Excellency's Letter of the 5th. of April from England with a dispatch from Gen. Haldimand to Sir Henry Clinton in the spring of 1782, and hung at Albany, N. Y., as a traitor and spy. See Sabine's Loyalists of the American Revolution; also Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. II, p. 262.

¹ ETHAN ALLEN, Ira being then at Windsor. It will be seen that, in the following month, Ira Allen, at Quebec, addressed General Haldimand, and his letter was filed "G."

has not appeared, and I much fear it has shared the fate of others in the Bellona, which after a fortunate passage to the South Traverse there struck upon a rock and went down so soon as to leave the Crew only time to escape with their lives. My Letters of the 28th. April, 27th. May, and 4th. June to Sir Henry Clinton will inform you of the ignorance in which I was, and remained until last night, of the Intentions of the present Ministry with regard to the War and this Country, and your Letter has relieved me from a very embarrassing situation, the unavoidable delay mentioned in the Letter here referred to having luckily prevented the intended movement: The necessary preparations are in great forwardness, and I by degrees move the Troops intended for it to the Isle aux Noix to carry on some necessary works which I made a pretext for forwarding the provisions and Stores; should the laudable dispositions and endeavours for peace now existing prove ineffectual and offensive measures be unhappily renewed, those Troops will be ready for any excursions that may be found necessary on the frontiers.¹ The Confidential person mentioned in my Letter of the 27th. of May to be expected from Vermont is not arrived, and being informed that he is in bad health, I have directed my Agent for that Business to send a Message to Allen pressing him to a private interview with him. It is very probable that the respect and general accommodation will induce that people to close with Government, knowing how little they have to expect from Congress and their neighbour provinces if left to their mercy. The 21st. May I received Letters notifying Mr. Ellis's Appointment, and some from Lord George Germain of no moment. These are all that have yet reached me, and I anxiously await the arrival of my Dispatch. I send this by the route which brought yours, and shall send you a Duplicate of it by a small Vessel that will sail for N. York to-morrow. Persuaded it is unnecessary to offer any arguments to induce you to Communicate to me whatever you shall think necessary for the King's Service, I conclude by assuring you of the pleasure a frequent intercourse will always afford me, having the honor to be, with great regard, &c., &c., &c.,

Major General Riedesel has just informed me that the Officers &c of the Brunswick Troops of the Convention are exchanged since last November. I wish they had been sent by Conveyance of the Pandora as they are much wanted particularly the public Officers. Your Excellency will oblige me much by taking an early opportunity of sending them.

Two Mills only remain and [on] the Mohawk river, which entirely support the Rebel Troops in that quarter. The safety of the new posts at Oswego made it necessary to send two parties to endeavour to destroy them. These under two Scouts to intercept the Rebels and Indian Scouts towards Albany and John's Township are all that are employed from this quarter. They have orders not to Commit any hostilities in the district of Vermont. I hope no bad effect will result from these meas-

¹The instructions of the British Secretary of War to Sir Guy Carleton, as commander-in-chief of the British forces in America, were dated April 4 1782. He was instructed to withdraw all the British troops from New York, Charleston, and Savannah, to Halifax; and thus, by disarming, attempt "to captivate the hearts and remove every suspicion of insincerity" from the United States. DUPLICATE. N^o. 2.

QUEBEC, 23rd. June 1782.

Sir,—The Enclosed is a Duplicate of a Letter in Cypher which I yesterday had the honor to despatch for your Excellency overland. The Cypher is very tedious, but the frequent and fatal accidents which have befallen Messengers in the neighbourhood of Albany oblige me to take every precaution, and although your Excellency receiving this is a matter of great uncertainty, I am quite at ease with respect to its falling into the Enemy's hands, as it will be in the possession of an approved Loyalist who will not fail to send it if necessary.

Least the subject of an exchange of prisoners should happen to be agitated upon a general scale, I think it right to acquaint your Excellency that I have rigidly adhered through many applications to the system you adopted of not entering into an exchange until the engagements at the Cedars and others should be faithfully accomplished by the Enemy. I took occasion to exclude the people of Vermont from this resolution, hoping it might have a good effect, and have mutually exchanged many of their people for a fewer number of ours, and to gratify their sanguine request in favor of a young man of that District, but an Officer in the Continental Troops, I permitted him to return with some of their prisoners.

I could have wished that arrivals from England had put it in my power to make this Dispatch more interesting to your Excellency: there is no occurrence here that can, but I expect much from an easterly wind which has blown strong for about 24 hours, and looks as if it would continue. In consequence of your Excellency's Letter, I have written to the several posts in my Command to confine themselves entirely to defensive measures, and hope these orders will arrive time enough to have effect. I have the Honor to be, with great Esteem and regard, Sir, your Excellency's Most Obedient and Most Humble Servant,

FRED^K. HALDIMAND.

Early in July 1782, IRA ALLEN was again sent to Canada, with a Letter from Gov. Chittenden to Gen. Haldimand, requesting the release of two officers belonging to Vermont, who were then prisoners in Canada—a request which was granted.¹ This fact indicates that IRA ALLEN was the author of the following letter:

Copy of a Letter from Mr. G. to His Excellency Gen. Haldimand.

QUEBEC, July 11th. 1782.

Sir,—I beg leave to submit to your Excellency's Consideration the following observations founded on facts, viz: It is reported and generally believed in the Colonies that governor Philip Skene had a Charter for a Govern^t and Comprehending Vermonters with the Tract of Country called the Western Union between the West line of Vermont and Hudson's river, which Charter, if it could be procured, would much facilitate the present Negotiation, as it would enable near 3000 Families, Inhabitants in the Western Union to join Vermont under the sanction of an

Act made in Congress Confirming all Charters and Government Lines as established by order of His Britannic Majesty before the Declaration of Independence. This Body of people will be of greater use in bringing about the wished for revolution, as they are mostly in favor of Government, and if they should unite themselves to Vermont without the Cloak of the aforesaid Charter, or before your Excellency could protect them, they would fall a prey to the resentment of New York, assisted by the Authority of Congress. The Government [Governor] and Council however are so fully convinced of the evil and ambitious designs of Congress, and consequently of the necessity of re-uniting with Great Britain as speedily as possible, that they are determined at all events no obstacles shall prevent their endeavors to accomplish it. I would therefore in behalf of my Employers propose, whether it be advisable for his Excellency to write to Governor Skene for this Charter so much wanted.¹ In the Interim every possible exertion will be made to re-establish such private Union between Vermont and the West Claims, on such a footing that whenever it is found expedient and prudent, they will be able to raise a Considerable Force to act in Conjunction with the Troops your Excellency shall send to protect them, and that nothing may be left undone which can promote the present negotiation, we will, if your Excellency thinks proper, immediately send a number of private Agents into the New York and New England Provinces to engage and send to settle in Vermont as many Loyal Subjects as possible: and likewise prepossess the principal Men of the New England Provinces in favor of Vermont by selling them Tracts of land on its frontiers; and further, if your Excellency thinks it advisable, we will endeavour to raise a regiment or two of able bodied Men from the other Provinces and station them in Vermont under pretence of protecting the Frontiers. In raising these Men great care would be taken to enlist the most loyal, or at least moderate Men, and none should be Officers but such as have been known and tried friends to Government: these to be Commissioned in the name of the Governor of Vermont by your Excellency's Orders, and the advice of such Commissioners as your Excellency shall appoint for that purpose; such regiment to be supported by the King, and to be always ready to act in or out of Vermont as your Excellency shall order.

Thus far I have not deviated from the principles of my Employers, the ruling men of Vermont. But my fear lest something yet interferes to prevent our re-union with Great Britain induces me to propose to your Excellency an immediate recognition of Vermont under Government by a secret Treaty with them to be signed and ratified by Governor Chittenden, General Allen, and the Council, declaring Vermont a British Province, and engaging to use every prudent measure to promote His Majesty's Government until your Excellency can protect them in a public Declaration. Although I am not authorized to make the proposition, yet I am persuaded one of the same purport from your Excellency would be acceptable to the Governor and Legislative authority of Vermont.

¹A suggestion evidently intended to gain time, which Haldimand was as anxious for as was Allen. See Haldimand's letter to Carleton, No. 3, post, p. 475. Allen and others undoubtedly hoped that such a charter had been made out for Skene, for they suggested it. Perhaps they "believed" it, also; but they must also have believed that it was held in abeyance, by either Skene or the British government.

I am sent by Governor Chittenden, General Allen, and their privy Council to negotiate a re-union, and privately authorized to engage in behalf of Vermont that the authority and most of the populace in that state are desirous to become a British State on the Conditions proffered by your Excellency. They have likewise promised to abide by any engagement I shall enter into for them, provided the same be kept a profound secret until the British Government can protect and assist them, and provided they shall not be obliged to go out of Vermont to make War with the other States. They will receive the King's Troops and Garrisons, and will join them to oppose any Troops or Forces that shall invade Vermont to prevent Her re-union with Britain. They have likewise promised never to take Arms again in opposition to British Government, nor to assist Congress on any pretence whatever. I left the Assembly convening for the purpose of procuring a Vote in favor of Government's Neutrality until the former could be obtained and supported. They engaged to send a confidential person, as soon as possible, to the Loyal Blockhouse, with a full account of their proceedings in the Assembly.

I think Vermont contains about 8000 Men of all denominations, including the West Union, and that out of these 2000 may be raised for a Standing Militia. These, with the Assistance of 4000 British Troops would probably be able to defend the frontier as far as the new City¹ in the summer season; but I don't think they could keep their Ground in winter further South than Ticonderoga, except they were strongly Garrisoned at the Half Moon Ferry, where I suppose 6000 men might, with assistance of the Inhabitants, keep a good Fort well supplied, and, if the Vermonters had Money, they could nearly supply such a Garrison with provisions till it could have relief from Ticonderoga, where I think it will always be necessary to keep a British Garrison. The Vermonters would not assist in keeping a Standing Garrison at Albany: because, it is not of their State; nor do I think it would be good policy to take Albany till the re-union can be publicly acknowledged and supported. If the other Colonies should Invade Canada, Vermont will oppose their March through that State as far as possible, but they could not with safety take Arms to stop their progress until supported by the King's Troops, and the re-union with Britain completed: nor could they, consistently with the laws of self-preservation come to the defence of Canada, and leave their own property, friends and families defenceless, and exposed to ruin.

Before I conclude, I would beg to intimate to your Excellency that as soon as good policy will admit, there will be an absolute necessity for some of the King's Money in Vermont to enable us to carry into execution the foregoing plans, or such of them as may meet with your Excellency's approbation, especially should your Excellency expect to procure provision from us to support an Expedition. We must not only have a small supply of Money, but must have notice in time to purchase droves of Cattle from the other States, which, while it helps us, will, in proportion, distress them.

I have the Honor to be, &c. &c.

*James Madison to Edmund Randolph.*¹

July 16, 1782. Messrs. Montgomery and Root returned yesterday from their eastern deputation. * * * Mr. M. adds that the current opinion is, that a vessel arrived at Quebec brings a royal charter for Vermont; that the people there are in much confusion, and many of them disposed to re-unite with New Hampshire. A letter from [to] Mr. Livingston, from Mr. Livermore, [of N. H.] corroborates this good news. It imports that a very important turn had taken place in the temper of the people, between the [Connecticut] river and the ridge, [of the Green mountains,] and they were petitioning New Hampshire to be restored to that state, and that measures would be taken in concert with New York for that purpose.

QUEBEC, 28th. July 1782.

* * * I have Intelligence from Albany that Mr. Washington has very lately revisited that place and the adjacent posts, and has given Orders to fortify Schenectady and Saratoga, and to blockade Albany. The object of this Visit I have not yet learned; probably it is from a jealousy of Vermont, having heard perhaps that all preparations were making in the province for some movement, for so beset are we with domestics and Spies from the Rebels, that every public occurrence is immediately conveyed to them: This brings me to the object of my Letter.

The person said in my last to be expected from Vermont is arrived, and has brought the strongest assurances from Most of the Leading Men of their wishes to re-unite with the Mother Country: these have gained over to their views one half of the populace, and are doing all in their power to influence the remaining part. I have had many Conversations with their Agent, the substance of which is contained in his official Letter to me. A copy of it & of E. A.'s Letter I inclose for your Excellency's perusal, that you may see the real situation in which my Negotiation with the people now stands, and make such use of it as you shall judge fit in your general transactions. I have brought it to a very embarrassing Crisis with regard to myself, having urged the people to a Declaration in favor of Government by a long series of persuasion and the strongest assurances of support and rewards, very recently renewed in a Letter from my Agents, (of which a copy is enclosed,) in consequence of one I received last April from Lord Sackville, desiring that I would appear with a Body of men upon the frontiers, and sparing no expense make the recovery of Vermont to the King's obedience the primary object of my attention.

Uninformed as I am of the intention of Administration (except in general terms that they are Specific, [pacific,]) I can no longer act with Vermont upon any certain grounds until I receive Instructions for that purpose, for which I have written to Lord Shelburne, whose Answer from the lateness of the Season I can only expect through your Excellency; in the meantime I shall amuse the Messenger, who is very pressing for answer to his proposals, in the best way I can and be very careful not to embark in any measure which may tend eventually to embarrass his Majesty's Commissioners in the management of the important affairs with which they are entrusted:³ on the one hand, I shall not deceive these people into measures which it may cease to be my duty to support, nor, on the other, will I, for their sakes, throw any difficulties in the way of reconciliation or peace with the revolted Colonies in general. I will nevertheless, as far as it will not interfere with the measures which may at present be agitating at New York, neglect nothing in my power to retain the people of Vermont in the same favorable disposition in which they are at present, convinced that the very best consequences must result to the safety of this province from an union with that people in case it should become the seat of War, an event which, from concurring circumstances, I think is not improbable. I shall therefore be extremely averse, from everything which might diminish their confidence in me, or destroy their hopes from the royal Clemency and protection, provided affairs should not take a favorable turn between the King's Commissioners and the Congress.

I should have done myself this pleasure some days ago, but wishing to be still more explicit, I have waited in expectation of another Messenger from Vermont, who is to bring the proceedings of the Governor's Council (composed of friends to Government, two excepted,) convened when the last came away, but impatient to communicate to you the Affair thus far and be honored with your Excellency's sentiments thereon, I send a most careful and intelligent man with an Officer returning to Halifax. He will from thence forward by a first vessel to New York. * * *

I have the Honor to be, Sir, your Most Obedient and Most Humble Servant,

FRED^K: HALDIMAND.

His Excellency Sir Guy Carleton.

(Gen. Haldimand to Gov. Chittenden.²

AUGUST 8, 1782.

You may rest assured that I shall give such orders, as will effectually prevent hostilities of any kind being exercised in the district of Vermont, until such times as a breach on your part, or some general event, may make the contrary my duty. And you have my authority to promulgate, in such manner as you shall think fit, this my intention, to the people of the said district, that they may, without any apprehension, continue to encourage and promote the settlement and cultivation of that new country, to the interest and happiness of themselves and their posterity.³

QUEBEC, 28th Augst. 1782.

Sir,—The return of my Messenger on the 18th. Instant with your Excellency's Dispatches of the 22nd. of July relieved me from much anxiety, having concluded from his long absence that he had fallen into the Enemy's hands.

³ To those who were not then apprised of the policy of England, such assurances as these would appear to be very gracious; but in fact Sir Guy Carleton had instructions to address America in the same terms, and Gen. Haldimand simply conformed to that policy in dealing with Vermont; and moreover it was a part of his own policy in respect to Vermont.—See Life and Writings of Washington, Vol. VIII, p. 297, note.

My Letters of the 28th Ultimo will fully communicate to your Excellency my Situation with the people of Vermont and the anxious suspense I must remain in until I can obtain Instructions from home, or intelligence from you to direct my Conduct with them. I sanguinely expected that pleasure by the last Messenger, and am concerned to find that nothing of moment had occurred before his departure, and to perceive by your Excellency's Letter, and the Messenger's observations in his way through that Country, that the Enemy seem rather disposed to continue the War than to listen to terms of accommodation. He says that since Mr. Washington's late Tour the friends of Government from Albany to Fishkill have been forced to take the Oath of allegiance to the States or to abandon their Settlements in so much that six Houses where he formerly was received were vacated or shut against him; that the populace seemed more awed than ever by Washington and that he has issued an Order to put all persons to death upon the Spot who refuse taking Arms instantly when called upon. This makes the Communication between us more uncertain and difficult, and has induced me to send this Letter by His Majesty's Ship Pandora, to Spanish River, (where she goes to bring up some Coal Ships), from thence the Messenger will proceed to Halifax, and so to you. * * *

I have the Honor to be with great Esteem and respect, sir, your Most Obedient and Most Humble Serv^t.

[N^o. 5.] DUPLICATE.

QUEBEC, September 8th. 1782.

Sir,—Since my Letter of the 28th of July upon the Affairs of Vermont, a Gentleman of influence and Loyalty has arrived from thence and has delivered the sentiments of the most respectable Men and major part of the people in the following sense: That, sensible of the Indulgence I had shown in forbearing to ravage their Country, they sincerely wish a Continuance of Clemency: that they will readily agree to any measure I should recommend of the re-union, if it can be adopted so as not to expose them to the rage of the Colonies, the said re-union to be ratified in the most solemn and secret manner, and under cloak of neutrality or suspension of hostilities—to be made public by me. This they think would draw thousands of their Country. My last so fully expressed my embarrassed situation with this people, that it is not necessary to add anything at present but to repeat my anxiety to hear from your Excellency that I may regulate my conduct with them upon the principles mentioned in my last. I have wrote by this Messenger to the Governor and Allen, assuring them of protection and support from the King's Government while they continue in their present sentiments, and that every act of hostility shall be cautiously avoided on my part until infringed on theirs, or that some public event shall make the Contrary my duty, and I have left the Governor to promulgate this declaration or not, as he shall Judge fit.¹

I am anxious for the safety of my Messenger Davis.

¹ It has been seen that the Governor promulgated only a part of this letter, to wit, that there should be no hostility. Gov. Chittenden was not prepared to announce the offered protection of the British Government to Vermont.—See ante, p. 476.

No. 7.

QUEBEC, Sep. 8th. 1782.

Sir, — I have just been honored with your Excellency's Letter of the 3rd. of August forwarded by 19—3 48—22, under Cover of one from him Communicating Information and proposals he had made to New York through ———, and transmitting a Copy of a Letter from that Gentleman, of which the following is a Copy:

“I received you Letter of the 25th. of July: it was very satisfactory, and your designs are approved by the Company as you will be informed by . . . who both will say more than I can write by this opportunity. Orders now go for the Supplies you want, and when you forward the Orders, write fully, as you did to me, that they may be adequate to your intentions, for they can come to you more easily and certainly from that quarter than from hence.”

Mr. . . . strongly recommends providing a large sum of Money, and opening a free trade from this Province with Vermont for purposes I need not enter upon as they are known to your Excellency. The impropriety of my complying with either unauthorized, will appear from the following Extract of a Letter from Lord Shelburne, strengthened by your Excellency's Information that we are actually in treaty at Paris:

“But in this, and many other, cases, your own prudence will prove a better Instruction than any I could give, and will enable you to seize advantages which may offer by open and honorable dealings, avoiding the least appearance of insidiousness.”

Your Excellency never having once touched upon the subject of Mr. . . . 's requisitions in a letter accompanying them, and said to contain orders for that purpose, (which, if you had approved, you surely would have mentioned, knowing my embarrassment, and regard for Vermont affairs,) makes me still more cautious, as Mr. . . . says a Gentleman will shortly come into this Province with fuller Information, and to transact Business, (which he doubts not he will obtain leave to do.) It is possible he may be the Bearer of the Order mentioned; but as accident may delay his arrival, and that no time shall be lost, if it is your Excellency's wish to adopt Mr. . . . 's plan, and that I may execute it as proposed by him, I send off this Messenger to request that you will be pleased to signify to me the Commissioners' authority for so doing,¹ and to what extent the requisitions are to be complied with.

Respecting the Free Trade with Vermont, it is necessary I should remark to your Excellency that at the very time Mr. . . . 's proposals were made, 5—19 57—1 strongly expressed their disapprobation of Trade being opened from a just apprehension that it would at once discover their inclinations to a re-union, and draw upon them the resentment of Congress before they could be in a situation to oppose it. He nevertheless approved the measure when ripe for execution.

I shall continue to supply . . . with Money to defray the expence of procuring and forwarding Intelligence to New York, and this Province.

I have the Honor to be, with great respect and regard, your Excellency's Most Obedient and Most Humble Servant,

Last Letter of Gen. Haldimand to Vermont.¹

Although the preliminary articles of the treaty for peace between Great Britain and the United States had been signed in November 1782, the cessation of hostilities was not proclaimed by Washington until April 19, 1783, so the following was written before news of peace had been received in Canada, though evidently expected. This letter was probably addressed by Matthews or Sherwood, by direction of Gen. Haldimand, to Ira Allen, and was dated March 25 1783.

I am commanded to acquaint you, that actuated from the beginning, by a sincere desire of serving you, and your people, as well as of promoting the royal cause, by re-uniting you with the mother country, his Excellency never lost an opportunity of representing every circumstance that could be advanced in your favour, to the King's Ministers, in the hope of accomplishing a reconciliation. His Excellency will continue by such representations, to do all in his power to serve you, but what effect it may have, at this late period, is very uncertain. While his Excellency sincerely regrets the happy moment, which it is much to be feared, cannot be recalled, of restoring to you the blessings of the British Government, and views with concern the fatal consequences approaching, which he has so long, and so frequently predicted, from your procrastination, he derives some satisfaction from a consciousness of not having omitted a circumstance, which could tend to your persuasion, and adoption of his desired purpose. In the present uncertain state of affairs, uninformed as his Excellency is, of what is doing, or perhaps done, in a general accommodation, he does not think fit, until the result shall be known, to give any opinion, which may influence you, perhaps, to the prejudice of your interests, or that might interfere with the views of Government. If the report now prevailing has any foundation, a very short time will determine the fate of Vermont. Should any thing favourable present, you may still depend on his Excellency's utmost endeavours, for your salvation.

IRA ALLEN thus commented on this closing letter of the Haldimand correspondence with Vermont:²

The preceding letter, under the circumstances it was written, shows the generous conduct of General Haldimand, in the course of these negotiations, and a friendly liberality in cautioning the people of Vermont to be on their guard for new events. The facts are, that these negotiations, on the part of Vermont, were from necessity, as has been already shown; on the part of the British, they were to carry into effect the object of the war; from different motives those measures were carried on in such ways as the parties could agree for their mutual interest, on the strictest principles of honor; and when peace was proclaimed, impressions of friendship remained between the parties, as several interviews between General Haldimand and Colonel Ira Allen afterwards fully evinced.

OPINIONS OF THE HALDIMAND CORRESPONDENCE.¹

SAMUEL WILLIAMS, LL. D., is the earliest Vermont author, not a party to the negotiation, whose opinion is preserved. A contemporary with most, if not all, who were in the secret of the negotiation, he unquestionably expressed their representation of the case, and that generally believed in Vermont at that time. He wrote thus:

On the part of the British, it consisted of constant attempts and endeavors to persuade the leading men of Vermont to renounce their allegiance to the states of America, and become a British province. On the part of the gentlemen of Vermont, the correspondence consisted of evasive, ambiguous, general answers and proposals; calculated not to destroy the British hopes of seduction, but carefully avoiding any engagements or measures that could be construed to be an act of the government; and it had for its object, a cessation of hostilities, at a time when the state of Vermont, deserted by the continent, and unable to defend herself, lay at the mercy of the enemy in Canada.

Eight persons only in Vermont were in the secret of this correspondence. Each of them were known to be among the most confirmed friends to the American cause. They had avowed their sentiments and embraced the cause of their country, from the beginning of the American war. They had suffered severely, often borne arms, and done every thing in their power, to defend the independence of the states; and through the whole of this correspondence, they gave the most decisive proofs that they could not be bought or bribed, by any offer of wealth or honor.

It may be doubted how far such a measure was justifiable, in that, or in any other state of things. On the one hand, it may be said, when the safety of all America was in question, and in much danger, nothing ought to have been done to encourage the enemy, that they should be able to divide, and thus subdue the continent. On the other hand it may be urged, that when thirty thousand people were deserted by the Congress, and become the objects of the intrigues and policy of the adjacent states, it was as justifiable and necessary for them, to provide for their safety, as it was for the rest of the continent. If there was no other alternative for the people of Vermont, than to be divided, subdued, and delivered over to the power of their ancient enemies, their leaders will not be blamed for taking necessary and adequate measures to prevent such an evil. In such a situation, it was scarcely possible for the people of Vermont to believe that they could be under any moral obligation to sacrifice themselves, to procure independence for those, who, by the act of their representatives, had rejected them from their confederation.

But whatever may be thought respecting the propriety of such policy, the event shewed that the gentlemen of Vermont had formed a sound judgment with regard to the effect. Flattered with the prospect, that they should draw off a considerable part of the continent, to their government and measures, the British carefully avoided all hostilities against Vermont, restored her prisoners, forbade their troops to enter or attack her territory, and considered the people rather in the light of friends than enemies.² Thus while the British generals were fondly imagining that they were deceiving, corrupting and seducing the people of Vermont, by their superior arts, address and intrigues, the wiser policy of eight honest farmers, in the most uncultivated part of America, disarmed their northern troops, kept them quiet and inoffensive through three campaigns, assisted in subduing Cornwallis, protected the northern frontiers, and finally saved a state.¹

The following is important, as indicating the opinion of one of the most distinguished men of New York at that day. Mr. LIVINGSTON was a delegate in the Continental Congress of 1777, and a member of the committee for draughting the Declaration of American Independence. He was a delegate also from 1779 to 1781, and at the date of this letter was Secretary for Foreign Affairs, in which capacity the letter was written to Dr. Franklin, who was then American Minister to France. The letter was diplomatic, of course, aimed to defeat any advantage Great Britain might hope to gain by representing that Vermont was about to return to her allegiance; but doubtless Mr. Livingston gave his own opinion of the case, derived from explanations made to the Continental Government.

Robert R. Livingston to Dr. Franklin.—[Extract.]

PHILADELPHIA, 13th Feb'y, 1782.

We have not a word of intelligence to communicate, unless it be some little disturbances in the country, which has been distinguished by the names of N. H. Grants and Vermont; and which it may be proper to mention to you, since the facility with which the British deceive themselves, and the address with which they deceive others, may render it a matter of moment in Europe, though in fact it is none in America. The bulk of the people of that country are "New England Presbyterian Whigs." Some of those in the possession of the powers of government have more address than principle. Finding themselves exposed to inroads from Canada, they have tampered with that government, and pretended to be willing to form a treaty of neutrality with them during the war, and to return to the obedience of Britain on a peace. This has had the effect they intended, and in some measure defeated an expedition which the enemy made last year, and retained their main body in inaction at Ticonderoga, while the parties they sent to the westward were beaten and dispersed by our militia. The secret has been discovered, is denounced by the people, and such measures are now taken, that by the time the King of Great Britain and his Council (before decidedly against them. Why, then, did they persist in attempting to secure, by negotiation with the minority, what they could easily have won by force? The answer is found in the fact that the British Cabinet kept their Generals under instructions, on the conciliatory policy of 1778-9, until, by the capture of Cornwallis, their military power in America had been broken. Force was contemplated against Vermont in April 1782, but then it was too late. On the 4th of that month the British Cabinet had directed a suspension of hostilities, and they were not renewed.—See ante, pp. 467, 471.

whom the propositions now lie) have formed a plan in consequence of them, they will be made the means of drawing them into new difficulties. —Franklin's Writings, Vol. IX, p. 162; SPARKS'S Diplomatic Correspondence, Vol. III, p. 300.

Of all who have declared opinions on this subject, JARED SPARKS was best able to make an accurate judgment. He procured The Haldimand Papers, which are given in this volume; he edited the Revolutionary Correspondence of Washington, and thus had access to all papers, then existing, touching the suspected treachery of Ethan Allen, the Haldimand correspondence, and whatever else concerning Vermont was deemed of sufficient interest or importance to receive the attention of Washington. Mr. Sparks was himself interested in the matter; he had more than one occasion to advert to it in editing the Washington correspondence; and finally, in his Life of Ethan Allen,¹ he summed up the results of his investigation. Aside from the unpublished legislative journals of Vermont, which are herein given to the public so far as they touch this question, Mr. Sparks had all the knowledge best fitting him to form a just opinion, and his unblemished character is an ample guaranty that he would publish nothing that was not, in his judgment, just and true. The following is his summary of the leading facts, with his opinion of the negotiation and the Vermont negotiators:²

It was at this period, [1780,] that the British generals in America began to meditate the scheme of bringing Vermont into a union with Canada, by taking advantage of the disputes, which had continued so long and waxed so warm, that it was supposed Vermont had become alienated from Congress and the opposing States, and would be ready to accept tempting overtures from the British. This idea received encouragement from the circumstance, that Congress afforded but a slender defence to the frontiers of Vermont, although the governor of Canada was in a condition to make a descent with a force sufficient to bear down any opposition that could be interposed by the whole strength of the State. The first step was to bring over some of the leaders; and as Ethan Allen was the most conspicuous of these, and also the military chieftain, the attempt was made upon him. That his views might be ascertained on this subject, the following letter was written to him by Beverly Robinson, colonel of a regiment of loyal Americans, or, in other words, refugees adhering to the British cause and embodied in the British army. [For letter see ante, p. 397.]

This letter, artful and plausible as it was, made no impression upon the patriotism of Ethan Allen. Although written in February³ it was not received till July. He immediately sent back the messenger, and in confidence communicated the letter to the governor and a few other friends, who all agreed with him, that it was best to pass it over in silence. That they might not be outdone, however, in the allowable stratagems of war, they bethought themselves to turn to a profitable purpose this advance on the part of the enemy. The British were expected soon to appear on Lake Champlain in great force, and it was a thing of essential importance in the present difficult position of Vermont, to ward off the impending danger. Several prisoners from this State were now in Canada, and it was advised that the governor should write to the commander in Canada, proposing a cartel for an exchange. A letter was accordingly dispatched with a flag. The object was to produce delay, and by a finesse to lead the enemy to pursue their ideas of drawing Vermont over to their interest. While this should be fostered, it was not probable they would attack the people, whom they wished to conciliate.

No answer was returned, till the enemy's fleet was seen coming up the Lake in a formidable attitude, spreading an alarm far and wide, and apparently threatening an immediate invasion. Many persons took their arms and marched to the frontier. But no hostile acts were committed. The commander on board the fleet sent a flag to General Allen, with a letter to the governor of Vermont, assenting on the part of General Haldimand, commander-in-chief of the British army in Canada, to the proposal for an exchange of prisoners, and offering a truce with Vermont till the cartel should be arranged.

This preliminary negotiation of a truce was conducted by General Allen. In defining the extent of territory, which the truce should cover, he included all the settlements as far west as the Hudson River. To this extension the British officer objected, as not being within the bounds of Vermont. Such an arrangement would, moreover, prevent the expedition up the Lake from acquiring honor, or attaining any ostensible object; whereas, if not hampered with the truce, it might act with some effect on the frontiers of New York. This was a strong motive for insisting, that the truce should be confined strictly within the limits of Vermont, but as General Allen was unyielding, the officer gave way, and it was definitely settled as reaching to Hudson's River. This was a dictate of sound policy, as appeared in the subsequent history of Vermont. It had a conciliatory effect upon the inhabitants of that part of New York included in the truce. Their antipathy was disarmed, and at one time they even courted a union with Vermont.

As this was a secret arrangement, and not then made known publicly, the people were surprised to see the fleet retreating down the Lake, and the military disbanded and going home. Commissioners were appointed by the governor of Vermont to meet others from Canada, and settle the terms of a cartel. The season was so far advanced, however, that they were obstructed in their voyage across the Lake by the ice, and obliged to return. Nothing was done during the winter. The advantage thus far gained by Vermont was, that a campaign of the enemy on her borders had been rendered ineffectual. As a compensation, the British supposed they had made good progress in detaching from Congress the affections of a discontented province, and winning them over to the King.

As these transactions were well known to the enemy in New York, Colonel Robinson was concerned not to have received an answer to his letter. Thinking it might have miscarried, although he had sent a duplicate and triplicate, or assuming such supposition as a pretence for writing again, he dispatched a second letter to Ethan Allen, dated February 2d, 1781. In this was enclosed a fourth copy of the first, and it contained the following paragraph :

"The frequent accounts we have had for three months past, from your part of the country, confirms me in the opinion I had of your inclination to join the King's cause, and assist in restoring America to her former peaceable and happy constitution. This induces me to make another trial in sending this to you, especially as I can now write with more authority, and assure you that you may obtain the terms mentioned in the above letter, provided you and the people of Vermont

“take an active part with us. I beg to have an answer to this as soon as possible, and that you will, if it is your intention, point out some method of carrying on a correspondence for the future; also in what manner you can be most serviceable to government, either by acting with the northern army, or to meet and join an army from hence. I should be glad if you would give me every information, that may be useful to the Commander-in-chief here.”¹

Shortly after receiving this second epistle, General Allen sent them both to the Continental Congress, accompanied by one of his own, in which he expressed in very emphatic language his sentiments in regard to the interests of Vermont, and the unjustifiable attempts of the adjoining States to abridge her rights and even destroy her existence. Having explained the mode in which the letters came into his hands, and mentioned his having shown the first to Governor Chittenden and other gentlemen, he proceeds as follows :

“The result, after mature deliberation, and considering the extreme circumstances of the State, was, to take no further notice of the matter. The reasons for such a procedure are very obvious to the people of this State, when they consider that Congress have previously claimed an exclusive right of arbitrating on the existence of Vermont, as a separate government; New York, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts Bay at the same time claiming this territory, either in whole or in part, and exerting their influence to make schisms among her citizens, thereby, in a considerable degree weakening this government, and exposing its inhabitants to the incursion of the British troops, and their savage allies from the province of Quebec. It seems those governments, regardless of Vermont’s contiguous situation to Canada, do not consider that their northern frontiers have been secured by her, nor the merit of this State in a long and hazardous war; but have flattered themselves with the expectation, that this State could not fail (with their help) to be desolated by a foreign enemy, and that their exorbitant claims and avaricious designs may at some future period take place in this district of country.

“I am confident that Congress will not dispute my sincere attachment to the cause of my country, though I do not hesitate to say, I am fully grounded in opinion, that Vermont has an indubitable right to agree on terms of a cessation of hostilities with Great Britain, provided the United States persist in rejecting her application for a union with them; for Vermont, of all people, would be the most miserable, were she obliged to defend the independence of the united claiming States, and they, at the same time, at full liberty to overturn and ruin the independence of Vermont. I am persuaded, when Congress consider the circumstances of this State, they will be the more surprised, that I have transmitted to them the enclosed letters, than that I have kept them in custody so long; for I am as resolutely determined to defend the independence of Vermont, as Congress are that of the United States; and rather than fail, I will retire with hardy Green Mountain Boys into the desolate caverns of the mountains, and wage war with human nature at large.”²

The concluding words of this paragraph may be considered as characteristic of the writer; but the sentiments expressed in the letter, respecting the allegiance due from Vermont to the United States, were unquestionably entertained by all the principal men of that State. Independence was their first and determined purpose; and while they were neglected by Congress, and, like another Poland, threatened with a triple partition between the adjoining States, they felt at liberty to pursue any course, that would secure their safety, and conduct them towards their ultimate object. It was on this principle, that they encouraged advances to be made by the British, and not that they ever had the remotest intention of deserting the cause of their country, or submitting in any manner to the jurisdiction of the English government.

While the war continued, however, these negotiations with the enemy were carried on with much address, and so successfully as to prevent any further hostilities from Canada. A correspondence was kept up, which was known only to a few persons, and was chiefly managed by Ethan Allen and his brother, Ira Allen. Messengers came to them secretly with letters, and waited in concealment till consultations were held, and answers prepared, with which they returned to Canada. This was a slow process, but it served to amuse the enemy, and keep their hopes alive. While this could be done, Vermont was safe from attack, and had only to apprehend the artifices of those, who were striving by the weapons of the civil power to annihilate her freedom.

The English ministry had at one time sanguine expectations from the prospect of affairs in this quarter. I have seen two letters from Lord George Germaine to Sir Henry Clinton, one written in February and the other in June, 1781,¹ wherein the minister congratulates the commander-in-chief on the happy return of the people of Vermont to their allegiance, and represents it as an important event. He adds, that, should Washington and the French meditate an irruption into Canada, they would find in Vermont an insurmountable barrier to their attempts; and also that General Haldimand would undoubtedly send a body of troops to act in conjunction with the people, secure the avenues through the country, and, when the season should admit, take possession of the upper parts of the Hudson and Connecticut Rivers, and cut off the communication between Albany and the Mohawk country. Again he observes, that, should the people of Vermont be menaced by a detachment from Washington's army, General Haldimand would have forces ready to throw in among them, by which they would be relieved from any fears of the resentment of Congress, and see it to be their wisest and safest course to return to their loyalty. Such were the vagaries of Lord George Germaine in his office at Whitehall, even within a few months of the capitulation at Yorktown. And in truth they present a very just specimen of the strange reveries, surprising ignorance, or wilful blindness of that minister, in regard to American affairs, during the whole war.²

APPENDIX K.

PROTEST OF ADHERENTS TO NEW YORK AGAINST VERMONT IN 1778, AND ORIGIN OF THE CHARLESTOWN CONVENTION OF JAN. 16 1781.

Jan. 28 1778, a few weeks preceding the organization of the government of Vermont, the adherents to New York in Cumberland county assembled at Brattleborough and prepared a petition to the Assembly of New York, informing that body of the adoption of the constitution of Vermont and the determination to enforce its authority against New York, and praying the latter to defend the petitioners. In response, Feb. 21 1778, the Legislature of New York adopted resolutions proposing terms of accommodation with the inhabitants who held land under New Hampshire grants, which proposals were embodied in a proclamation issued by Gov. Clinton, Feb. 23 1778. This proclamation closed with the following pledge to the adherents to New York, and threat to the friends of the Vermont government:

The several branches of the Legislature of the State of New York will concur in the necessary measures for protecting the loyal inhabitants of this State, residing in the counties of Albany, Charlotte, Cumberland, and Gloucester, [embracing Vermont,] in their persons and estates, and for compelling all persons, residing within this State, and refusing obedience to the government and Legislature thereof, to yield that obedience and allegiance, which, by law and of right, they owe to this State.¹

Emboldened by this pledge of support, the adherents of New York in Brattleborough at once instituted measures for a formal protest against the organization of the Vermont government, as follows:

BRATTLEBOROUGH March ye 4th. 1778.

Gentlemen,—At the annual meeting of this town held yesterday it was unanimously agreed to send a Protest to the Assembly of the pretended State of Vermont against disavowing their allegiance to New York—A step in their opinion tending to disunite the friends of America in the present important contest with Great Britain. The town was of opinion that it would add great weight to the protest if the Towns and Districts in this County who join with us in thinking the manner and time of erecting this part of America into a new State is of bad consequence would unite in the Protest. They thereupon chose us the subscribers a Committee to confer with Committees from such Towns in this County as are inclinable to bear public Testimony against unjustifiable proceedings of a multitude.

We therefore call upon you in the most earnest manner as you value the blessings of good order and Just Government to unite with us in concerting and executing such measures as will be most efficacious for procuring those blessings and frustrating the Designs of those who are opposed to them: And we would request you to appoint a Committee to confer with us and such others as shall meet us at the house of Cap^t Sergeants of this Town on the 18 instant at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, authorizing them to agree to such measures as the majority of the Committees then convened shall think most expedient.

We are Gentlemen with great respect

P. S. If a Majority are disinclined to choose a Committee for the purposes above mentioned we think it most advisable for as many as are willing to elect the Committee and for them to come able to ascertain the number of persons who chose them.¹

Accordingly a Convention met at Brattleborough on the day named, and appointed a committee to draft a protest to be presented to the legislature of Vermont, and a letter to Gov. Clinton. This Convention adjourned to the same place on the 15th of April, when representatives of Guilford, Brattleborough, Putney, Newfane, Hinsdale, [Vernon,] and Rockingham attended. The protest was then adopted by this Convention, which had the approval of adherents to New York in Westminster and Weathersfield also. B. H. HALL gave the substance of this document thus:

It was in the form of an address, and was directed "To the gentlemen convened at Windsor, under the style of the General Assembly of the state of Vermont." In it the objections to the formation of a new state were strongly put, and old arguments in a regenerated form, and new ones also, were urged in opposition to the plans of the patrons and citizens of Vermont. In view of the principles adduced, the protesters announced their determination in these words:—

"We conceive that endeavoring at present to establish a separate state here, is not only a violation of the Continental Union, but is imprudent, and to the last degree impolitic and dangerous, tending in the “present important crisis to weaken the authority of the Continental Congress, disunite the friends of America, and stimulate a spirit of separation and sedition which may end in the ruin of the United States; and we esteem it not only our duty, but the duty of all who are friends to the liberty of America, to bear open testimony against it. Therefore, on behalf of ourselves and those who delegated us for that purpose, we publicly declare that as we have not in any way assisted in, or consented to, the forming of a separate and independent government, we shall not consider ourselves bound by any acts of the Legislature thereof, but shall, as in duty bound, continue to yield our allegiance to the state of New York, until otherwise directed by the Honorable the Continental Congress. And we do hereby solemnly protest against the right of any persons to govern us and the other inhabitants of the New Hampshire Grants, except that of the Continental Congress and the Legislature of New York, and against all measures which shall be used to enforce the pretended rights of any other person or body of men, and against all the bad consequences which may arise from attempting at present to establish an independent government in the ‘Grants’ before mentioned.”¹

The opposition at that period culminated in the enforcement of the authority of Vermont by ETHAN ALLEN in May 1779.—See Vol. I, pp. 298-9, 442-3, and 518-520.

ORIGIN OF THE CHARLESTOWN CONVENTION OF JAN. 16, 1781.

In Convention of Committees from several Towns in the County of Cumberland 31st. October 1780.

Resolved, That Luke Knoulton Esq^r. Hilckiah Grout Esq^r. Oliver Lovell Esq^r. Col^o. John Sergeants, Micah Townsend Esq^r. Major Jonathan Hunt Simon Stevens Esq^r. Charles Phelps Esq^r. Mr. Benjamin Henry, James Clay Esq^r. Major Elkanah Day, Mr. Thomas Cutler and Mr. Barzillai Rice be and hereby (are) nominated and appointed a Committee to meet such Persons as shall be authorized for the Purpose by a Convention or Committee of Gloucester County on the West and Grafton County on the East side of Connecticut River to devise and carry into Execution such Measures as they shall deem best calculated to unite in one Political Body all the Inhabitants from Mason’s Grant on the East, to the Height of Land on the West side of said River. And that a Majority of the Persons above named or of such of them as shall meet at Charlestown on Wednesday the Eighth day of November next be empowered to act in the Premises.

By order,

MATTHEW CUSHING.¹

NOTE BY HON. J. H. PHELPS.—The foregoing paper, except the signature, is in the hand writing of MICAH TOWNSEND.

ADDITIONS OF AND CORRECTIONS OF VOLS. I. AND II.

COVENANT, COMPACT, AND RESOLUTIONS,

ADOPTED BY A CONVENTION OF THE REPRESENTATIVES OF THE SETTLERS ON THE NEW HAMPSHIRE GRANTS WEST
OF THE GREEN MOUNTAINS—IN 1775.

It is probable that the following document is now re-printed for the first time since the original publication in 1775. It was found in what will doubtless be known hereafter as the Haswell Papers, comprising pamphlets, newspapers, and books belonging to the late NATHAN B. HASWELL of Burlington,¹ which have been purchased by the State Librarian since the first volume of the Council Records was printed; otherwise this document would have been given in that volume, as the first known act of a Convention in the New Hampshire Grants having, in a degree, the form and authority of an independent civil government.

The place and date of the meeting of the Convention and the names of the town representatives who signed the "Covenant and Compact" are not given. Thus it may fairly be asked: was this document simply a form prepared, printed, and circulated for the consideration of the people, and never adopted? or, was it actually adopted? The fact that blank spaces were left, as above stated, strongly favors the theory that the document was printed previous to its formal adoption; and it is obvious that this might have been done by a committee appointed by a Convention and instructed to report at an adjourned session. That such a document was actually adopted by a Convention holden at Manchester, is inferred from a statement by IRA ALLEN, in his history of Vermont, in terms which do not apply to any other known document but this. After referring to the out-lawry act of New York, of March 9 1774; to a "meeting of the committees of the several towns on the west side of the Green Mountain," called in consequence thereof, "to convene in Manchester, April 1774;" and to the answer of Ethan Allen and others to the New York act,—IRA ALLEN added these words:

At this Convention, a printed constitution, or more properly rules for the future government of the district of the grants were published, as a general defence became necessary to guard against the usurpations of the colony of New York.²

This language favors the theory above suggested.

¹The most valuable formerly belonged to ANTHONY HASWELL of Bennington.—See ante, p. 13.

²*Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections*, Vol. I, p. 359.

On referring to the "Covenant" in the following document, it will be seen that it embraces such "equal Rules, Injunctions, Constitution and Officers as are judged necessary and expedient, for the best Good of the Inhabitants of this District aforesaid."

It is to be observed, however, that ALLEN refers this "constitution" or "rules" to a convention holden at Manchester in April 1774, while the copy herewith given refers to events which occurred at later dates: so either he did not refer to this document, or he mistook the date. The last is most probably the case, for the fact is, that the pamphlet, which begins with the "Compact" in question, closes with the answer to the out-lawry act, that answer bearing date April 26 1774. Even if Allen wrote with a copy of this pamphlet before him, he would naturally take the date with which it closes, inasmuch as there is none to the "Compact" with which it begins; while if he wrote from memory, more than twenty years after the event, his statement as to the date is by no means conclusive. The answer to the out-lawry act was printed in 1774. The copy attached to the document in question bears the imprint of 1775,—thus showing that the answer was reprinted with the New York act as a justification for the "compact" made in 1775.

It has already been stated that this document could not have been adopted in April 1774. The reasons are the following:

1. The year is stated to have been "the fifteenth year of his Majesty's Reign." That year began Oct. 25 1774, and ended with Oct. 24 1775.

2. The document refers to a visit by two New York gentlemen, "in the Month of September 1774."

3. It also refers to the removal of the New York sheriff Lansingh of Charlotte county, and the appointment of sheriff Parker. Jonathan Parker succeeded Philip P. Lansingh November 12 1774.¹

In fixing the date of the Convention, it is evident that it must be subsequent to Nov. 12 1774. Now noting the fact that the "Compact" was contingent upon the pleasure of the king, it is safe to say that it must have been adopted previous to the capture of Ticonderoga and Crown Point in May 1775, as at that time the leading Green Mountain Boys had drawn the sword against the king. Looking now for some known Convention of towns west of the Green Mountains, which met between November 1774 and May 1775, one only is to be found, to wit:

On January 31, 1775, a convention was holden at Manchester, in which the following towns were represented, viz:

Bennington, Shaftsbury, Arlington, Sunderland, Manchester, Dorset, Rupert, Pawlet, Wells, Poultney, Castleton, Danby, Tinmouth, Clarendon, Rutland, Pittsford, Neshobe, [Brandon,] Shoreham, Bridport, Addison, Panton, Ferrisburgh, Colchester, Wallingford, and Georgia—twenty-five in number.²

² Vermont Historical Society Collections, Vol. I, p. 8.

Gov. HALL stated that the only information in regard to this Convention, that had been found up to 1870, was derived from a petition of Peleg Sunderland to the General Assembly, and report thereon, in 1787. It can hardly be doubted that in the following document we now have every thing of public importance that was done at that Convention. The time meets every statement in the document, and every contingency in the history of the State at the period. Comparing the above list of towns represented in the Convention of January 31 1775, with the description in the following document of the district represented, the two will be found to agree. In fact, no other Convention answers so well to the description, as in no other was the district represented which is described as "the Lands contiguous to Lake Champlain, which large Tract of Land to the Forty-Fifth Degree of Northern Latitude, is comprehended in those Townships." The town of Georgia represented the section north of Colchester in that Convention, and in no other. Sunderland stated in his petition that his claim was allowed Feb. 3 1775, which shows that the Convention was in session at least four days;¹ and this proves that the business was of more than usual importance. The document is not a journal of all the proceedings of the Convention, but a proclamation to the public of very important resolutions and orders, which for a time had all the force of laws with the people of western Vermont. Probably ETHAN ALLEN was its author.

The acquisition of the Haswell Papers by HIRAM A. HUSE, Esq., the State Librarian, was made specially on account of files of the Bennington and Windsor newspapers from their origin in 1783, which are exceedingly valuable as repositories of the early history of the State; but the most rare document is the following "Covenant, Compact, and Resolutions." Probably it is the only copy in existence.

THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE CONVENTION OF THE NEW HAMPSHIRE SETTLERS; CONTAINING their COVENANT, COMPACT, and RESOLUTIONS; and also Twelve Acts of OUTLAWRY, Passed by the Legislature of the Province of NEW YORK, against those Settlers, and their ANSWER to the same. HARTFORD: [Conn.] Printed by EBENEZER WATSON, near the Great-Bridge. 1775.

At a General Convention, held at [Manchester] by the Representatives of the Inhabitants of the several Townships granted by the Government of New-Hampshire, and situate to the Westward of the Range of ¹*Vermont State Papers*, Mss., Petitions, Vol. 17, p. 304. The report of the committee on this petition states that the Convention met on the 31st of January 1775, and also that the committee had a record of its proceedings.

Green Mountains, and Northerly from the Province of the Massachusetts-Bay, and on the Rivers Otter Creek, and Onion River, and the Lands contiguous to Lake Champlain, which large Tract of Land to the Forty-Fifth Degree of Northern Latitude, is comprehended in those Townships.

THIS Convention taking into their most serious Consideration the several progressive Facts and Circumstances which have occurred in the Controversy, which hath for many years subsisted between the New-Hampshire Settlers that are seated on those Townships, and the Government of New-York, proceed to a short Narration thereof.

WHEREAS the governmental Authority of the Province of New-York, ever since his Majesty extended their Jurisdiction to the West Banks of Connecticut River, on the East, and to Latitude Forty-Five Degrees North, which was in A. D. 1764, which includes about one Hundred and Thirty-Six Townships, Six Miles square, which had been granted by the Government of New-Hampshire, antecedent to the aforesaid Extention of the Jurisdiction of New-York. And

WHEREAS the Government of New-York, not satisfied with exercising merely Jurisdiction over those Settlers, they re-granted (in Prejudice to them) to certain over-bearing Attornies, and other favourite Gentlemen that were enterprizing, and which bear great Sway in the Government, large Patents interfering with those Townships, and actual Settlements aforesaid, which hath occasioned great Difficulties, Cost and Disturbances to those Settlers. And a Representation of the Conduct of the Government in the Premises being laid before his Majesty, in Privy Council, who, pursuant to their Advice, was graciously pleased to order the Government of New-York, not to make any Grants interfering with those of New-Hampshire, till his Majesty's Pleasure should be further signified concerning the same. And,

WHEREAS the Government of New-York, have repeatedly violated his Majesty's express Order in re-granting sundry large Tracts of Land contained in and belonging to the prohibited Premises, and have in almost every Instance exercised the Power of Jurisdiction which was delegated to them from the Crown for the Safety and Protection of its Subjects, to ravage from them (the aforesaid Settlers) their Lands and Labours, treating us, those Inhabitants, as Rioters, nay, as Felons, in Consequence of such Tumults, of which themselves were primarily the efficient Cause. And,

WHEREAS, on the 9th Day of March, A. D. 1774, the Legislature of the Province of New-York, did enact twelve particular Acts of OUTLAWRY against us, his Majesty's loyal Subjects, the Inhabitants aforesaid, in Consequence of which mercenary and oppressive Administration, and tyrannical Legislature, those Inhabitants are reduced to a State of Anarchy, and not only so, but are obliged to stand on their Defence; for they are not only denied the civil Privileges of English Subjects, but by the Tenure of the Laws aforesaid, they are liable to be attainted of Felony, and to suffer Death, or Loss of Property, without a Trial. This is repugnant to the most essential Part of the English Constitution, and subversive of its greatest Privilege, namely, that of Trial by Jury. Furthermore, the Consequences resulting from such Legislation, and Administration, hath in great Measure deprived these Inhabitants of the great and inestimable Privileges of Christianity; and if not timely prevented, must inevitably sink their Posterity into a State of Barbarism and Ignorance well fitted for Tenants to the New-York Patentees.¹

And,

WHEREAS this Convention evidently perceive that those Inhabitants cannot any longer subsist in such anarchial Circumstances, and at the same Time hold such a Connection, and maintain such Regulation as is necessary to defend their Persons and Property against the arbitrary and avaricious Designs, and subtle Intrigues of Oppressors, therefore find it necessary to concert some effectual Measures among Ourselves and Constituents, whereby this salutary End may be practicable. Merely Anarchy, with its usual Concomitants, is a difficult and unhappy Condition for so large a Number of People; but add to these negative Evils under which we have so sensibly suffered, for Want of Government, the positive Evils of venal Legislation and Administration, with their usual Concomitants; and take into one complex View, those twelve Acts of Out-Lawry, and the several Proclamations which have been issued from Government,² with large Sums of Money therein offer'd, for the purpose of apprehending our Inhabitants; and that for no other Cause but for their virtuous and public spirited Zeal in manfully ascertaining and defending the natural and legal Rights of the Inhabitants of this District. This Reflection must convince all capable Judges, that both the Lives and Property of our Inhabitants are exposed, and that in the most superlative Degree. This Convention, from these cogent Reasons, and from many others too prolix to be here inserted, are fully persuaded that the extreme Circumstances of our Settlements, lay our Inhabitants under the strongest Necessity of forming in some Measure, into a civil and political Body, for the better ordering and regulating the Community.

THEREFORE, WE, HIS MAJESTY'S LOYAL SUBJECTS, the Representatives aforesaid, in Convention assembled, Do, for Ourselves, and in Behalf of our Constituents, that are settled in those Townships, which were granted by the Government of New-Hampshire, and which are situate to the Westward of the Height of Land called the Green Mountains, and to the Northward of the Province of the Massachusetts-Bay, and on the Rivers Otter-Creek and Onion River, and the Lands contiguous to Lake Champlain, to the Forty-Fifth Degree of Northern Latitude, which are comprehended in those Townships——Do Covenant, and upon the Principles of Honor, Virtue, and Self-Preservation, Enter into a temporary Compact, and on the good Faith of each other, and by Virtue of the Compact thus established, this Convention proceed to make such just and equal Rules, Injunctions, Constitution and Officers as are judged necessary and expedient, for the best Good of the Inhabitants of this District aforesaid.

Always provided, nevertheless, and it is the true Intent and Meaning of this Convention, That provided this, our temporary Compact, (which is solely calculated for the Purpose of present Safety, and to ward off impending Ruin, in so critical a Situation, till his Majesty shall determine our Controversy with the Government of New-York) shall be disagreeable to his Majesty's Pleasure, upon the least Notice thereof, this Convention will immediately desist from upholding the same, and conform to his Majesty's Determination, in all Things. In Witness that this is the temporary Compact of this Convention, with the Condition of the cessation of the same, the Members thereof have hereunto subscribed their Names, the [here blank for the date] and in the Fifteenth Year of his Majesty's Reign. [Here was a blank sufficient for many signatures.]

THE Government of New-York, by their appointment of Men to the Magistracy who inhabit in sundry of those Townships, that are inimical to the Country, evinces that it was not for its Good that they were commissioned, but, on the Contrary, that they might be instrumental of its Destruction; their baneful Influence hath been conspicuous, the Schisms and Divisions they are perpetually making and fomenting among the People, with the help of sundry other sordid Wretches among us, that are still gaping after Titles from New-York, portray their malevolent Designs against their Country, which is to divide and conquer. This is the Merit they expect will ingratiate them into the Favour of a Government that have devoted this Country to Ruin; and let any Persons of common Discerning, only reflect on the Nature and Design of those Acts of Out-Lawry before spoken of, and compare them with the Appointment of these vile Wretches into the Office of Magistrates, and they will discover a premeditated Harmony of Design to run through the Whole. No Effect whatsoever can be more justly ascribed to its Cause, than the Appointment of such Pests of Society to the Rank of Magistrates, by a Government whose Design in framing the Laws, as well as in that of appointing Magistrates, were the same with those of Ahab, King of Israel, who conspired against Naboth the Jezreelite, to kill him, to take Possession of his Vineyard.

It is therefore the resolution of this Convention, That all Officers, of whatsoever Denomination or Rank, more particularly Magistrates that have been commissioned, or any Way authorised by the Government of New-York, which inhabit in any of those Townships which are comprehended in this District, forthwith to surcease such Commission, and wholly renounce such Authority; and they are accordingly, by this Convention, forbid to officiate in the same, on the Penalty of the Resentment of their injured Countrymen.¹ And,

WHEREAS several designing and treacherous Men that inhabit this ¹The following certified copy of a similar resolution, adopted by a Convention holden at Manchester, March 12 and 13 1774, is found in an affidavit of Benjamin Hough of Socialborough [part of Clarendon,] dated Aug. 24 1774.—See Documentary History of New York, Vol. iv, p. 532. This resolution is the only part of the record of that Convention which the editor has been able to find:

Gentlemen the following is proposed whether it be to your minds that any person or persons in the New-Hampshire Grants under the present situation of affairs that have or shall presume to take commission or commissions of the peace shall by the Grantees in general be deemed an Enemy to their Country & Common cause until his Majesty's pleasure in the premises be further known: passed in the Affirmative all yeas & No Nays at a general meeting holden at Manchester 12th Day of April A. D. 1774 and by adjournment to the 13th.

per JONAS FAY Clerk of the said Meeting.

District, have of late been very assiduous in prosecuting and endeavouring to carry into Execution the Design of the Government of New-York, and its Land-Jobbers, in Prejudice to their Fellow-Settlers, thereby to ingratiate themselves into the Favour of that Government, in Order to partake with its Honors, and with them, and their Train of Land-monopolizers, to share a Division of their Neighbour's Possessions and Labours: Therefore, in order to prevent their baneful Influence, this Convention have thought it Expedient to lay an Injunction on every Inhabitant comprehended in this District, not to receive any Commission or Post of Honour or Profit under the Government of New-York, till such Time as that Government obey his Majesty's Orders relative to their Conduct towards the Inhabitants of this District, and till his Majesty shall fully settle the Controversy between those Inhabitants and that Government.¹

AND accordingly, this Convention doth strictly prohibit any Person or Persons whatsoever, that inhabit in any of those Townships comprehended in this District, from receiving any Commission or Commissions, or Post or Posts of either Profit or Honour under the Government of New-York, during such Time as is in the Preamble specified; and the Inhabitants of this District are directed and ordered by this Convention to govern themselves accordingly. And,

WHEREAS Mr. Goldsbrow Banyar and Mr. John Kelley, of the City of New-York, in the Month of September 1774, did make a Tour through a considerable Part of this District, with a Design as is supposed, to divert the People from their true Interest, by propagating Divisions, and deluding the ignorant and unwary by falacious and groundless Representations, and it being conjectured from the highest Ground of probability, that the old Adversaries of those Inhabitants, viz. Mr. James Duane and Mr. John [Taber] Kemp, of the same City were privy to, and assistant Schemers of the aforesaid Intrigues of Banyar and Kelley.² And provided the aforesaid James Duane, John Kemp, Goldsbrow Banyar, and John Kelley, or either of them, shall in future presume to come within this District, it is earnestly recommended by this Convention to any and every of the said Inhabitants, to apprehend ¹The words "the Design of the Government of New-York, and its Land-Jobbers," and "their Train of Land-monopolizers," in the above preamble, furnish Gov. HALL additional evidence pertinent to his controversy with HENRY B. DAWSON, as to the phrase "Land-Traders of New York" in the Vermont petition to Congress of 1776.—See Vermont Historical Society Collections, Vol. II, pp. xi-xiii.

²All these persons were officers or favorites of the New York government; all, also, except Duane, were subsequently tories, though Banyar and Kelly seem to have escaped attainder; and all of them held enormous grants of Vermont land from New York, to wit: Deputy Secretary Banyar, 144,600 acres; Deputy Attorney General Duane, 52,500; John Kelly, 115,119; and Attorney General Kempe a very large amount, though how much is not known. The property of the latter was confiscated by the Whigs, and his name does not appear in the list of claimants to the $30,000 paid by Vermont; nor does Kelly's, as his claim was rejected, partly for the reason that he had compromised with Vermont and received grants of land by its authority.—See H. Hall's Early History of Vermont; and Sabine's Loyalists of the American Revolution, Vol. I.

them or either of them, and safely conduct them or either of them to Bennington, and bring any of them so taken before the Elders of the People, and principal Officers of the GREEN MOUNTAIN BOYS, that they or either of them may be interrogated concerning such Misdemeanors, and be further dealt with as to Justice may appertain. It is furthermore advised that our Inhabitants be much on their Guard, and be wary of Spies and Deceivers. And,

WHEREAS sundry Proclamations have been issued from the Commander in Chief of the Province of New-York, for the Purpose of apprehending sundry of the Inhabitants of this District for no other Cause but for their indefatigable Zeal in defending and maintaining the natural and legal Rights of the Inhabitants thereof, from the Usurpation of the overgrown Land Monopolizers of New-York, who corrupt and sway the Government. And Whereas in the same Proclamations there are large Sums of Money offered for the Purpose aforesaid, together with a special Injunction on all Magistrates, Justices of the Peace, Sheriffs, and other Civil Officers of the Counties of Albany and Charlotte, (which District is included in these Counties,) to be active and vigilant in apprehending those Men;¹ which Injunction they are under the solemnity of an Oath obliged to exert themselves to obey, and as such Magistrates and other Civil Officers which dwell among us have a much better Opportunity to apprehend them than those other Magistrates and Officers in the same Counties who inhabit to the Westward of this District, and not only so, but shew a far greater Propensity for so doing—this being an essential Condition of their Appointment to Office.

THESE Considerations may serve as a further Reason why this Convention have deposed them; for it is their fixed Resolution to defend those Men, though it should be at the Hazard of the Blood and Treasure of the Inhabitants of this District, and by these Presents further certify the Public, that provided any Person or Persons whatsoever, but more particularly the Magistrates and other Civil Officers of the Counties aforesaid presume to apprehend them, they do it on their Peril.—It is nevertheless the Resolution of this Convention, and they earnestly recommend it to the Inhabitants of this District, that they pay Deference and Submission to the Courts as by Law established in both of the Counties of Albany and Charlotte, in which they respectively belong, and to all and singular of the Magistrates in these Counties, which inhabit to the Westward of this District, excepting in such Cases only, wherein the Title of Lands within this District, or Persons indicted as Rioters for defending the Possession thereof are concerned.

AND WHEREAS there hath been received authentic Intelligence that Complaint hath been made against Mr. Lonsingh, Sheriff of the County of Charlotte to the Lieutenant Governor of the Province that he is a Coward, and that Captain [Robert] Cochran frightened him with the Present of an Ink-Horn, (nevertheless it was instead thereof a loaded Pistol.) Mr. Parker at the same time boasting of his Courage, Mr. Lonsingh was dismissed, and Mr. Parker succeeded to the Office of Sheriff, on his great Encouragement to take the Persons aforesaid, pursuant to the Proclamations. And, inasmuch as Mr. Parker hath stipulated to take these Men, and hath succeeded Mr. Lonsingh on this very Condition, and hath thereby declared himself an avowed Enemy not only to them, but also to the Inhabitants of this District in general, who place much Confidence in them. Therefore this Convention advise, provided the said Parker shall presume to come within this District in the character of Sheriff or otherways, that the Inhabitants thereof treat him as an Enemy to the Lives of their best Friends, and to their Property in general, and that in like Manner they would treat any Person or Persons deputed by him, to the End that his Courage in the Premises may be manifested, and the Governor disappointed.

Always provided nevertheless, and it is the true Intent and Meaning of this Convention, Not to hinder, or any Ways molest or impede the Sheriff of the County of Albany or any of his Deputies, or any of the Constables of either of the Counties of Albany or Charlotte, which inhabit to the Westward of this District, in the due Exercise of their Office in the same, except in Cases of Land Disputes, or taking of Rioters, as is before excepted: But on the contrary, it is hereby Resolved, that the Inhabitants aforesaid afford them all the Assistance in their Power when by them requested, as it is presumed they will not attempt to officiate in those Cases excepted to them as aforesaid; in which Cases they are by these Presents absolutely prohibited from officiating in their respective Offices on their Peril.

It is lastly the Resolution of this Convention, that the three principal Officers in each respective Company in the Regiment of GREEN MOUNTAIN BOYS, forthwith muster their Companies, and see that each Soldier be furnished with a good Firelock, and Ball or Buck-Shot answerable, and a good Tomahawk, and hold themselves in Readiness at a Minute's Warning, to maintain inviolable the foregoing Compact and Resolutions of this Convention, until such Time that his Majesty's Pleasure be known concerning the same, or till he shall so exert his Royal Authority as to determine the Controversy, and bring the Government of New-York to a Compliance therewith. And it is the Advice of this Convention that the Laws of Outlawry before eluded [alluded] to should be here inserted, with their Answer, and that sundry of these Pamphlets be distributed to each Town in this District, that the Inhabitants may know and practice agreeable to the Covenant and Resolutions herein specified, and that not only our Inhabitants, but all impartial Readers may perceive that it is not a licentious and riotous Spirit which hath dictated this Convention in their Proceedings: But on the contrary, that Wisdom hath been their Guide, and Self-Preservation their Motive.

Here follow the New York act of out-lawry, of March 9 1774, and the reply thereto by Ethan Allen and the other persons out-lawed, James Breakenridge excepted; for which see Vol. I, pp. 472-482. To the reply, as printed in 1775, was added a nota bene, which was not given in Ethan Allen's Vindication. This was for the benefit of Mr. Breakenridge. It was as follows:

N. B. WHEREAS Mr. James Breakenridge, hath the Honour to be enrolled a Rioter with us we can assure the Public that this worthy Gentleman hath never been concerned with us in any Mob whatsoever; but that he hath relied on a good Providence, and the regal Authority of Great-Britain for the Confirmation of the New-Hampshire Charter: exclusive of all forcible Measures whatsoever.

There are other differences in the two copies, but none of importance.

Maj. Stephen Royce, Vol. I, pp. 15, 23, 26, 287.—Maj. ROYCE came to Tinnmouth in 1774, from Cornwall, Conn. Mrs. B. H. SMALLEY, in a memoir of the Royce family, states that he was an officer in the army of the revolution. He was the father of Stephen Royce, one of the first settlers of Franklin and Berkshire; grandfather of the late Gov. Stephen Royce, and Elihu Marvin Royce, both of Berkshire, and of Hon. Rodney C. Royce of Rutland,—all of whom were brothers; and great grandfather of Hon. Homer E. Royce, formerly of Berkshire, and now of St. Albans, who is a son of Elihu Marvin Royce.—See Vt. Historical Magazine, Vol. II, article “Berkshire.”

Ira Allen, Vol. I, p. 111.—His birth was there given, on the authority of Hon. DAVID READ of Burlington, as of April 21 1751. Mr. ALLEN himself stated the date to be the first day of May.—See his History in Vt. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. I, p. 421. The new style of the calendar was adopted by the British parliament in the year Allen was born, but the act did not go into effect until 1752. One of these different dates must have been of the old style, and the other of the new. The year 1752 being leap year, eleven days were dropped from the old style by order of parliament; whereas if the change had been in the year of Allen’s birth, ten days only would have been dropped, as ordered by Pope Gregory XIII. in 1582. The dropping ten days from April 21 1751 made the 21st of April old style identical with May 1 of the new.

Moses Robinson, Vol. I, p. 128.—The date of his birth should be March 26 1741, instead of 1744.

Doct. Paul Spooner, Vol. I, p. 129.—The statements that Lieut. Gov. SPOONER removed from Hartland to Hardwick and was the first town clerk in 1795, and the first representative in 1797, 1798, and 1799, were made on the authority of B. H. and Hiland Hall’s histories, and were apparently confirmed by the Vt. Historical Magazine, Vol. I, article “Hardwick,” and by Deming’s Catalogue. Lieut. Gov. SPOONER died at Hartland, Sept. 5 1789, and PAUL SPOONER of Hardwick was his second son. This correction is made on the authority of Whipple Spooner, son of the late Paul Spooner of Brandon, who was a nephew of Doct. Paul Spooner.

Doct. Jacob Roback is written Roback, Rhuback, and Ruback in the journals of the Council.—See Vol. I; also Vol. II, p. 21. In one instance his own signature is copied as ROBACK; in another RUBACK. Like variations occur in the Vermont military pay-rolls. He was born near Lubbeck, Prussia, about 1740, was of Swedish descent, and graduated as a doctor of medicine. He volunteered with the Hessian troops who joined Burgoyne’s army at Quebec; but being greatly disappointed at the position assigned to him, the Doctor deserted on the first opportunity and made his way to Connecticut; and from thence as early as August 15 1777 to Vermont, as on that day he was employed as surgeon to the Vermont troops under Gen. Stark. He served as such at the battle of Bennington, and at the subsequent battles with Burgoyne; and March 20 1778,¹ he was appointed surgeon in the service of Vermont, and served as occasation required until the close of the war. From about 1784 he resided in Shelburne, or in Essex or Clinton counties, N. Y., until 1792, when he settled in Grand Isle, and there remained until his death in April 1809. He was eminently skillful in his profession, had many virtues, and one vice, which, the Doctor said, prevailed among the surgeons in both the American and British armies. Rev. Asa Lyon preached the funeral sermon from the text—"Physician, heal thyself;" and in allusion to the Doctor's vice exclaimed, in the words of Shakspeare, "O, that men should put an enemy into their mouths, to steal away their brains!"—See Vt. Historical Magazine, Vol. II, pp. 541, 548.

Col. Seth Warner, Vol. I, p. 160.—The date of his death is Dec. 26 1784. The fact that he was appointed Brigadier General by the Vermont Assembly, March 20 1778, was omitted from the biographical note. Warner was then and afterward in the Continental service, and the design of the Assembly probably was to give him the command of the Vermont troops whenever they acted in conjunction with his Continental regiment.

Rev. Dr. Samuel Williams, Vol. I, pp. 177, 178.—The editor was in doubt whether the pass issued by the Council of Safety, Sept. 22 1777, applied to the Rev. Dr. Williams, inasmuch as it does not appear that he came to Vermont previous to 1788. The pass was probably issued to HON. SAMUEL WILLIAMS, another gentleman of the same name, who came to Rutland as early as 1777; and he it was who held all the civil offices which were assigned to the Rev. Dr. Williams in the biographical note. A biographical notice of the HON. SAMUEL WILLIAMS, by CHAUNCEY K. WILLIAMS, Esq., of Rutland, is reserved for use in the appropriate place.

Joseph Bowker, Vol. I, p. 190.—The date of his death is July 11 1784.

The Lieut. Governor as Maj. General, Vol. I, p. 257.—The note on this subject is correct as far as it goes; but the fact should be added that, by the militia act of Feb. 1779, the post of "Major General of and over all the military forces within" Vermont, was given to the Lieutenant Governor, ex officio.—See Slade's State Papers, p. 305.

Elisha Payne, Vol. I, p. 278.—Lieut. Gov. Payne was not the Capt. Paine referred to. Lieut. Gov. Payne came to New Hampshire from Canterbury, Conn.

Rev. Drs. Samuel and Samuel A. Peters, Vol. I, pp. 403, 404.—The date of the publication of the American edition of Samuel A. Peters's History of Connecticut should be 1829. CHAUNCEY K. WILLIAMS, Esq., of Rutland, in a private letter to the editor, has cited many authorities which apparently prove that the author of the life of Rev. Hugh Peters, and of a History of Connecticut, was the Rev. Dr. SAMUEL PETERS, of Hebron, Conn., and not the Rev. Dr. Samuel A. Peters, the younger, of the same place. Several other authorities might be cited to the same point; yet the editor is persuaded by the latest biographers, DRAKE and ALLIBONE, that Samuel A. Peters of Hebron, Conn., was the author of the books named, and was also the Bishop elect of Vermont; but he is inclined to the opinion that it was the Rev. Dr. Samuel Peters (the eldest of the two reverend doctors of Hebron.) for whom the younger claimed the honor of christening Vermont.—See Vol. I, p. 403. In Samuel A. Peters's history of Connecticut, the Rev. Dr. Samuel Peters is spoken of in terms highly complimentary, and it must be concluded either that the author of the book was a monstrous egotist in so writing of himself, or that his compliments were intended for another—by the Rev. Dr. Samuel A. the younger, for the Rev. Dr. Samuel the elder—both of Hebron, Conn., both clergymen in the Church of England, both Tories in America, and both refugees in England at the same time. The two persons have been doubtless confounded by the extraordinary parallelism in their names, birth-place, residence, profession, and history.

Dartmouth College, Vol. I, pp. 278, 428.—The suggestions as to the interest and influence of the officers and corporators of the college in the union of Western New Hampshire and Vermont, are confirmed by the following unique document:

LANDAFF October 3: 1781.¹

Vol. II, p. 54.—The grant to “Gatesborough” was of the town now named Salem.

Vol. II, p. 55.—For “Major Elijah Buel” in the grant to Coventry, read Major Elias Buel.

Vol. II, p. 76.—“William Cotter” should be Willard Cotter.

Vol. II, p. 81.—In the list of relieved proprietors of Royalton “Peleg Parkhurst” should be Tilly Parkhurst.

Hon. Jonathan Freeman, Vol. II, pp. 96, 295, 299, 302. JONATHAN FREEMAN, of Hanover, N. H., was prominent in the Vermont councils in 1781, and afterward equally so in New Hampshire, where he was a member of the Council from 1789 to 1797, member of Congress, from 1797 to 1801, and one of the trustees and overseers of Dartmouth College. He died in 1808, aged 63 years.

Vol. II, p. 295.—“Mr. John Dunton, Acworth, N. H.,” should be John Duncan.

Vol. II, p. 296, note 1.—“Ebenezer Dewey” should be Ebenezer Dewey jr.

Vol. II, p. 302, fifth line from the top.—“B. Smith” should be Samuel Smith.

Vol. II, p. 323, note 1.—The date of the proceedings referred to should be Oct. 16-19 1781.

Vol. II, p. 368.—“Ichabod Bartlett” should be Josiah Bartlett.

Vol. II, p. 375.—Add to the statement of the second vote in Congress the words Connecticut divided.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

THE editor is obliged to the officers of the State Department at Washington, on the request of Hon. JUSTIN S. MORRILL, for the use of original documents touching Vermont which had never been printed, copies of which have been carefully made by C. L. DANA ; to the officers of the State Department of New Hampshire for copies of several original documents on the Second Union of New Hampshire towns with Vermont, and the consequent collisions of authority; to HENRY L. LAMB, Esq., of Albany, N. Y., for a copy of Gov. Chittenden's Proclamation of July 18 1781; to CHAUNCEY K. WILLIAMS, Esq., of Rutland, and WHIPPLE SPOONER of Burlington, for the correction of errors in the first volume; to the publishers of Miss ABBY MARIA HEMENWAY'S Vermont Historical Magazine, for the use of the engraved plate of IRA ALLEN, and to the historian, BENSON J. LOSSING, for liberty to copy Gov. Hall's history and description of the Catamount Tavern and Vermont Council Chamber, from The American Historical Record.
